COLLECTED RHYMES AND VERSES Walter de la Mare

by Walter de la Mare

×

THE COMPLETE POEMS

PFACOCK PIE

COLLECTED RHYMES AND VERSES

SELFCTED POEMS

SOME STORIES

ANIMAL STORIES

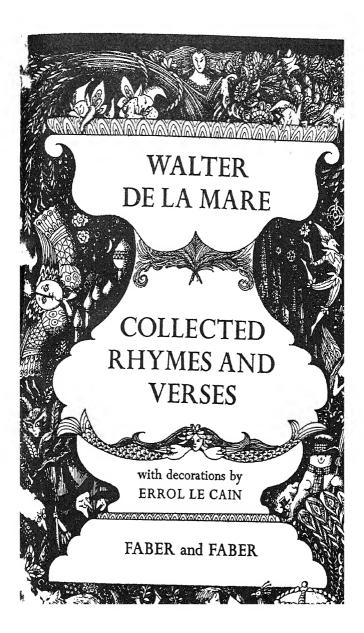

TALES TOLD AGAIN

STORIES FROM THE BIBLE

THE STORY OF JOSEPH

THE THREE ROYAL MONKEYS

COLLECTED STORIES FOR CHILDREN

First published in 1944
by Faber and Faber Limited
3 Queen Square London WC1
Second edition, revised, enlarged and reset, 1970
First published in Faber Paperbacks 1978
Printed and bound in Great Britain by Whitstable Litho Ltd, Whitstable, Kent
All rights reserved

This edition © 1970 by the Literary Trustees of Walter de la Marc

CONDITIONS OF SALE

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form of binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data

De la Mare Walt Colleged rhymes and verses.—2nd ed. 821'.9'12 PZ8.3

ISBN 0-571-04730-0 ISBN 0-571-11157-2 Pbk

NOTE TO SECOND EDITION (1970)

Although Walter de la Mare intended this collection of rhymes and verses to be as complete as possible when it appeared in 1944, a number of rhymes that could have qualified for inclusion were omitted for one reason or another. With the publication of his Complete Poems in 1969, it became clear what these omissions were. It has now been thought an opportune moment to make them good where he would have approved, and also to add a few of the best unpublished and uncollected rhymes from Complete Poems and a few rhymes not specifically written for children that have always been appreciated by them and often included in children's anthologies—like 'The Listeners' and 'Nod'. Fifty-three extra poems have been added altogether, twelve of them having already appeared in Poems for Children (1930).

The contents of the new edition are as follows: Songs of Childhood (1902, 1916) (except 'Cecil'), Peacock Fie (1913, 1924), This Year: Next Year (1937) (except 'Farewell') and Bells and Grass (1941) (except 'Sambo', now omitted); the nine rhymes in The Three Royal Monkeys (1910), eighteen rhymes from Flora (1919), the eight rhymes in Crossings (1921), the five new rhymes in Down-Adown-Derry (1922), three rhymes from Stuff and Nonsense (1927), the two rhymes in Come Hither (1928 edition), the twenty-one new rhymes in Poems for Children (1930) (including 'The Fleeting'), and three uncollected and six unpublished rhymes from Complete Poems (1969); and finally four poems from Poems (1906), six from The Listeners (1912), two from Motley (1918) and three from The Fleeting (1933) (excluding 'The Fleeting').

The ten extra rhymes from This Year: Next Year have been added since it is now felt that de la Mare was wrong in thinking hey were unintelligible apart from their original pictures; while the rhymes written to photographs in A Child's Day (1912) have not been put in, for the opposite reason.

The greater part of de la Mare's interesting introduction to Poems for Children has been included as an appendix on p.307.

The last paragraph of his original note makes a fitting conclusion: 'Most of the volumes here referred to were intended for children—and there is little need to say how ambitious and hazardous any such intention is. Children are unflinching critics. They know usually beyond a doubt what they like, and make no allowances. And that is a chastening reflection. To what degree and in what precise respect the contents of this volume differ from the contents of Collected Poems [1942] are little problems which I will not attempt to explore. Somewhere the two streams divide—and may re-intermingle. Both, whatever the quality of the water, and of what it holds in solution, sprang from the same source. And here, concerning that—nor will I even venture on an Alas—silence is best.'

CONTENTS

GREEN GROW THE RASHES, O!

Fol Dol Do pag	je 19
Daybreak	19
The Four Brothers	20
Five of Us	20
The Rainbow	2 I
The Garden	2 I
The Hunt	22
Off the Ground	23
Bunches of Grapes	26
The Apple Charm	26
Sallie	27
Where?	27
Nicoletta	27
Mary	28
Words	29
Thunder	29
The Shepherd	30
High	30
Away Go We	3 I
Mr. Punch	31
All the Fun	32
Harvest	33
No Bed	33
ALL ROUND ABOUT THE TOWN	1
Then	37
The Fiddlers	37
There Sate Good Queen Bess	38
Kings and Queens	38
Up and Down	39
Daybreak	39
The Window	39
Pooh!	40

The Promenade: 1880 page	je 4.1
Won't	42
The Dunce	43
Not I!	43
The Penny Owing	43
Silly Sallie	44
Bread and Cherries	44
I Can't Abear	44
The Barber's	45
Coals	45
The Room	46
The Cupboard	46
Esmeralda	47
The Little Shop	47
'All Hot'	50
'Please to Remember'	50
The Lamplighter	51
Lovelocks	52
The Comb	52
Sephina	53
Poor 'Miss 7'	55
SOLDIERS: SAILORS:
FAR COUNTRIES: AND THE SEA
The Old Soldier	50
The Portrait of a Warrior	59
The Song of Soldiers	59 60
The Mulgars' Farewell	61
Captain Lean	62
Gone	62
Thames	63
Mermaids	63
The Silver Penny	64
Wild are the Waves	65
The Shellfish	65
Echoes	66
The Sea Boy	66
Bonum Omen	67
The O.M.O.R.E.	67
Andy Battle's Song	60

Andy Battle's and Nod's Song	раде 69
Poor Ben, Old Ben	70
The Picture	71
The Old Sailor	7 I
The Englishman	72
Araby	74
She's Me Forgot	75
Eden	75
Sam	76
The Water Midden's Song	77
Envoy	77
Babel	78
Kings	79
The Lost Shoe	79
The Mulgar Journey Song	80
The Isle of Lone	82
The Horseman	85
Where	85
ALL CREATURES GREAT AND	SMALL
Seeds	89
The Fly	89
Come—Gone	90
Apple-Fall	90
A Widow's Weeds	90
The Harebell	91
The Orchard	91
O Dear Me!	92
The Flower	92
Trees	92
The Wind	93
The Holly	93
Mrs. Earth	94
Precious Stones	95
No Jewel	95
The Pool in the Rock	95
Earth Folk	96
All But Blind	96
Unstooping	96
Shadows	97

Holidays	раде	98
Nicholas Nye		98
The Bandog		99
Tom's Little Dog	I	00
Five Eyes	I	00
Puss	1	01
Comfort	1	01
Supper	I	02
Who Really?	1	02
Master Rabbit	I	03
Hi!	I	04
Done For	1	04
Tit for Tat	I	04
The Grey Wolf	1	05
The Gage	I	05
The Pigs and the Charcoal-Burner	1	o 8
March Hares	I	09
The Ship of Rio	I	10
The Prince	I	11
The Accompaniment	1	13
Ducks	I	13
Quack-hunting	I	15
Chicken	1	16
Grace	I	16
The Mother Bird	1	17
The Thrush	1	17
A Goldfinch	r	1 8
Jenny Wren	1	r 8
The Bird Set Free	I	19
A Warbler	1	19
Tiny Eenanennika	1	9
Crumbs	12	20
The Robin	12	20
The Feather	1:	2 I
Jenny Wren	1 :	2 2
Missel Thrush	1:	2 2
Over the Downs	1:	2 2
The Storm		23
The Border Bird	I.	24
The Scribe	12	25

FAIRIES: WITCHES: PHANTOMS

ci i i
Sleepyhead	page 129
A-Tishoo	130
Bluebells The Burkle	130
The Buckle	130
The Horn	131
The Fairies Dancing	131
Down-Adown-Derry	132
The Bees' Song	134
The Honey Robbers	135
The Three Beggars	136
Berries	¹ 37
The Dwarf	139
Hapless	141
Peak and Puke	141
The Fairy-pedlar's Song	I 4.2
Solitude	142
The Ruin	¹ 43
Never	¹ 43
The Bird	143
Dame Hickory	¹ 44
The Mocking Fairy	145
The Pedlar	145
The Old House	147
Here To-day	¹ 47
Lone	148
As I Went to the Well-head	148
Alulvan	148
The Little Green Orchard	149
The Voice	150
The Stranger	151
The Phantom	152
The Stranger	1 5 3
Haunted	154
The Listeners	154
The Enchanted Hill	155
Will-o'-the-Wisp	157
Some One	1 57
At the Keyhole	158

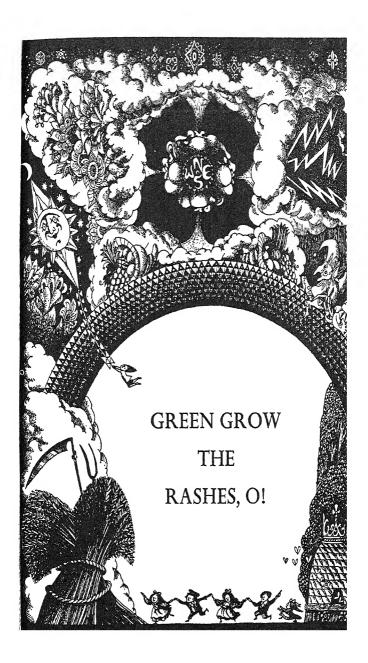

The Old Tallor	page 158
Nothing	159
The Phantom	159
In the Dying of Daylight	162
The House	163
The Old Stone House	164
Misericordia!	164
Bitter Waters	165
The Truants	166
Longlegs	166
The Ogre	167
John Mouldy	169
Crazed	169
The Pilgrim	170
I Saw Three Witches	172
The Witch	173
The Ride-by-Nights	174
As Lucy Went a-Walking	175
The Little Creature	176
Bewitched	177
The Changeling	178
The Coquette	179
A Song of Enchantment	180
Now Silent Falls	180
Melmillo	181
WINTER AND CHRISTMAS	,
White	185
Snow	185
The Snow-man	186
The Fire	187
Logs	187
Caw	188
The Scarecrow	188
The Ghost Chase	189
The Huntsmen	190
The Supper	190
Cake and Sack	192
The Feast	192
Now All the Roads	102

The Snowflake	page	193
Winter		194
lce		195
Nowel		196
Santa Claus		196
The Quartette		197
The Secret		197
Mistletoe		198
BOOKS AND STORIES
The Picture-book		201
The Pantomime		202
Listen!		203
'Suppose'		203
The Miller and his Son		205
The Child in the Story Goes to Bed		206
The Child in the Story Awakes		207
The Sleeping Beauty		208
Reverie		209
King David		209
Then as Now		210
The Old King		210
The Corner		212
Must and May		213
Tillie		214
Sam's Three Wishes: or Life's Little Whirl	igig	215
Pigs		2 2 I
The Thief at Robin's Castle		224
Books		227
The Bookworm		234
Tartary		234
Noon		235
The Song of Finis		236
MOON: AND STARS: NIGH AND DREAM	Т:
Summer Evening		239
Nod		239
Supper		240
Mrs. Macqueen		240

Nightfall	page 24.1
The Raven's Tomb	242
The Night-swans	242
Eeka, Neeka	243
The Horseman	244
The Little Salamander	244
Old Shellover	244
Late	245
The Magnifying Glass	245
The Shadow	246
The Hare	247
Tired Tim	247
To Bed	248
A Lantern	249
Groat nor Tester	249
Hide and Seek	250
Hark!	250
Many a Mickle	251
Song	252
Lully	252
Lullaby	253
She in thy Dreams Watch Over Thee!	² 5 3
I Met at Eve	² 54
The Universe	255
Echo	255
Asleep	256
Silver	256
Dream-Song	257
Rain	² 57
The House of Dream	258
Full Moon	2.58
The Fleeting Wanderers	259
Stars	259
Will Ever?	260
WILL EVEL!	260
ODDS AND ENDS
Mima	263
Alas, Alack!	263
Blindman's In	264
	- 04

Buck Buck	page	264
Singing and Dancing	l a	264
Blackbirds		265
Haymaking		265
Quack!		266
The Tent		266
Jim Jay		267
'Sooeep!'		268
The Faces		268
There was an Old Woman of Bumble Bho	sey	269
A—Apple Pie	•	269
Lob-Lie-by-the-Fire		270
Poor Henry		270
The Glutton		271
Grim		271
Miss Cherry		27 I
Miss T.		272
The Little Old Cupid		273
For Mopsa		274
Mr. Alacadacca		275
Kiph		275
SOMEWHERE
The Little Bird		279
Poor Bird!		279
Me		280
The Christening		280
Two Deep Clear Eyes		282
Dreamland		282
The Double		283
All the Way		283
All That's Past		284
Full Circle		285
The Bead Mat		285
The Playmate		286
Strangers		286
Echo		28J
Why		288
'Willie!'		288
Nobody Knows		289

At Last	page 289
Ever	290
The Sleeper	290
The Funeral	291
Tom's Angel	292
As I did Rove	293
The Path	293
The Mulla-Mulgars' Journey Song	294
Dear Delight	295
Gaze, Now	295
Alas	295
Innocency	296
Divine Delight	296
Envoy	297
The Song of the Secret	297
Under the Rose	298
The Song of Seven	298
Somewhere	299
Where	301
I Dream of a Place	301
Known of Old	302
Arabia	303
Gone	304
The Song of Shadows	304
The Song of the Mad Prince	305
APPENDIX
On Poetry	307
Index of Titles
Index of First Lines	309
OI I HISC LINES	315

FOL DOL DO

[From Crossings]

Fol, dol, do, and a south wind a-blowing O, Fol, dol, do, and green growths a-growing O, Fol, dol, do, and the heart inside me knowing O, 'Tis merry merry month of May.

Fol, dol, do, shrill chanticleer's a-crowing O,
Fol, dol, do, and the mower's soon a-mowing O,
Olovelier than the lilac tree, my lovely love's a-showing O,
In merry merry month of May.

DAYBREAK

After the dark of night Spreads slowly up the glow Into the starry height Of daybreak piercing through.

Now gin the cocks to crow; Runs lapwing, claw and crest; From her green haunt the hare Lopes wet with dew. The east

Gathers its cloudy host Into its soundless pen; Stirring in their warm sleep, Beasts rise and graze again.

Now, with his face on fire, And drenched with sunbeams through, Sam, with his dappled team, Drags out the iron plough. Glistens with drops the grass; Sighing, with joy, the trees Stoop their green leafiness Into the breeze.

Earth's wake now: every heart, Wing, foot, and eye Revels in light and heat: The Sun's in the sky!

THE FOUR BROTHERS

Hithery, hethery — I love best
The wind that blows from out the West,
Breathing balm, and sweet of musk,
Rosy at morning, rosy at dusk.

Wind from the North, Oho, and Oho! Climbs with his white mules laden with snow, Up through the mirk plod muffled by Master and mules through the louring sky.

Wind from the South lags back again With bags of jewels from out of Spain; A hole in the corner, and out they come — May-bud, apple-bud, bramble-bloom.

Black runs the East, with clouted hair, Grim as a spectre through the air, And, with his lash, drives in again Beasts to stall; to their fireside, men.

FIVE OF US

'Five of us small merry ones, And Simon in the grass. Here's an hour for delight, Out of mortal thought and sight. See, the sunshine ebbs away: We play and we play. 'Five of us small merry ones, And yonder there the stone, Flat and heavy, dark and cold, Where, beneath the churchyard mould, Time has buried yesterday: We play and we play.

'Five of us small merry ones, We sang a dirge, did we, Cloud was cold on foot and hair, And a magpie from her lair Spread her motley in the air; And we wept — our tears away: We play and we play.'

THE RAINBOW

I saw the lovely arch Of Rainbow span the sky, The gold sun burning As the rain swept by.

In bright-ringed solitude The showery foliage shone One lovely moment, And the Bow was gone.

THE GARDEN

[For a picture]

That wooden hive between the trees
Is Palace of a Queen — of Bees.
With seed-black eyes, and hidden stings
Sentries, at entry, beat their wings
To cool the night-dark gallery
Where waxen-celled Princesses lie;
And drones — their grubs — sleep snug near by,
While busier bees store honey.

From the bright flowers in the bed —
Ripening pippins overhead —
Some pollen cull to kneed bee-bread,
Or nectar still — for life and love,
Love on both sides, not money.

Soon the two doves in the pale green grass
With whirr of wing
Will airward spring
And perch upon the table;
Then tapping beaks
Will peck the cakes,
And nibble, nibble, nibble;
For no-one's peering from the door
Or peeping from the gable.

THE HUNT

Tallyho! Tallyho! — Echo faints far astray, On the still, misty air, And the Hunt is away! Horsemen and hounds Stream over the hill; And, brush well behind him, Pelts with a will Old Reynard the Fox -As in conscience he may, For hot at his heels Sweep Trim, Trap and Tray; Chestnut, and black And flea-bitten grey But the Crafty One knows Every inch of the way! Thicket and spinney, Gully and dell, Where the stream runs deep, And the otters dwell — Hemlock, garlic,

Bog asphodel —
He'll lead them a dance,
Though they ride like hell.
And — wily old animal,
Cunning as they! —
He'll live — to go hunting —
Another fine day.

OFF THE GROUND

Three jolly Farmers
Once bet a pound
Each dance the others would
Off the ground.
Out of their coats
They slipped right soon,
And neat and nicesome,
Put each his shoon.

One — Two — Three! — And away they go, Not too fast, And not too slow; Out from the elm-tree's Noonday shadow, Into the sun And across the meadow. Past the schoolroom. With knees well bent Fingers a-flicking, They dancing went. Up sides and over, And round and round, They crossed click-clacking, The Parish bound. By Tupman's meadow They did their mile, Tee-to-tum On a three-barred stile.

Then straight through Whipham, Downhill to Week, Footing it lightsome, But not too quick, Up fields to Watchet, And on through Wye, Till seven fine churches They'd seen skip by — Seven fine churches, And five old mills, Farms in the valley, And sheep on the hills; Old Man's Acre And Dead Man's Pool All left behind As they danced through Wool.

And Wool gone by, Like tops that seem To spin in sleep They danced in dream: Withy — Wellover — Wassop - Wo -Like an old clock Their heels did go. A league and a league And a league they went, And not one weary, And not one spent. And lo, and behold! Past Willow-cum-Leigh Stretched with its waters The great green sea.

Says Farmer Bates,
'I puffs and I blows,
What's under the water,
Why, no man knows!'
Says Farmer Giles,
'My wind comes weak,

And a good man drownded Is far to seek.'
But Farmer Turvey,
On twirling toes
Up's with his gaiters,
And in he goes:
Down where the mermaids
Pluck and play
On their twangling harps
In a sea-green day;
Down where the mermaids,
Finned and fair,
Sleek with their combs
Their yellow hair....

Bates and Giles -On the shingle sat, Gazing at Turvey's Floating hat. But never a ripple Nor bubble told Where he was supping Off plates of gold. Never an echo Rilled through the sea Of the feasting and dancing And minstrelsy. They called — called — called: Came no reply: Nought but the ripples' Sandy sigh. Then glum and silent They sat instead, Vacantly brooding On home and bed, Till both together Stood up and said: -'Us knows not, dreams not, Where you be, Turvey, unless

In the deep blue sea;
But axcusing silver —
And it comes most willing —
Here's us two paying
Our forty shilling;
For it's sartin sure, Turvey,
Safe and sound,
You danced us square, Turvey;
Off the ground!'

BUNCHES OF GRAPES

'Bunches of grapes,' says Timothy;
'Pomegranates pink,' says Elaine;
'A junket of cream and a cranberry tart
For me,' says Jane.

'Love-in-a-mist,' says Timothy;
'Primroses pale,' says Elaine;
'A nosegay of pinks and mignonette
For me,' says Jane.

'Chariots of gold,' says Timothy;
'Silvery wings,' says Elaine;
'A bumpity ride in a wagon of hay
For me,' says Jane.

THE APPLE CHARM

I plucked an apple, sleek and red, I took his three black pips, Stuck two upon my cheek, and brow, And t'other on my lips.

Dick on my cheek, the other Tom, But O — my love to be — Robin that couched upon my lip Was truest unto me.

SALLIE

When Sallie with her pitcher goes Down the long lane where the hawthorn blows

For water from the spring,
I watch her bobbing sun-bright hair,
In the green leaves and blossoms there,
Shining and gleaming primrose-fair;
Till back again, like bird on wing,
Her pitcher, brimmed, she turns to bring —
Oh, what a joy to see!

Oh, what a joy to see!
And her clear voice, the birds' above,
Rings sweet with joy, entranced with love —

Ah! would 'twere love for me!

WHERE?

'Where, Oh, where is Alice Bates? And where is Willie Wether?' 'Where the pretty partridge mates, Inches deep in heather. A golden ring he's promised her, A kiss to him she's given, And every breeze that stirs those bells Rings sweet of earth and heaven.'

NICOLETTA

Oh, my pretty Nicoletta, Come away, come away! There's a linnet in the willow, And the moon is up to-day, When the one is sleepy silent And the other wildly clear, I know a hazel thicket Where I'll kiss you, dear. Ah, sweetheart Nicoletta, Come away, come away! There are rabbits in the warren, There is blossom on the may; And when the first are nibbling And the other's cold with dew, I'll tell you tales of magic, And of moonshine, and of you.

Come away, Nicoletta,
Nicoletta-likkalay!
There's a secret I must sigh you
And a hidden thing to say;
Creep out as soon as evening comes,
Not a wink your eyelids close,
And I'll show you where on hills of dream
The wild thyme blows.

MARY

Mary! Mary! Mary! Come to the dairy, please! Give me some butter to spread on my bread, Give me a morsel of cheese. The cows in the meadow are chewing the cud, Some of them deep in the stream -Give me a suppet of curds and whey, Or a wee little bowl of cream! It's half a week since breakfast. And cook won't spare a crumb; Fol-di-diddle-O, starve I shall, Unless, you dear, you come! A hungry wolf's inside me, Though I wouldn't for worlds just tease; Mary! Mary! Mary! Come to the dairy, please!

WORDS

How I love the rhymes that I can dance to, sing to — Sing to, dance to, and echoing with birds! Rhymes that, like bells, the mind may chime and ring to, Elf-bells, steeple-bells — sweet-tongued words.

Stranger than a fiddle they call into the heart, and Silence itself says what speech has never known; But oh, the joy and beauty that a voice may impart, and The twice-sweet pleasure if that voice is one's own!

THUNDER

Call the cows home! Call the cows home! Louring storm clouds Hitherward come; East to West Their wings are spread; Lost in the blue Is each heaven-high head; They've dimmed the sun; Turned day to night; With a whistling wind The woods are white: Down streams the rain On farm, barn, byre, Bright green hill, And bramble and brier, Filling the valley With glimmer and gloom: Call the cows home! Call the cows home!

THE SHEPHERD

When I was out one morning — In a meadow, white with sheep, Lay a shepherd by a haystack Fast asleep.

With me the lark was carolling, There was gold and green and blue; But what, you drowsy shepherd, Was with you?

Was it night and water gushing And moonbeams cold and clear On the softly silver-slipping Dripping weir?

Was it childhood, was it sweetheart, Was it distant isles and seas, Day of Judgment, Harvest Home, or Bread and cheese?

HIGH

Fly, kite!
High!
Till you touch the sky!
Stoop, whistling in the wind;
And whisper down the quivering string
If, as you soar, you find
The world we tread is like a ball —
With mounds for hills, and ponds for seas,
Its oxen small as creeping bees,
Mere bushes its huge trees!

But ah, the dew begins to fall,

The evening star to shine,

Down you must sink to earth again —

An earth, I mean, like mine.

AWAY GO WE

One, two, three, And away go we! Shingle, starfish, Sand, and sea! Wind on cheek, Clear sun on skin; The tumbling waves Sweep out, sweep in.

A magic, broken
Music calls
In the water
As it falls;
Voices, a sigh,
A long-drawn hush,
As back — in myriad
Bubbles — gush
The green-grey ripples,
Flecked with snow —
A music solemn,
Sweet, and low.

MR. PUNCH

[For a picture]

A screech across the sands;
A drum's dull thump;
Oh, wicked Mister Punch,
Hook-nose and hump!
What corpse is this lies here?
An infant dear;
And Judy listening
In grief and fear,
Knowing the Hangman
With his rope draws near!

While lean Dog Toby yawns — Ruff, paws, and tail — And now at starfish blinks, And now at pail.

A screech across the sands!
That sullen thump!
Oh, wicked Mr. Punch,
Belled cap, hook-nose
and hump!

ALL THE FUN

[For a picture]

Here's all the Fun of the Fair! Come buy! Chute, and swing, and a penny a shy!

And the lamps will blaze at night —
The dangling lamps that drip and hiss
Where peppermint, candy and liquorice,
Bull's-eyes, hardbake, coconut-ice,
Are a farthing, or less, a bite.

The gilded organs blare and groan, Jack rides the skewbald, Ruth the roan,

Finger and knee clutched tight.
Giddily galloping on they course...
But who is it sits the little blue horse?
What stranger straddles that dark little horse,
Half hidden out of sight?

And when, all silent, dark, and still
Are tent and tree-top, meadow and hill,
Merry-go-round and man,
When the autumn stars shine faint above,
And the barn owl hoots from her secret grove,
And the shades of night begin to rove,
I wonder what he'll be dreaming of
The gypsy-boy in the Van.

HARVEST

[For a picture]

NO BED

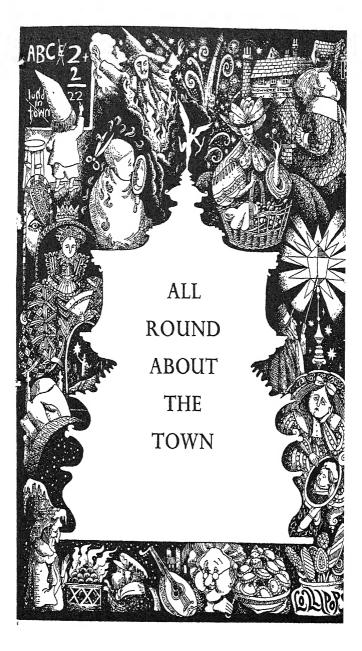

No bed! no bed! we shouted, And wheeled our eyes from home To where the green and golden woods Cried, Come!

Wild sang the evening birds,
The sun-clouds shone in our eyes,
A silver snippet of moon hung low
In the skies.

We ran, we leapt, we sang, We yodelled loud and shrill, Chased Nobody through the valley and Up the hill.

We laughed, we quarrelled, we drank The cool sweet of the dew, Beading on bud and leaf the dim Woods through. We stayed, we listened, we looked— Now dark was on the prowl! Too-whit-a-woo, from its hollow called An owl....

O Sleep, at last to slide Into eyes made drunk with light; Call in thy footsore boys to harmless Night!

THEN

Twenty, forty, sixty, eighty,
A hundred years ago,
All through the night with lantern bright
The Watch trudged to and fro.
And little boys tucked snug abed
Would wake from dreams to hear—
'Two o' the morning by the clock,
And the stars a-shining clear!'
Or, when across the chimney-tops
Screamed shrill a North-East gale,
A faint and shaken voice would shout,
'Three!— and a storm of hail!'

THE FIDDLERS

Nine feat Fiddlers had good Queen Bess
To play her music as she did dress.
Behind an arras of horse and hound
They sate there scraping delightsome sound.
Spangled, bejewelled, her skirts would she
Draw o'er a petticoat of cramasie;
And soft each string like a bird would sing
In the starry dusk of evening.
Then slow from the deeps the crisscross bows,
Crooning like doves, arose and arose.
When, like a cage, did her ladies raise
A stiff rich splendour o'er her ribbed stays,
Like bumbling bees those four times nine
Fingers in melodies loud did pine;

Last came her coif and her violet shoon And her virgin face shone out like the moon: Oh, then in a rapture those three times three Fiddlers squealed shrill on their topmost C.

THERE SATE GOOD QUEEN BESS

[From Crossings]

There sate Good Queen Bess, oh, A-shining on her throne. Up, Jessie; down, docket; My money's gone!

KINGS AND QUEENS

Eight Henries, one Mary, One Elizabeth; Crowned and throned Kings and Queens Now lie still in death.

Four Williams, one Stephen,
Anne, Victoria, John:
Sceptre and orb are laid aside;
All are to quiet gone.
And James and Charles, and Charles's sons—
They, too, have journeyed on.

Three Richards, seven Edwards
Their royal hour did thrive;
They sleep with Georges one to four:
And we praise God for five.

UP AND DOWN

Down the Hill of Ludgate,
Up the Hill of Fleet,
To and fro and East and West
With people flows the street;
Even the King of England
On Temple Bar must beat
For leave to ride to Ludgate
Down the Hill of Fleet.

DAYBREAK

The curtains of the solemn night
Draw back; and daybreak fair
Shines on these tulips cold with dew,
And fills with light the air.
No child stands tiptoe yet to sip
Clear water from the fountain's lip;
Nothing stirs anywhere,
But the birds in the dust, the leaves in the breeze,
The nut-brown squirrels in the trees;
And empty is every chair.

THE WINDOW

Behind the blinds I sit and watch The people passing — passing by; And not a single one can see My tiny watching eye.

They cannot see my little room, All yellowed with the shaded sun, They do not even know I'm here; Nor'll guess when I am gone.

POOH!

Dainty Miss Apathy Sat on a sofa, Dangling her legs, And with nothing to do; She looked at a drawing of Old Queen Victoria, At a rug from far Persia -An exquisite blue; At a bowl of bright tulips; A needlework picture Of doves caged in wicker You could almost hear coo; She looked at the switch That evokes e-Lectricity; At the coals of an age B.C. millions and two -When the trees were like ferns And the reptiles all flew; She looked at the cat Asleep on the hearthrug, At the sky at the window, — The clouds in it, too; And a marvellous light From the West burning through: And the one silly word In her desolate noddle As she dangled her legs, Having nothing to do, Was not, as you'd guess, Of dumbfoundered felicity, But contained just four letters, And these pronounced POOH!

THE PROMENADE

188o

See Master Humphrey, with his mother, Walking in the town In velvet breeches, and his golden Curls streaming down.

His mother is attired in satin, Bonneted in lace; And a smile of mild good breeding Creases her face.

She walks along with fragrant rustle In delicate boots, And 'neath her parasol of lilac

Her friends she salutes.

'There's Mr. Davis, with his daughters, Taking the air;

And see — dear Lady Ann Matilda (Humphrey, don't stare!).

'Why there's the Bishop, in his gaiters, With dear Dr. Fapp;

Poor gentleman, he's very feeble (Humphrey, raise your cap!).

'And Mrs. Sims! — so young a widow; Left very well;

And Captain Howe with his fiancée, Charming Miss Bell.

'I doubt 'twill be the gayest wedding! La, there's Mr. Grey!

And, on his arm, his ailing sister — Beautiful day!'

With Fashion, then, on either pavement, Between twelve and one,

Walk greeting their polite acquaintance Mother and son.

But now they must return to luncheon—
Roast lamb and peas,
New potatoes, tart and custard,
Biscuits and cheese.

WON'T

See, Master Proud-Face!
Cold as a stone;
Light, life, love
From his bright eyes gone;
Pale as a pudding
His smooth round cheek;
His head like a block
On his stiff, wooden neck.

Won't, says his cherry mouth; Won't, says his chin; Won't, says the Spectre, His bosom within; Won't, says his clenched fist; Won't, says his foot; Every single inch of him Shouts, I will NOT!...

Poor, poor Mamma —
She mopes in her room,
Pining and pining
For the moment to come
When her short sharp you SHALL!
She can safely unsay,
And the sun sparkle out,
And the tears dry away;

Yes, her whole heart is sighing In passionate trust For a kiss from those Won'ts To make hay of her Must!

THE DUNCE

Why does he still keep ticking?
Why does his round white face
Stare at mc over the books and ink,
And mock at my disgrace?
Why does that thrush call, 'Dunce, dunce, dunce!'?
Why does that bluebottle buzz?
Why does the sun so silent shine?—
And what do I care if it does?

NOT I!

As I came out of Wiseman's Street, The air was thick with driven sleet; Crossing over Proudman's Square Cold louring clouds obscured the air; But as I entered Goodman's Lane The burning sun came out again; And on the roofs of Children's Row In solemn glory shone the snow. There did I lodge; there hope to die: Envying no man — no, not I.

THE PENNY OWING

Poor blind Tam, the beggar man, I'll give a penny to as soon as I can. Where he stood at the corner in his rags, and cried, The sun without shadow does now abide.

Safe be my penny till I come some day To where Tam's waiting. And then I'll say, 'Here is my ghost, Tam, from the fire and dew, And the penny I grudged kept safe for you.'

SILLY SALLIE

Silly Sallie! Silly Sallie!
Called the boys down Blind Man's Alley;
But she, still smiling, never made
A sign she had heard, or answer gave;
Her blue eyes in her skimpy hair
Seemed not to notice they were there;
Seemed still to be watching, rain or shine,
Some other place, not out, but in:
Though it pleased the boys in Blind Man's Alley
Still to be shouting Silly Sallie!

BREAD AND CHERRIES

'Cherries, ripe cherries!'
The old woman cried,
In her snowy white apron,
And basket beside;
And the little boys came,
Eyes shining, cheeks red,
To buy bags of cherries
To eat with their bread.

I CAN'T ABEAR

I can't abear a Butcher,
I can't abide his meat,
The ugliest shop of all is his,
The ugliest in the street;
Bakers' are warm, cobblers' dark
Chemists' burn watery lights;
But oh, the sawdust butcher's shop,
That ugliest of sights!

THE BARBER'S

Gold locks, and black locks, Red locks, and brown, Topknot to love-curl The hair wisps down; Straight above the clear eyes, Rounded round the ears, Snip-snap and snick-a-snick, Clash the Barber's shears; Us, in the looking-glass, Footsteps in the street, Over, under, to and fro, The lean blades meet; Bay Rum or Bear's Grease, A silver groat to pay — Then out a-shin-shan-shining In the bright, blue day.

COALS

In drowsy fit
I hear the flames
Syllabling o'er
Their ancient names:
The coals — a glory
Of gold — blaze on,
Drenched with the suns
Of centuries gone;
While, at the window,
This rainy day
In darkening twilight
Dies away.

THE ROOM

Pot on the mantel; picture; clock — A naked, marble Cupid — look! And, in the grate, a fire, Whose wild bright flames in pallid smoke Branch higher yet, and higher: A leather pouffe beside a chair, Its cushion striped with blue; A pair of slippers on the kerb; And logs laid ready — two. And see - a portrait hanging there, Dark hair, and darker eyes, Above a pitcher filled with flowers Whose Springlike incense lies In drifts of sweetness on the air -Proving the loved may find That even when they are far from sight They are not out of mind.

THE CUPBOARD

I know a little cupboard, With a teeny tiny key, And there's a jar of Lollipops For me, me, me.

It has a little shelf, my dear, As dark as dark can be, And there's a dish of Banbury Cakes For me, me,

I have a small fat grandmamma, With a very slippery knee, And she's Keeper of the Cupboard, With the key, key, key.

And when I'm very good, my dear, As good as good can be, There's Banbury Cakes, and Lollipops For me, me, me.

ESMERALDA

Plump Mrs. Brown, we may suppose, With basket and umbrella goes Shopping. Why? Because she knows That rain will pelt till dark comes down — On wood and meadow; street and town; That rain's set in till shut of day, And the watery world is hidden away: What use then still indoors to stay?

She sallies out with her small daughter:
These two young urchins following after,
Snailed in as snug as snug can be —
With rainy nose and blinking eye
Jack-boots, sou'wester, cap-à-pie —
Like sailors, in a gale at sea;
And aching fit to burst with laughter
At watching Mrs. Brown forget
Her Esmeralda's getting wet!

THE LITTLE SHOP

[For a picture]

The Whistler on the whistle
Asks a penny — and is gone;
The scampering dog behind the lamp
Hies off to thieve a bone;
'Williams & Sons' at Ninety-two
Stay open — till they are shut,
Sell ball's, bears, boxes, beads and barrows,
Masks and fireworks — BUT:—

The oldest Shop, to the ends of the earth,
Is in Little Old Nowhere Street;
Where rivers of Eden, named Now and Then,
Sing, as their waters meet;
And the ribs of the coracle bleach in the sand
Wherein Nemo, the Sailorman, came to land.

Shem, Ham, Japheth, the wise declare, Found a booth where its bell now clinks;

The sun that gilded Absalom's hair

Through its bottle-glass window blinks; Here a child named Caesar bought lumps of lead — To melt and to mould into soldiers, he said.

An all-sorts shop; where Alfred tasted
His first little sip of mead,
Five years, at least (a child of six),
Before he was taught to read;
Hither came Stephen, hawk on wrist;
In its garden Prince Hal a sweetheart kissed.

A bottle of Iollipops loved by Bess
Stood apart on a window shelf.
When William, her poet, came in as a child,
He smiled, and he helped himself;
And, munching at counter, carved his name
Where little Dan Chaucer had done the same.

Here Raleigh first peered at a Map of the World.
And from over the snow on the wold
A wean, called Francis Bacon, came —
Not a day over six years old,
So parched with the blast, he could scarcely speak:
'I want, so it please you, some books in Greek.'

The two doomed children who asked for bread, Were given, alas, a stone.

Their uncle, whom folk called Crookback, had Sneaked in through the dusk — alone.

'Bird-lime', he mumbled. But Francis Drake Bought marbles; and tackle, a ship to make.

A long-faced prince, not five foot tall,
A Sceptre and Crown bespoke,
But the Crown his dark head failed to fit,
And the golden Sceptre broke.
Another Prince Charlie, with ringleted hair,
Chose beads — for a lassie he loved to wear.

A huge black cat on the counter drowsed
In the sunshine, hot through the glass,
Blinking his yellow eyes, narrow as slits,
At the geese outside in the grass,
When he spied a boy, his face like a hawk's,
Who in for a penn'orth of powder stalks,
And muttered, 'My ''name''?' Tis Fawkes.'

Dolls, knives, string, and things to eat —
Ginger-bread, buns, mince-pie,
Cram that bottle-glass window in Nowhere Street,
Enticing the passer-by.
Not a child in the world but has flattened its nose
On its panes, gazing in, its small face in a muse,
Pining, wondering what to choose —
From Helen of Troy down to Margaret Rose. . . .

Nights in summer — how wan her stars!

Her dark — how brief, and sweet!

Voices, past human wits to follow,

Are heard where those waters meet.

The song of the bird in the silent hills

Into the moonshine rills.

Old as they is that dark little house;
But little a child can need
Is not to be bought there, for pennies, or love;
And in gilded, outlandish screed,
Over its shutters — as if to rhyme! —
Is the name of the Shop-keeper — TIME.

'ALL HOT'

[The Chestnut Man]

Brooding he stands,
And warms his hands
In this chill moonlit spot;
Cold to his feet
Is the cobbled street
And cold the north wind blows.
But his fire of coke.—

But his fire of coke — Like rubies, look,

In Ali Baba's grot! — Glows still and clear: And children hear —

As dancing home from school they near — His, 'Chestnuts! Hot! All hot!'

That dog, called Jinks, who quietly blinks, While toasting back and side,
Sits on in silence while he thinks,
And can at need decide!
He loves his slim Jemima,
But his collar can't abide.

So, one dark eye on her small thumb,
He waits his moment, sure to come,
When, tail and lead behind him,
With yelp of rapture off he goes,
Where nothing but his own sharp nose
Can ever hope to find him!

'PLEASE TO REMEMBER'

Here am I, A poor old Guy: Legs in a bonfire, Head in the sky;

Shoeless my toes, Wild stars behind, Smoke in my nose, And my eye-peeps blind; Old hat, old straw — In this disgrace; While the wildfire gleams On a mask for face.

Ay, all I am made of Only trash is; And soon — soon, Will be dust and ashes.

THE LAMPLIGHTER

When the light of day declineth, And a swift angel through the sky Kindleth God's tapers clear, With ashen staff the lamplighter Passeth along the darkling streets To light our earthly lamps;

Lest, prowling in the darkness, The thief should haunt with quiet tread, Or men on evil errands set; Or wayfarers be benighted; Or neighbours bent from house to house Should need a guiding torch.

He is like a needlewoman
Who deftly on a sable hem
Stitches in gleaming jewels;
Or, haply, he is like a hero,
Whose bright deeds on the long journey
Are beacons on our way.

And when in the East cometh morning, And the broad splendour of the sun, Then, with the tune of little birds Ringing on high, the lamplighter Passeth by each quiet house, And putteth out the lamps.

LOVELOCKS

I watched the Lady Caroline
Bind up her dark and beauteous hair;
Her face was rosy in the glass,
And 'twixt the coils her hands would pass,
White in the candleshine.

Her bottles on the table lay,
Stoppered, yet sweet of violet;
Her image in the mirror stooped
To view those locks as lightly looped
As cherry-boughs in May.

The snowy night lay dim without,
I heard the Waits their sweet song sing;
The window smouldered keen with frost;
Yet still she twisted, sleeked and tossed
Her beauteous hair about.

THE COMB

My mother sate me at her glass; This necklet of bright flowers she wove; Crisscross her gentle hands did pass, And wound in my hair her love.

Deep in the mirror our glances met, And grieved, lest from her care I roam, She kissed me through her tears, and set On high this spangling comb.

SEPHINA

Black lacqueys at the wide-flung door
Stand mute as men of wood.
Gleams like a pool the ball-room floor —
A burnished solitude.
A hundred waxen tapers shine
From silver sconces; softly pine
'Cello, fiddle, mandoline,
To music deftly wooed —
And dancers in cambric, satin, silk,
With glancing hair and cheeks like milk,
Wreathe, curtsey, intertwine.

The drowse of roses lulls the air That's wafted up the marble stair. Like warbling water clucks the talk. From room to room in splendour walk Guests, smiling in the silken sheen; Carmine and azure, white and green, They stoop and languish, pace and preen Bare shoulder, painted fan, Gemmed wrist and finger, neck of swan; And still the plucked strings warble on; Still from the snow-bowered, link-lit street The muffled hooves of horses beat; And harness rings; and foam-flecked bit Clanks as the slim heads toss and stare From deep, dark eyes. Smiling, at ease, Mount to the porch the pomped grandees In lonely state, by twos, and threes, Exchanging languid courtesies, While torches fume and flare.

And now the banquet calls. A blare Of squalling trumpets clots the air; And, flocking out, streams up the rout; And lilies nod to velvet's swish. And peacocks prim on gilded dish, Vast pies thick-glazed, and gaping fish,

Towering confections crisp as ice, Jellies aglare like cockatrice, With thousand savours tongues entice. Fruits of all hues, too, shape and bloom — Pomegranate, quince and peach and plum, Nectarine, grape, and cherry clear And knotted pine — each leaf a spear . . .

And lo! — 'La, la! Mamma, mamma! More marvellous lovely than a star I see you standing there! ...' 'Fie, fie Sephina! not in bed!' Couched on the staircase overhead Like ghost she gloats, her lean hand laid On alabaster balustrade, And gazes on and on; Down on that wondrous to and fro Till finger and foot are cold as snow And half the night is gone; And dazzled eyes are sore bestead, Nods drowsily the sleek-locked head: And, faint and far, spins, fading out That rainbow-coloured, reeling rout And, with faint sighs, her spirit flies Into deep sleep. . . . Come, Stranger, peep! Was ever cheek so wan?

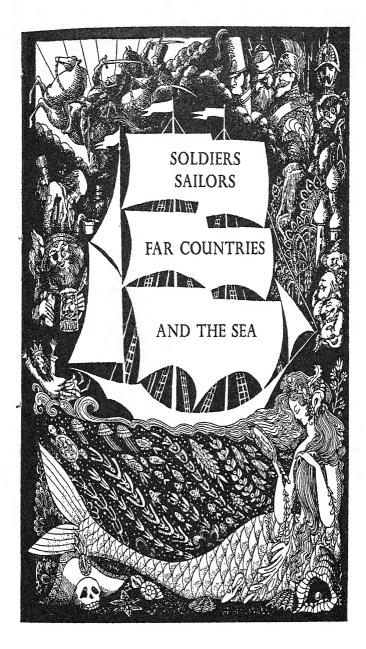

POOR 'MISS 7'

Lone and alone she lies,
Poor Miss 7,
Five steep flights from the earth,
And one from heaven;
Dark hair and dark brown eyes, —
Not to be sad she tries,
Still — still it's lonely lies
Poor Miss 7.

One day-long watch hath she,
Poor Miss 7,
Not in some orchard sweet
In April Devon, —
Just four blank walls to see,
And dark come shadowily,
No moon, no stars, ah me!
Poor Miss 7.

And then to wake again,
Poor Miss 7,
To the cold night — to have
Sour physic given —
Out of some dream of pain;
Then strive long hours in vain
Deep dreamless sleep to gain:
Poor Miss 7.

Yet memory softly sings
Poor Miss 7
Songs full of love and peace
And gladness even;
Clear flowers and tiny wings,
All tender, lovely things,
Hope to her bosom brings —
Happy Miss 7.

THE OLD SOLDIER

There came an Old Soldier to my door, Asked a crust, and asked no more; The wars had thinned him very bare, Fighting and marching everywhere, With a Fol rol dol rol di do.

With nose stuck out, and cheek sunk in,
A bristling beard upon his chin —
Powder and bullets and wounds and drums
Had come to that Soldier as suchlike comes —
With a Fol rol dol rol di do.

'Twas sweet and fresh with blossoming May, Flowers springing from every spray; And when he had supped the Old Soldier trolled The song of youth that never grows old, Called Fol rol dol rol di do.

Most of him rags, and all of him lean,
And the belt round his belly drawn tightly in,
He lifted his peaked old grizzled head,
And these were the very words he said —
A Fol-rol-dol-rol-di-do.

THE PORTRAIT OF A WARRIOR

His brow is seamed with line and scar; His cheek is red and dark as wine; The fires as of a Northern star Beneath his cap of sable shine. His right hand, bared of leathern glove, Hangs open like an iron gin, You stoop to see his pulses move, To hear the blood sweep out and in.

He looks some king, so solitary
In earnest thought he seems to stand,
As if across a lonely sea
He gazed impatient of the land.

Out of the noisy centuries
The foolish and the fearful fade;
Yet burn unquenched these warrior eyes,
Time hath not dimmed nor death dismayed.

THE SONG OF SOLDIERS

As I sat musing by the frozen dyke, There was one man marching with a bright steel pike, Marching in the dayshine like a ghost came he, And behind me was the moaning and the murmur of the sea.

As I sat musing, 'twas not one but ten — Rank on rank of ghostly soldiers marching o'er the fen, Marching in the misty air they showed in dreams to me, And behind me was the shouting and the shattering of the sea.

As I sat musing, 'twas a host in dark array, With their horses and their cannon wheeling onward to the fray, Moving like a shadow to the fate the brave must dree, And behind me roared the drums, rang the trumpets of the sea.

THE MULGARS' FAREWELL

[From The Three Royal Monkeys]

Far away in Nanga-noon Lived an old and grey Baboon, Ah-mi, Sulâni! Once a Prince among his kind, Now forsaken, left behind, Feeble, lonely, all but blind: Sulâni, ghar magleer.

Peaceful Tishnar came by night, In the moonbeams cold and white; Ah-mi, Sulâni! 'Far away from Nanga-noon, Old and lonely, gray Baboon; Is a journey for thee soon! Sulâni, ghar magleer.

'Be not frightened, shut thine eye; Comfort take, nor weep, nor sigh; Solitary Tishnar's nigh!' Sulâni, ghar magleer.

Old Baboon, he gravely did All that peaceful Tishnar bid; Ah-mi, Sulâni! In the darkness cold and grim Drew his blanket over him; Closed his old eyes, sad and dim: Sulâni, ghar magleer.

Talaheeti sul magloon Olgar, ulgar Manga-noon; Ah-mi, Sulâni! Tishnar sootli maltmahee, Ganganareez soongalee, Manni Mulgar sang suwhee: Sulâni, ghar magleer.

CAPTAIN LEAN

Out of the East a hurricane
Swept down on Captain Lean —
That mariner and gentleman
Will not again be seen.

He sailed his ship against the foes Of his own country dear, But now in the trough of the billows An aimless course doth steer.

Powder was violets to his nostrils, Sweet the din of the fighting-line, Now he is flotsam on the seas, And his bones are bleached with brine.

The stars move up along the sky,
The moon she shines so bright,
And in that solitude the foam
Sparkles unearthly white.

This is the tomb of Captain Lean, Would a straiter please his soul? I trow he sleeps in peace, Howsoever the billows roll!

GONE

Bright sun, hot sun, oh, to be
Where beats on the restless sea!
To hear the sirens of the deep
Chaunting old Ocean's floods to sleep!
And shadowed wave to sunlit wave
Call from the music-haunted cave!
There, with still eyes, their watch they keep,
While, at horizon mark, a ship,
With cloudlike sails glides slowly on,
Smalls, vanishes, is gone.

THAMES

There flows a wonderful water
Where lofty vessels glide
To take up their home-come stations
By the dark wharves' side.
And their masts tip up over the roofs,
With their lean long pennons a-blow,
While ant-like the men on the stones of the quay
Swarm to and fro.
And their spars lean slant on the sky,
And strange are the sounds of their names,
Gilded on counters afloat from remote
Sea-havens to Thames.

MERMAIDS

Leagues, leagues over The sea I sail Couched on a wallowing Dolphin's tail: The sky is on fire The waves a-sheen; I dabble my foot In the billows green.

In a sea-weed hat On the rocks I sit Where tern and sea-mew Glide and beat, Where dark as shadows The cormorants meet.

In caverns cool
When the tide's a-wash,
I sound my conch
To the watery splash.

From out their grottoes At evening's beam The mermaids swim With locks agleam

To where I watch On the yellow sands; And they pluck sweet music With sea-cold hands.

They bring me coral And amber clear; But when the stars In heaven appear Their music ceases, They glide away, And swim to their grottoes Across the bay.

Then listen only
To my shrill tune
The surfy tide,
And the wandering moon.

THE SILVER PENNY

'Sailorman, I'll give to you My bright silver penny, If out to sea you'll sail me And my dear sister Jenny.'

'Get in, young sir, I'll sail ye And your dear sister Jenny, But pay she shall her golden locks Instead of your penny.'

They sail away, they sail away, O fierce the winds blew! The foam flew in clouds And dark the night grew! And all the green sea-water
Climbed steep into the boat;
Back to the shore again
Sail they will not.

Drowned is the sailorman,
Drowned is sweet Jenny,
And drowned in the deep sea
A bright silver penny.

WILD ARE THE WAVES

Wild are the waves when the wind blows; But fishes in the deep Live in a world of waters, Still as sleep.

Wild are the skies when Winter Roars at the doors of Spring; But when his lamentation's lulled Then sweet birds sing.

THE SHELLFISH

Here I saw the mist roll inland
Where the green brakes cease to stand,
Where the meadows turn to marshes
And the marshes change to sand;
Where the wash of mighty waters
Sliding back from off the shore
Sends a curious moaning echo
Mingling strangely with the roar.
Here I thought I heard the shellfish
As they danced in boisterous glee
Come by scampering, rejoicing
Mid the beating of the sea.

ECHOES

The sea laments
The livelong day,
Fringing its waste of sand;
Cries back the wind from the whispering shore—
No words I understand:

Yet echoes in my heart a voice, As far, as near, as these— The wind that weeps, The solemn surge Of strange and lonely seas.

THE SEA BOY

Peter went - and nobody there -Down by the sandy sea, And he danced a jig, while the moon shone big, All in his lone danced he; And the surf splashed over his tippeting toes, And he sang his riddle-cum-ree, With hair a-dangling, Moon a-spangling The bubbles and froth of the sea. He danced him to, and he danced him fro, And he twirled himself about, And now the starry waves tossed in, And now the waves washed out; Bare as an acorn, bare as a nut, Nose and toes and knee. Peter the sea-boy danced and pranced, And sang his riddle-cum-ree.

BONUM OMEN

As we sailed out of London river,

Sing a lo lay and a lo lay lone,
I heard a Maid sing — 'Come back, never!'

And a lo lay lone.

Her hair was yellow as sea-maids' hair is,

Sing a lo lay and a lo lay lone,

And she'd corn for the chicks that are Mother Carey's;

And a lo lay lone.

Sam Murphy's grog went cold as water,
Sing a lo lay and a lo lay lone,
And our hearts to our boots went tumbling after:
And a lo lay lone.

When we're there and back — by gum, we'll see her.

Sing a lo lay and a lo lay lone,

Buy cheap she may, but she sells de-ar:

And a lo lay lone.

THE O.M.O.R.E.

'Tis years fourscore
Since Rory O'More —
He and his brothers three,
Patrick, Seumas, and Timothy Tim,
With the Pole Star shining free,
Sailed with a sail, and an oar for a rudder,
Bound for an Unknown Sea.

Bound for that Unknown Sea forlore Mariners many have sailed before; Into the evening mist they swing, Daring what ever the dark may bring; And so went Timothy, Seumas and Pat, Each with a sprig of yew in his hat, And so sailed Rory O'More. Sailed... But a wind came out of the cloud, Piping shrill and long and loud, Smote on their boat as they did float, Stretched their cloaks on the stoop o' the wave, Violet, azure, and green-grass-green, And Rory's of scarlet brave; Tossed them adrift on the foam of the main; Bowed on them, fawned on them, bowed again, Roared them to slumber, deep, serene, Made of their sail their shroud...

Yet still 'tis whispered and still 'tis said That fishermen weary and sore bestead, Hauling their nets on the watery deep, Numb with the cold and half asleep, Will lift their eyes from the spray and spy Ghosts in the glint of the moon pass by -Phantoms four of the name of O'More, Lifting their heads they see -Patrick, Seumas, and Timothy Tim, And Rory walking free, Arm in arm where the petrels skim, Over the billow's hissing rim, Swinging their feet through the surge they go, Four jolly ghosts in a glimmering row, Four abreast, and nodding their heads, Walking the waves these ghostly lads, Haunting the wind with their voices four, Timothy, Patrick, Seumas and Ror — Rory O'More.

Striding the sea-drifts leagues from shore, Ghosts of his brothers and Rory O'More Fishermen white In that haze of light Dazed with its radiance, see, And sigh in a breath, Their beards beneath, 'See! there! — the O.M.O.R.E! We have seen the O.M.O.R.E!'

ANDY BATTLE'S SONG

[From The Three Royal Monkeys]

Voice without a body,
Panther of black Roses,
Jack-Alls fat on icicles,
Ephelanto, Aligatha,
Zevvera and Jaccatray,
Unicorn and River-horse;
Ho, ho, ho!
Here's Andy Battle,
Waiting for the enemy!

Imbe Calandola,
M'keesso and Quesanga,
Dondo, Sharamomba,
Pongo and Enjekko,
Millions of monkeys,
Rattlesnake and scorpion,
Swamp and death and shadow;
Ho, ho, ho!
Come on, all of ye,
Here's Andy Battle,
Waiting and — alone!

ANDY BATTLE'S AND NOD'S SONG

[From The Three Royal Monkeys]

Once and there was a young sailor, yeo ho!

And he sailed out over the say

For the isles where pink coral and palm-branches blow,

And the fire-flies turn night into day,

Yeo ho!

And the fire-flies turn night into day.

But the Dolphin went down in a tempest, yeo ho!
And with three forsook sailors ashore,
The Portingals took him where sugar-canes grow,
Their slave for to be evermore,
Yeo ho!
Their slave for to be evermore.

With his musket for mother and brother, yeo ho!
He warred wi' the Cannibals drear,
In forests where panthers pad soft to and fro,
And the Pongo shakes noonday with fear,
Yeo ho!
And the Pongo shakes noonday with fear.

Now lean with long travail, all wasted with woe, With a monkey for messmate and friend, He sits 'neath the Cross in the cankering snow, And waits for his sorrowful end,

Yeo ho!

And waits for his sorrowful end.

POOR BEN, OLD BEN

[Nod's song, from The Three Royal Monkeys]

Wi'decks awas'
Widevry sea,
An' flyin' scud
For companee,
Ole Ben, por Ben
Keepz watcherlone:
Boatz, zails, helmainmust,
Compaz gone.

Not twone ovall 'Is shippimuts can Pipe pup ta prove 'Im livin' man: One indescuppers Flappziz 'and, Fiss-like, as you May yunnerstand.

An' one bracedup Azzif to weat, 'Az aldy deck For watery zeat; Andwidda zteep Unwonnerin' eye Stares zon tossed sea An' emputy zky. Pore Benoleben, Pore-Benn-ole-Ben!

THE PICTURE

Here is a sea-legged sailor,
Come to this tottering inn,
Just when the bronze on its signboard is fading,
And the black shades of evening begin.
With his head on his paws sleeps a sheepdog,
There stoops the shepherd, and see,
All follow-my-leader the ducks waddle homeward,
Under the sycamore tree.

Burned brown is the face of the sailor;
His bundle is crimson; and green
Are the thick leafy boughs that hang dense o'er the tavern;
And blue the far meadows between.

But the crust, ale and cheese of the sailor,
His mug and his platter of Delf,
And the crescent to light home the shepherd and sheepdog
The painter has kept to himself.

THE OLD SAILOR

There came an old sailor Who sat to sup Under the trees Of the Golden Cup.

Beer in a mug And a slice of cheese With a hunk of bread He munched at his ease.

Then in the summer Dusk he lit A little black pipe, And sucked at it.

He thought of his victuals, Of ships, the sea, Of his home in the West, And his children three.

And he stared and stared To where, afar, The lighthouse gleamed At the harbour bar;

Till his pipe grew cold, And down on the board He laid his head, And snored, snored, snored.

THE ENGLISHMAN

I met a sailor in the woods,
A silver ring wore he,
His hair hung black, his eyes shone blue,
And thus he said to me:—

'What country, say, of this round earth, What shore of what salt sea, Be this, my son, I wander in, And looks so strange to me?'

Says I, 'O foreign sailorman, In England now you be, This is her wood, and there her sky, And that her roaring sea.'

He lifts his voice yet louder,

'What smell be this,' says he,

'My nose on the sharp morning air

Snuffs up so greedily?'

Says I, 'It is wild roses
Do smell so winsomely,
And winy briar too,' says I,
'That in these thickets be.'

'And oh!' says he, 'what leetle bird Is singing in yon high tree, So every shrill and long-drawn note Like bubbles breaks in me?'

Says I, 'It is the mavis
That perches in the tree,
And sings so shrill, and sings so sweet,
When dawn comes up the sea.'

At which he fell a-musing,
And fixed his eye on me,
As one alone 'twixt light and dark
A spirit thinks to see.

'England!' he whispers soft and harsh, 'England!' repeated he, 'And briar, and rose, and mavis, A-singing in yon high tree.

'Ye speak me true, my leetle son, So — so, it came to me, A-drifting landwards on a spar, And grey dawn on the sea.

'Ay, ay, I could not be mistook;
I knew them leafy trees,
I knew that land so witchery sweet,
And that old noise of seas.

'Though here I've sailed a score of years, And heard 'em, dream or wake, Lap small and hollow 'gainst my cheek, On sand and coral break;

"Yet now," my leetle son, says I, A-drifting on the wave, That land I see so safe and green Is England, I believe.

"And that there wood is English wood, And this here cruel sea, The selfsame old blue ocean Years gone remembers me, "'A-sitting with my bread and butter Down behind yon chitterin' mill; And this same Marinere" — (that's me), "Is that same leetle Will!—

""That very same wee leetle Will Eating his bread and butter there, A-looking on the broad blue sea Betwixt his yaller hair!"

'And here be I, my son, throwed up Like corpses from the sea, Ships, stars, winds, tempests, pirates past, Yet leetle Will I be!'

He said no more, that sailorman, But in a reverie Stared like the figure of a ship With painted eye to sea.

ARABY

[From Crossings]

'Dark-browed Sailor, tell me now, Where, where is Araby? The tide's aflow, the wind ablow, 'Tis I who pine for Araby.'

'Master, she her spices showers O'er nine and ninety leagues of sea; The laden air breathes faint and rare — Dreams on far-distant Araby.'

'Oh, but Sailor, tell me true;
'Twas Man who mapped this Araby;
Though dangers brew, let me and you
Embark this night for Araby....'

Wails the wind from star to star; Rock the loud waves their dirge: and, see! Through foam and wrack, a boat drifts back: Ah, heart-beguiling Araby!

SHE'S ME FORGOT

[From The Three Royal Monkeys]

Me who have sailed
Leagues across
Foam haunted
By the albatross,
Time now hath made
Remembered not:
Ay, my dear love
Hath me forgot.

Oh, how should she,
Whose beauty shone,
Keep true to one
Such long years gone?
Grief cloud those eyes! —
I ask it not:
Content am I —
She's me forgot.

Here where the evening Ooboë wails, Bemocking England's nightingales, Bravely, O sailor, Take thy lot; Nor grieve too much, She's thee forgot!

EDEN

I wonder if from Noah's Ark
Ever was heard the bobtail's bark.
If ever o'er the empty Flood
Our English ash-boughs stood in bud.
'Tis sure when Eve and Adam sate
Smiling within green Eden's gate
And gave its birds, beast, fishes, names
Somewhere flowed clear our English Thames.

And when they both in woe were driven Beyond the shining bounds of heaven, Simply for grief that outcast morn Broke into bloom our English thorn. And — far from Eden — our nightingale Did their sad banishment bewail: While we, asleep within her dust, Hearkened — as all poor humans must.

SAM

When Sam goes back in memory, It is to where the sea Breaks on the shingle, emerald-green In white foam, endlessly; He says — with small brown eye on mine — 'I used to keep awake, And lean from my window in the moon, Watching those billows break. And half a million tiny hands, And eyes, like sparks of frost, Would dance and come tumbling into the moon, On every breaker tossed. And all across from star to star, I've seen the watery sea, With not a single ship in sight, Just ocean there, and me; And heard my father snore . . . And once, As sure as I'm alive, Out of those wallowing, moon-flecked waves I saw a mermaid dive: Head and shoulders above the wave, Plain as I now see you. Combing her hair, now back, now front, Her two eyes peeping through; Calling me, "Sam!" — quietlike — "Sam!" . . . But me . . . I never went, Making believe I kind of thought 'Twas someone else she meant . . .

Wonderful lovely there she sat,
Singing the night away,
All in the solitudinous sea
Of that there lonely bay.
P'raps,' and he'd smooth his hairless mouth,
'P'raps, if 'twere now, my son,
P'raps, if I heard a voice say, "Sam!"...
Morning would find me gone.'

THE WATER MIDDEN'S SONG

[From The Three Royal Monkeys]

Bubble, Bubble, Swim to see Oh, how beautiful I be.

Fishes, Fishes, Finned and fine, What's your gold Compared with mine?

Why, then, has Wise Tishnar made One so lovely One so sad?

Lone am I, And can but make A little song, For singing's sake.

ENVOY

[From The Three Royal Monkeys]

Long — long is Time, though books be brief; Adventures strange — ay, past belief — Await the Reader's drowsy eye; But, wearied out, he'd lay them by. But, if so be, he'd some day hear All that befell these brothers dear In Tishnar's lovely Valleys — well, Poor pen, thou must that story tell!

But farewell, now, you Mulgars three!
Farewell, your faithful company!
Farewell, the heart that loved unbidden —
Nod's dark-eyed, beauteous Water-midden!

BABEL

The sea washes England, Where all men speak A language rich As ancient Greek.

The wide world over Man with man Has talked his own tongue Since speech began.

Yet still must sorrow Move the mind, He understands But his own kind.

The voices lovely, Hollow, drear, Of beast and bird Beat on his ear:

Eye into eye Gaze deep he may; Yet still through Babel Gropes his way.

KINGS

King Canute
Sat down by the sea,
Up washed the tide
And away went he.

Good King Alfred Cried, 'My sakes! Not five winks, And look at those cakes!'

Lackland John
Were a right royal Tartar
Till he made his mark
Upon Magna Carta:

Ink, seal, table,
On Runnymede green,
Anno Domini
12-15.

THE LOST SHOE

Poor little Lucy By some mischance, Lost her shoe As she did dance: 'Twas not on the stairs, Not in the hall; Not where they sat At supper at all. She looked in the garden, But there it was not; Henhouse, or kennel, Or high dovecote. Dairy and meadow, And wild woods through Showed not a trace Of Lucy's shoe.

Bird nor bunny Nor glimmering moon Breathed a whisper Of where 'twas gone. It was cried and cried, Oyez and Oyez! In French, Dutch, Latin And Portuguese. Ships the dark seas Went plunging through, But none brought news Of Lucy's shoe; And still she patters, In silk and leather. Snow, sand, shingle, In every weather; Spain, and Africa, Hindustan, Java, China, And lamped Japan, Plain and desert. She hops — hops through, Pernambuco To gold Peru; Mountain and forest, And river too, All the world over For her lost shoe.

THE MULGAR JOURNEY SONG

[From The Three Royal Monkeys]

In Munza a Mulgar once lived alone, And his name it was Dubbuldideery, O; With none to love him, and loved by none, His hard old heart it grew weary, O, Weary, O weary, O weary. So he up with his cudgel, he on with his bag Of Manaka, Ukkas, and Keeri, O; To seek for the waters of 'Old-Made-Young', Went marching old Dubbuldideery, O, Dubbuldi-dubbuldi-deery.

The sun rose up, and the sun sank down;
The moon she shone clear and cheery, O,
And the myriads of Munza they mocked and mopped
And mobbed old Dubbuldideery, O,
Môh-Mulgar Dubbuldideery.

He cared not a hair of his head did he,
Not a hint of the hubbub did hear he, O,
For the roar of the waters of 'Old-Made-Young'
Kept calling of Dubbuldideery, O,
Call — calling of Dubbuldideery.

He came to the country of 'Catch Me and Eat Me' —
Not a fleck of a flicker did fear he, O,
For he knew in his heart they could never make mince-meat
Of tough old Dubbuldideery, O,
Rough, tough, gruff Dubbuldideery.

He waded the Ooze of Queen Better-Give-Up, Dim, dank, dark, dismal, and dreary, O, And, crunch! went a leg down a Cockadrill's throat 'What's one?' said Dubbuldideery, O, Undauntable Dubbuldideery.

He cut him an Ukka crutch, hobbled along,
Till Tishnar's sweet river came near he, O—
The wonderful waters of 'Old-Made-Young,'
A-shining for Dubbuldideery, O,
Wan, wizened old Dubbuldideery.

He drank, and he drank — and he drank — and he — drank:
No more was he old and weary, O,
But weak as a babby he fell in the river,
And drownded was Dubbuldideery, O,
Drown-ded was Dubbuldideery!

THE ISLE OF LONE

Three dwarfs there were which lived in an isle, And the name of that isle was Lone, And the names of the dwarfs were Alliolyle, Lallerie, Muziomone.

Their house was small and sweet of the sea,
And pale as the Malmsey wine;
Their bowls were three, and their beds were three,
And their nightcaps white were nine.

Their beds they were made of the holly-wood,
Their combs of the tortoise-shell,
Three basins of silver in corners there stood,
And three little ewers as well.

Green rushes, green rushes lay thick on the floor,
For light beamed a gobbet of wax;
There were three wooden stools for whatever they wore
On their humpity-dumpity backs.

So each would lie on a drowsy pillow
And watch the moon in the sky —
And hear the parrot scream to the billow,
And the billow roar reply.

Parrots of sapphire and sulphur and amber,
Amethyst, azure and green,
While apes in the palm trees would scramble and clamber,
Hairy and hungry and lean.

All night long with bubbles a-glisten
The ocean cried under the moon,
Till ape and parrot too sleepy to listen
To sleep and slumber were gone.

Then from three small beds the dark hours' while In a house in the Island of Lone Rose the snoring of Lallerie, Alliolyle, The snoring of Muziomone But soon as ever came peep of sun
On coral and feathery tree,
Three night-capped dwarfs to the surf would run
And soon were a-bob in the sea.

At six they went fishing, at nine to snare
Young foxes in the dells,
At noon in the shade on sweet fruits would fare,
And blew in their twisted shells.

Dark was the sea they gambolled in, And thick with silver fish, Dark as green glass blown clear and thin To be a monarch's dish.

They sate to sup in a jasmine bower, Lit pale with flies of fire, Their bowls the hue of the iris-flower, And lemon their attire.

Sweet wine in little cups they sipped, And golden honeycomb Into their bowls of cream they dipped, Whipt light and white as foam.

Now Alliolyle where the sand-flower blows
Taught three old apes to sing —
Taught three old apes to dance on their toes
And caper around in a ring.

They yelled them hoarse and they croaked them sweet, They twirled them about and around, To the noise of their voices they danced with their feet, They stamped with their feet on the ground.

But down to the shore skipped Lallerie, His parrot on his thumb, And the twain they scritched in mockery, While the dancers go and come.

And, alas! in the evening, rosy and still, Light-haired Lallerie Bitterly quarrelled with Alliolyle By the yellow-sanded sea. The rising moon swam sweet and large Before their furious eyes, And they rolled and rolled to the coral marge Where the surf for ever cries.

Too late, too late, comes Muziomone: Clear in the clear green sea Alliolyle lies not alone, But clasped with Lallerie.

He blows on his shell low plaintive notes;
Ape, perequito, bee
Flock where a shoe on the salt wave floats, —
The shoe of Lallerie.

He fetches nightcaps, one and nine, Grey apes he dowers three, His house as fair as the Malmsey wine Seems sad as the cypress-tree.

Three bowls he brims with sweet honeycomb To feast the bumble-bees, Saying, 'O bees, be this your home, For grief is on the seas!'

He sate him down in a coral grot, At the flowing in of the tide; When ebbed the billow, there was not, Save coral, aught beside.

So hairy apes in three white beds, And nightcaps, one and nine, On moonlit pillows lay three heads Bemused with dwarfish wine.

A tomb of coral, the dirge of bee, The grey apes' guttural groan For Alliolyle, for Lallerie, For thee, O Muziomone!

THE HORSEMAN

There was a Horseman rode so fast The Sun in heaven stayed still at last.

On, on, and on, his galloping shoon Gleamed never never beneath the Moon.

The People said, 'Thou must be mad, O Man with a never-lengthening shadow!

'Mad and bad! Ho! stay thy course, Thou and thy never-stabled horse!

'Oh, what a wild and wicked sight — A Horseman never dark with night!

'Depart from us, depart from us, Thou and thy lank-maned Pegasus!'...

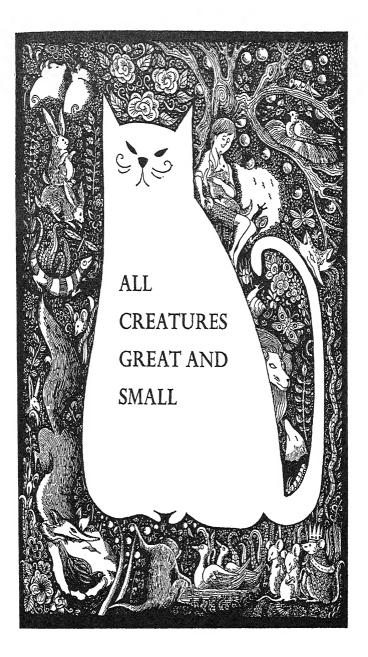

They talked into declining day, Since both were now leagues — leagues away.

WHERE

Monkeys in a forest, Beggarmen in rags, Marrow in a knucklebone, Gold in leather bags;

Dumplings in the oven, Fishes in a pool, Flowers in a parlour, Dunces in a school;

Feathers in a pillow, Cattle in a shed, Honey in a beehive, And Babs in bed.

SEEDS

The seeds I sowed -For weeks unseen -Have pushed up pygmy Shoots of green; So frail you'd think The tiniest stone Would never let A glimpse be shown. But no; a pebble Near them lies, At least a cherry-stone In size, Which that mere sprout Has heaved away, To bask in sunshine, See the Day.

THE FLY

How large unto the tiny fly
Must little things appear! —
A rosebud like a feather bed,
Its prickle like a spear;

A dewdrop like a looking-glass, A hair like golden wire; The smallest grain of mustard-seed As fierce as coals of fire; A loaf of bread, a lofty hill; A wasp, a cruel leopard; And specks of salt as bright to see As lambkins to a shepherd.

COME — GONE

Gone the snowdrop — comes the crocus; With the tulip blows the squill; Jonquil white as wax between them, And the nid-nod daffodil.

Peach, plum, cherry, pear and apple, Rain-sweet lilac on the spray; Come the dog-rose in the hedges — Gone's the sweetness of the may.

APPLE-FALL

Rosy the blossom that breaks in May;
Autumn brings the apple;
Jackdaws in the belfry tower,
Jackdaws in the steeple.
Comes a wind, blows a wind,
Headlong down they tumble;
But bloom and berry share the sprig
Of the prickly bramble.

A WIDOW'S WEEDS

A poor old Widow in her weeds
Sowed her garden with wild-flower seeds;
Not too shallow, and not too deep,
And down came April — drip — drip.— drip.
Up shone May, like gold, and soon
Green as an arbour grew leafy June.
And now all summer she sits and sews
Where willow-herb, comfrey, bugloss blows,

Teasel and tansy, meadowsweet,
Campion, toadflax, and rough hawksbit;
Brown bee orchis, and Peals of Bells;
Clover, burnet, and thyme she smells;
Like Oberon's meadows her garden is
Drowsy from dawn till dusk with bees.
Weeps she never, but sometimes sighs,
And peeps at her garden with bright brown eyes;
And all she has is all she needs —
A poor old Widow in her weeds.

THE HAREBELL

In the clear summer sunshine, hour by hour, I've toiled, but toiled in vain, to paint this flower; Brushes, and box of colours from their shelf, And nought else with me but the flower itself.

Nothing alive — so steadfast yet so frail — Could ever bloom on paper, I know well; But poor and clumsy though the copy be, I could not wish for happier company.

It seems it might, if I gazed on and on —
That wiry stalks, those petals, blue yet wan,
The solemn beauty of that marvellous cup —
At last, for very love, give its strange secret up.

THE ORCHARD

Lapped in the light and heat of noon, I saw an orchard — glorious With countless, cup-shaped, coloured flowers Of intertwined convolvulus.

At sun-down, I came back again — Faint shadows in the twilight wan; A hundred aging apple trees; But they? — all gone.

O DEAR ME!

Here are crocuses, white, gold, grey!
'O dear me!' says Marjorie May;
Flat as a platter the blackberry blows:
'O dear me!' says Madeleine Rose;
The leaves are fallen, the swallows flown:
'O dear me!' says Humphrey John;
Snow lies thick where all night it fell:
'O dear me!' says Emmanuel.

THE FLOWER

[From Crossings]

Listen, I who love thee well Have travelled far, and secrets tell; Cold the moon that gleams thine eyes, Yet beneath her further skies Rests, for thee, a paradise.

I have plucked a flower in proof, Frail, in earthly light, forsooth: See, invisible it lies In this palm: now veil thine eyes: Quaff its fragrancies!

Would indeed my throat had skill
To breathe thee music, faint and still —
Music learned in dreaming deep
In those lands, from Echo's lip. . . .
'Twould lull thy soul to sleep.

TREES

Of all the trees in England, Her sweet three corners in, Only the Ash, the bonnie Ash Burns fierce while it is green. Of all the trees in England,
From sea to sea again,
The Willow loveliest stoops her boughs
Beneath the driving rain.

Of all the trees in England,
Past frankincense and myrrh,
There's none for smell, of bloom and smoke,
Like Lime and Juniper.

Of all the trees in England,
Oak, Elder, Elm and Thorn,
The Yew alone burns lamps of peace
For them that lie forlorn.

THE WIND

The wind — yes, I hear it — goes wandering by, Willow and beech stir their branches and sigh; Each leaf to its sisters lisps softly, and then, The air being stilled, they are silent again.

Alone with the stars stands a thorn on the height, The snow of his flowers perfuming the night; But so sharp are his prickles, so gnarled his old bole, When the wind calls to him, he just whimpers, poor soul!

THE HOLLY

The sturdiest of forest-trees
With acorns is inset;
Wan white blossoms the elder brings
To fruit as black as jet;
But O, in all green English woods
Is aught so fair to view
As the sleek, sharp, dark-leaved holly tree
And its berries burning through?

Towers the ash; and dazzling green The larch her tassels wears; Wondrous sweet are the clots of may The tangled hawthorn bears; But O, in heath or meadow or wold Springs aught beneath the blue As brisk and trim as a holly-tree bole With its berries burning through?

When hither, thither, falls the snow, And blazes small the frost, Naked amid the winter stars The elm's vast boughs are tossed; But O, of all that summer showed What now to winter's true As the prickle-beribbed dark holly tree, With its berries burning through!

MRS. EARTH

Mrs. Earth makes silver black,
Mrs. Earth makes iron red,
But Mrs. Earth cannot stain gold
Nor ruby red.
Mrs. Earth the slenderest bone,
Whitens in her bosom cold,
But Mrs. Earth can change my dreams
No more than ruby or gold.
Mrs. Earth and Mr. Sun
Can tan my skin, and tire my toes,
But all that I'm thinking of, ever shall think,
Why, neither knows.

PRECIOUS STONES

Ruby, amethyst, emerald, diamond,
Sapphire, sardonyx, fiery-eyed carbuncle,
Jacynth, jasper, crystal a-sheen;
Topaz, turquoise, tourmaline, opal,
Beryl, onyx and aquamarine:—
Marvel, O mortal!— their hue, lustre, loveliness,
Pure as a flower when its petals unfurl—
Peach-red carnelian, apple-green chrysoprase,
Amber and coral and orient pearl!

NO JEWEL

No jewel from the rock Is lovely as the dew, Flashing with flamelike red With sea-like blue.

No web the merchant weaves Can rival hers — The silk the spider spins Across the furze.

THE POOL IN THE ROCK

In this water, clear as air,
Lurks a lobster in its lair.
Rock-bound weed sways out and in,
Coral-red, and bottle-green.
Wondrous pale anemones
Stir like flowers in a breeze:
Fluted scallop, whelk in shell,
And the prowling mackerel.
Winged with snow the sea-mews ride
The brine-keen wind; and far and wide
Sounds on the hollow thunder of the tide.

EARTH FOLK

The cat she walks on padded claws, The wolf on the hills lays stealthy paws, Feathered birds in the rain-sweet sky At their ease in the air, flit low, flit high.

The oak's blind, tender roots pierce deep, His green crest towers, dimmed in sleep, Under the stars whose thrones are set Where never prince hath journeyed yet.

ALL BUT BLIND

All but blind
In his chambered hole
Gropes for worms
The four-clawed Mole.

All but blind
In the evening sky
The hooded Bat
Twirls softly by.

All but blind
In the burning day
The Barn-Owl blunders
On her way.

And blind as are
These three to me,
So, blind to Some-One
I must be.

UNSTOOPING

Low on his fours the Lion
Treads with the surly Bear;
But Men straight upward from the dust
Walk with their heads in air;

The free sweet winds of heaven,
The sunlight from on high
Beat on their clear bright cheeks and brows
As they go striding by;
The doors of all their houses
They arch so they may go,
Uplifted o'er the four-foot beasts,
Unstooping, to and fro.

SHADOWS

The horse in the field, The cows in the meadow, Each browses and swishes Plumb over its shadow—

It is noon... And beneath That old thorn on the steep A shepherd and sheepdog Sit watching their sheep.

It is cool by the hedgerow, A thorn for a tent, Her flowers a snowdrift, The air sweet with scent.

But oh, see already
The shade has begun
To incline to'rds the East,
As the earth and the sun

Change places, like dancers In dance: for at morn They stretched to the West— When the new day was born.

HOLIDAYS

Dobbin's in the stable, pigs are in sty -Norfolk Dumpling and Twinkle-eye -And milking time is come. Four cows stand drowsing, head to tail, Waiting for Moll with her stool and pail, And two are trotting home. The sea lies flat as a pane of glass; Languid and faint the air, The shadows lengthen in the grass — Was ever day so fair? The wheat's in sheaf, a clucking hen Pecks supper for her chicks; (And if not one is out of sight, She has precisely six). The engine puffs, the people sit, And out of window gaze At lank-legged Peggy with the switch She cut at dawn — the switch with which She wooed her beasts to graze; And (since he's hidden behind the cows) They hear an unseen dog's bow-wows!

What wonder in a scene so bright
Their hearts are brimming with delight,
Welling with songs of joy and praise!
What wonder! Why, this very night
Begins the Holidays!

NICHOLAS NYE

Thistle and darnel and dock grew there,
And a bush, in the corner, of may,
On the orchard wall I used to sprawl
In the blazing heat of the day;
Half asleep and half awake,
While the birds went twittering by,
And nobody there my lone to share
But Nicholas Nye.

Nicholas Nye was lean and grey,
Lame of a leg and old,
More than a score of donkey's years
He had seen since he was foaled;
He munched the thistles, purple and spiked,
Would sometimes stoop and sigh,
And turn his head, as if he said,
'Poor Nicholas Nye!'

Alone with his shadow he'd drowse in the meadow, Lazily swinging his tail,
At break of day he used to bray, —
Not much too hearty and hale;
But a wonderful gumption was under his skin,
And a clear calm light in his eye,
And once in a while: he'd smile . . .
Would Nicholas Nye.

Seem to be smiling at me, he would,
From his bush in the corner, of may,—
Bony and ownerless, widowed and worn,
Knobble-kneed, lonely and grey;
And over the grass would seem to pass
'Neath the deep dark blue of the sky,
Something much better than words between me
And Nicholas Nye.

But dusk would come in the apple boughs,
The green of the glow-worm shine,
The birds in nest would crouch to rest,
And home I'd trudge to mine;
And there, in the moonlight, dark with dew,
Asking not wherefore nor why,
Would brood like a ghost, and as still as a post,
Old Nicholas Nye.

THE BANDOG

Has anybody seen my Mopser? —
A comely dog is he,
With hair of the colour of a Charles the Fifth,
And teeth like ships at sea,

His tail it curls straight upwards,
His ears stand two abreast,
And he answers to the simple name of Mopser,
When civilly addressed.

TOM'S LITTLE DOG

Tom told his dog called Tim to beg, And up at once he sat, His two clear amber eyes fixed fast, His haunches on his mat.

Tom poised a lump of sugar on His nose; then, 'Trust!' says he; Stiff as a guardsman sat his Tim; Never a hair stirred he.

'Paid for!' says Tom; and in a trice Up jerked that moist black nose; A snap of teeth, a crunch, a munch, And down the sugar goes!

FIVE EYES

In Hans' old Mill his three black cats
Watch his bins for the thieving rats.
Whisker and claw, they crouch in the night,
Their five eyes smouldering green and bright:
Squeaks from the flour sacks, squeaks from where
The cold wind stirs on the empty stair,
Squeaking and scampering, everywhere.
Then down they pounce, now in, now out,
At whisking tail, and sniffing snout;
While lean old Hans he snores away
Till peep of light at break of day;
Then up he climbs to his creaking mill,
Out come his cats all grey with meal —
Jekkel, and Jessup, and one-eyed Jill.

PUSS

Puss loves man's winter fire Now that the sun so soon Leaves the hours cold it warmed In burning June.

She purrs full length before The heaped-up hissing blaze, Drowsy in slumber down Her head she lays.

While he with whom she dwells Sits snug in his inglenook, Stretches his legs to the flames And reads his book.

COMFORT

As I mused by the hearthside, Puss said to me: 'There burns the Fire, man, And here sit we.

'Four Walls around us Against the cold air; And the latchet drawn close To the draughty Stair.

'A Roof o'er our heads
Star-proof, moon immune,
And a wind in the chimney
To wail us a tune.

'What Felicity!' miaowed he,
 'Where none may intrude;
Just Man and Beast — met
In this Solitude!

'Dear God, what security, Comfort and bliss! And to think, too, what ages Have brought us to this! 'You in your sheep's-wool coat, Buttons of bone, And me in my fur-about On the warm hearthstone.'

SUPPER

Her pinched grey body, In widow's fur, Mousey daren't From her wainscot stir; Twitching nose, And hollow ear, She stoops and listens, Stark with fear: There, like a tiger, Sleek and sly, Grimalkin's crouched With gloating eye, Watching her door — While over the crumbs The dusk of deepening Evening comes.

WHO REALLY?

When Winter's o'er, the Bear once more Rolls from his hollow tree
And pokes about, and in and out,
Where dwells the honey-bee.
Then all the little creatures go,
And to their Queen they say:
'Here's that old Bruin, hark, what he's doing,
Let's drive the beast away!'
Old Bruin smiles, and smooths his hair
Over a sticky nose;
'That Thieves should hate a Thief,' he smirks,
'Who really would suppose!'

MASTER RABBIT

As I was walking, Thyme sweet to my nose, Green grasshoppers talking, Rose rivalling rose:

Wings clear as amber, Outspread in the light, As from bush to bush The Linnet took flight:

Master Rabbit I saw
In the shadow-rimmed mouth
Of his sandy cavern
Looking out to the South.

'Twas dew-tide coming, The turf was sweet To nostril, curved tooth,' And wool-soft feet.

Sun was in West, Crystal in beam Of its golden shower Did his round eye gleam.

Lank horror was I, And a foe, poor soul — Snowy flit of a scut, He was into his hole:

And — stamp, stamp, stamp
Through dim labyrinths clear —
The whole world darkened:
A Human near!

Hi! handsome hunting man
Fire your little gun.
Bang! Now the animal
Is dead and dumb and done.
Nevermore to peep again, creep again, leap again,
Eat or sleep or drink again, Oh, what fun!

DONE FOR

Old Ben Bailey He's been and done For a small brown bunny With his long gun.

Glazed are the eyes That stared so clear, And no sound stirs In that hairy ear.

What was once beautiful Now breathes not, Bound for Ben Bailey's Smoking pot.

TIT FOR TAT

Have you been catching of fish, Tom Noddy?

Have you snared a weeping hare?

Have you whistled, 'No Nunny,' and gunned a poor bunny,

Or a blinded bird of the air?

Have you trod like a murderer through the green woods,
Through the dewy deep dingles and glooms,
While every small creature screamed shrill to Dame Nature,
'He comes — and he comes!'?

Wonder I very much do, Tom Noddy, If ever, when off you roam,

An Ogre from space will stoop a lean face And lug you home:

Lug you home over his fence, Tom Noddy,
Of thorn-sticks nine yards high,
With your bent knees strung round his old iron gun
And your head dan-dangling by:

And hang you up stiff on a hook, Tom Noddy, From a stone-cold pantry shelf, Whence your eyes will glare in an empty stare, Till you are cooked yourself!

THE GREY WOLF

'A fagot, a fagot, go fetch for the fire, son!'
'O, Mother, the wolf looks in at the door!'
'Cry Shoo! now, cry Shoo! thou fierce grey wolf, fly, now;
Haste thee away, he will fright thee no more.'

'I ran, O, I ran but the grey wolf ran faster, O, Mother, I cry in the air at thy door, Cry Shoo! now, cry Shoo! but his fangs were so cruel, Thy son (save his hatchet) thou'lt never see more.'

THE GAGE

'Lady Jane, O Lady Jane!
Your hound hath broken bounds again,
And chased my timorous deer, O;
If him I see,
That hour he'll dee;
My brakes shall be his bier, O.'
'Hoots! lord, speak not so proud to me!
My hound, I trow, is fleet and free,

My hound, I trow, is fleet and free,
He's welcome to your deer, O;
Shoot, shoot you may,
He'll gang his way,
Your threats we nothing fear, O.'

He's fetched him in, he's laid him low,
Drips his lifeblood red and slow,
Darkens his dreary eye, O;
'Here is your beast,
And now at least
My herds in peace shall lie, O.'

"In peace!" my lord, O mark me well! For what my jolly hound befell You shall sup twenty-fold, O! For every tooth Of his, i'sooth, A stag in pawn I hold, O.

'Huntsman and horn, huntsman and horn, Shall scour your heaths and coverts lorn, Baying them shrill and clear, O:
But lone and still
Shall lift each hill,
Each valley wan and sere, O.

'Ride up you may, ride down you may, Lonely or trooped, by night or day, One ghost shall haunt you ever: Bird, beast, and game Shall dread the same, The fish of lake and river.'

Her cheek burns angry as the rose, Her eye with wrath and pity flows: She gazes fierce and round, O. 'Dear Lord!' he says, 'What loveliness To waste upon a hound, O!

'I'd give my stags, my hills and dales, My stormcocks and my nightingales To have undone this deed, O; For deep beneath My heart is death Which for her love doth bleed, O.' He wanders up, he wanders down,
On foot, on horse, by night and noon;
His lands are bleak and drear, O;
Forsook his dales
Of nightingales,
Forsook his moors of deer, O.

Forsook his heart, ah me! of mirth;
There's nothing precious left on earth;
All happy dreams seem vain, O,
Save where remote
The moonbeams gloat,
And sleeps the lovely Jane, O.

But happed one eve alone he went,
Gnawing his beard in dreariment —
Lo! from a thicket hidden,
Lovely as flower
In April hour,
Steps forth a form unbidden.

'Get ye now down, my lord, to me!
I'm troubled so I'm like to dee',
She cries, 'twixt joy and grief, O;
'The hound is dead,
When all is said,
But love is past belief, O.

'Nights, nights I've lain your lands to see,
Forlorn and still — and all for me,
All for a foolish curse, O;
Pride may be well,
But truth to tell,
To live unloved is worse, O!'

In faith, this lord, in that lone dale, Hears now a sweeter nightingale, And lairs a tenderer deer, O; His sorrow goes Like mountain snows In waters sweet and clear, O! And now, what hound is this that fleet
Comes fawning to his mistress' feet,
And's bid forgive a master?
How swiftly love
May grief remove,
How happy make disaster!

Ay, as it were a bud did break To loveliness for pity's sake, So she in beauty moving Rides at his hand Across his land, Beloved as well as loving.

THE PIGS AND THE CHARCOAL-BURNER

The old Pig said to the little pigs,
'In the forest is truffles and mast,
Follow me then, all ye little pigs,
Follow me fast!'

The Charcoal-burner sat in the shade, His chin on his thumb, And saw the big Pig and the little pigs, Chuffling come.

He watched 'neath a green and giant bough, And the pigs in the ground Made a wonderful grizzling and gruzzling And greedy sound.

And when, full-fed, they were gone, and Night Walked her starry ways,
He stared with his cheeks in his hands
At his sullen blaze.

MARCH HARES

- 'The best way to go,' said my muffled-up friend, 'is to look in its form for a Hare, you know';
- So, with gun over shoulder, we sallied out early, the bushes all hunched up with snow, you know;
- The dawn was still under the eastern horizon, and O but the morning was rare, you know;
- The elms and the oaks were a-dangle with ice, that swayed in the breeze to and fro, you know —
- Icicles half a yard long at the least, that tinkled and rang in the air, you know;
- 'A marvellous music,' said I to my friend; and he, he never said, No, you know.
- The snow had been falling for days there were drifts full fifteen feet deep, and so fair, you know,
- Aurora herself might have looked to her blushes, and Cupid have trimmed up his bow, you know;
- And when o'er the rim of the World came the Sun and with eye like a topaz did glare, you know,
- We stood for a while as if blinded with Paradise, dumb in that wonderful glow, you know;
- We coughed, and we shifted our guns, and went on no more than a cough could we dare, you know,
- For moment by moment we couldn't tell where we should come within sight of the foe, you know.
- And, all of a sudden, my friend, he said, 'Ssh!' and I looked and I listened; and there, you know —
- Not half a shot off, with his ears and his scut, crouching close in the lily-white snow, you know,
- And his eyes like two blazing bright marbles of glass sat staring and glaring a Hare, you know!
- The sun it shone brighter, the blue it grew bluer, the heavens like an infinite O, you know,
- And a breeze out of nowhere rang sweet as a bell rings, and stirred in our whiskers and hair, you know.
- My friend then he up with his gun to his shoulder and tugged at the trigger: but lo! you know

In his kindness of heart he'd forgotten to load, for for slaughter he didn't much care, you know;

We laughed, oh! laughed we; and, my ghost! if old Watt didn't up with his nose and cry, 'Ho!' you know;

And stamped for his brothers and sisters to come; and they hopped up in scores from their lairs, you know.

They danced, they fandangoed, they scuttered, they sang, turned somersaults, leapfrogged, and so, you know

We trudged back to breakfast with nothing to jug, which wasn't exacaly fair, you know,

Which wasn't exacaly fair.

THE SHIP OF RIO

There was a ship of Rio Sailed out into the blue, And nine and ninety monkeys Were all her jovial crew. From bo'sun to the cabin boy, From quarter to caboose, There weren't a stitch of calico To breech 'em — tight or loose; From spar to deck, from deck to keel, From barnacle to shroud, There weren't one pair of reach-me-downs To all that jabbering crowd. But wasn't it a gladsome sight, When roared the deep-sea gales, To see them reef her fore and aft. A-swinging by their tails! Oh, wasn't it a gladsome sight, When glassy calm did come. To see them squatting tailor-wise Around a keg of rum! Oh, wasn't it a gladsome sight, When in she sailed to land, To see them all a-scampering skip For nuts across the sand!

THE PRINCE

Sweet Peridarchus was a Prince, The Prince he was of — Mouses; He roved and roamed the haunts of Men, And ranged about their houses.

He gnawed his way along a street, Through holes in every wainscot, Fandangoed in the attics and From basement on to basement.

His eyes like bits of rubies shone; His coat, as sleek as satin, With teeth as sharp as needle-points He kept to keep him fat in.

His squeak so sharp in the small hours rang That every waker wondered; He trimmed his whiskers stiff as wire, Had sweethearts by the hundred.

He'd gut a Cheshire cheese with ease, Plum cake devoured in slices, Lard, haggis, suet, sausages, And everything that nice is.

Cork out, he'd dangle down his tail For oil that was in bottle; Nothing too sweet, nothing too fat For Peridarchus' throttle.

He'd dance upon a chimney-pot, The merry stars a-twinkling; Or, scampering up a chandelier, Set all the lustres tinkling.

He'd skip into a pianoforte To listen how it sounded; He bored into a butt of wine, And so was nearly drownded. At midnight when he sat at meat, Twelve saucy sonsy maidens, With bee-sweet voices ditties sang, Some sad ones, and some gay ones.

For bodyguard he had a score Of warriors grim and hardy; They raided every larder round, From Peebles to Cromarty.

Grimalkin — deep in dreams she lay, Comes he, with these gay friskers, Steals up and gnaws away her claws, And plucks out all her whiskers.

He scaled a bell-rope where there snored The Bailiff and his Lady; Danced on his nose, nibbled her toes, And kissed the squalling Baby.

A merry life was his, I trow, Despite it was a short one; One night he met a mort of rats— He bared his teeth, and fought one:

A bully ruffian, thrice his size; But when the conflict ended, He sighed, 'Alack, my back is broke, And that can ne'er be mended.'

They laid him lifeless on a bier, They lapped him up in ermine; They lit a candle, inches thick, His Uncle preached the sermon:—

'O Mouseland, mourn for him that's gone, Our noble Peridarchus! In valiant fight but yesternight, And now, alas, a carcass!

'A Hero — Mouse or Man — is one Who never wails or winces; Friends, shed a tear for him that's here, The Princeliest of Princes!'

THE ACCOMPANIMENT

[For a woodcut]

The man in the hat (whom you see in the picture)
Mused softly one evening: 'I sit in this copse,
And the birds warble sweetly, for sweet is their nature;
Yet they sing at haphazard: then — every one stops.

'Yes, as if at the lift of a baton or finger,
The love-notes, pu-wees, and too-witta-woos cease,
Not a pause for applause, not a wing seems to linger,
The forests fall mute — the whole world is at peace.

'I marvel. I marvel. For take, now, the linnet— That sociable haunter of charlock and gorse, There is no sweeter throat with a melody in it, Still, solo he pipes as a matter of course!

'God forbid that with drum, cornet, triangle, cymbal, We should drown the wee cherubs: assuredly not. Still, my dear sister Jane on the harp is still nimble, Nor have I my old skill with the fiddle forgot . . . '

So now, as the sun in the West is declining,
The twain to that hill hie, the birds hie there too;
Rings the plucking of harp-strings, the catgut's sweet pining,
And a chorus orchestral ascends to the blue.

Besides which, a host of all small kinds of beasties
(They are shown on the cut, though Miss Jane's out of sight),
Having learned the harmonic a marvellous feast is,
Troll out an Amen ere they part for the night.

DUCKS

[For a picture]

See, now, a child must this way come —
And early out of bed! —
Who, still with dreams in his bright eyes,
Has filled a bag with bread,
And scampers down to feed the Ducks,
All flocking to be fed.

The tiny man in that tiny boat, Upon the placid lake afloat, Is looking back, and so can see Many now hidden from you and me; And these, like ours, no doubt he finds Of several sizes, shapes and kinds:—

The Farmyard Duck is white as snow;
And quacks a merry quack;
The Tufted wears a topknot;
The Labrador is black;
The Pochard, and the Goldeneye
As soon as seen are gone:

Like fish-with-wings they cruise beneath The water else they are on.

The wild, wild Mallard in chestnut flies, Steel-blue, and emerald green; Low head outstretched, and bead-dark eyes, He arrows through the empty skies,

As evening dusk sets in.
The Pintail whistles to the wind;
The Shoveller calls 'puck-puck';
The downy Eider an island loves
And shares a sailor's luck;

The wary Widgeon will talk all day,
Then sleep on a stormy sea;

But the Teal nests inland, and at peace —
A loving mother she.

And one a bill has like a hook;

And one like a flattened spoon:

They gossip, paddle, dive and bask — Pond, ocean, stream, lagoon:
On snails or plants or fishes feed,
Worms, insects, frogs, or water-weed,
As does, according to his need,
The lovelorn Mandarin.

All these are kinds. But every Duck Himself is, and himself alone: Fleet wing, arched neck, webbed foot, round eye, And marvellous cage of bone. Clad in this beauty a creature dwells, Of sovran instinct, sense and skill; Yet secret as the hidden wells Whence Life itself doth rill.

QUACK-HUNTING

When evening's darkening azure
Stains the water crystal clear,
It's a marvellous sweet pleasure

A small coracle to steer
To where, in reeds and rushes,
Squeak and chuckle, sup and suck
A multitudinous company

A multitudinous company Of Duck.

There silver-shining Hesper Smiles at Mars — a solemn red;

The myriads of the Milky Way Are circling overhead;

But even though the dusk's too dim

To sheen their wings — with luck I catch those button eyes and know They're Duck.

Not mine the dismal fowling-piece, The living duck for me!

I strow upon the water crumbs
Which they, that instant, see;

They paddle in like steamboats, with Their tails behind their backs;

And I? I simply sit and count Their quacks.

One sigh in that great silence — Wild-winged creatures, they'd be gone!

But me — I scarcely breathe, I don't, But softly sidle on;

And while the dears are feeding, with Their tails behind their backs,

I make my nightly score, I count Their quacks.

CHICKEN

Clapping her platter stood plump Bess,
And all across the green
Came scampering in, on wing and claw,
Chicken fat and lean: —
Dorking, Spaniard, Cochin China,
Bantams sleek and small,
Like feathers blown in a great wind,
They came at Bessie's call.

GRACE

For every sip the Hen says grace;
The Rabbit twinkles his small face;
Ev'n to the Fox, stol'n safely home,
A crafty grin of thanks must come;
Even the Spider, plump in net,
His manners cannot quite forget,
And when he's supped upon a fly
Puts what is over neatly by.
Oh, any one with tongue and wits
Who crowded up with victuals sits
Through breakfasts, luncheons, dinners, teas,
With never a Thank you or a Please,
Eating not what he should but can,

Can not be a well-mannered man.

No doubt if Cows and Sheep were able
To draw their chairs up to the table,
It's only common sense to say
They'd keep on stuffing there all day,
They need such quantities of hay.
But though they never could let pass
A dainty dish of greens or grass,
Even the littlest Lambkin would
Express a sheepish gratitude;
While sager beasts, however staid,
Might smile upon the parlourmaid.

THE MOTHER BIRD

Through the green twilight of a hedge I peered, with cheek on the cool leaves pressed, And spied a bird upon a nest: Two eyes she had beseeching me Meekly and brave, and her brown breast Throbb'd hot and quick above her heart; And then she opened her dagger bill, -'Twas not the chirp that sparrows pipe At early day; 'twas not the trill That falters through the quiet even; But one sharp solitary note, One desperate fierce and vivid cry Of valiant tears, and hopeless joy, One passionate note of victory. Off, like a fool afraid, I sneaked, Smiling the smile the fool smiles best, At the mother bird in the secret hedge Patient upon her lonely nest.

THE THRUSH

Even earlier yet this listening thrush —
Alone on her leafy bough —
Trilled out her brier-sweet song of praise
To greet the risen sun; and now,
With glittering eye and speckled breast,
Peeps this way, that way, then at nest,
As though, for joy, she is not sure
If it hold one egg less — or more,
Since last she counted four.

How strange that one, of shade the lover, Has chosen a tree so spare in cover! But had she built to shield her brood In laurel bush, or ivy-tod, Her plaited nest so plainly seen Would hidden out of sight have been. Nor could a watch be kept so well When her first young one cracks its shell; Nor on all four when, fledged, they fly, And — later eggs being hatched — will try To help her feed her family!

A GOLDFINCH

This feather-soft creature, Tail to head, Is golden yellow, And black, and red.

A sip of water, A twig to sing on, A prong for nest, The air to wing on,

A mate to love, Some thistledown seed Are all his joy, life, Beauty, need.

JENNY WREN

Of all the birds that rove and sing, Near dwellings made for men, None is so nimble, feat, and trim As Jenny Wren.

With pin-point bill, and tail a-cock, So wildly shrill she cries, The echoes on the roof-tree knock And fill the skies.

Never was sweeter seraph hid Within so small a house — A tiny, inch-long, eager, ardent, Feathered mouse.

THE BIRD SET FREE

'No marvel, Sweet, you clap your wings In hunger for the open sky; I see your pretty flutterings, Will let you fly.

'But O, when in some shady grot You preen your breast in noonday's blue, Be not your Susan quite forgot, Who hungers too!'

A WARBLER

In the sedge a tiny song
Wells and trills the whole day long;
In my heart another bird
Has its music heard.

As I watch and listen here, Each to each pipes low and clear; But when one has ceased to sing, Mine will still be echoing.

TINY EENANENNIKA

Tiny Eenanennika
Was like a little bird;
If the least whisper sounded,
She heard, oh, she heard!
Claw or wing, in bush or brake,
However soft it stirred.

Tiny Eenanennika
Had bright gold hair;
Fair as a field of wheat,
Like sunshine, fair,
Like flame, like gilded water — oh,
Past words to declare!

And every sing-song bird there is,
Titmouse to wren,
In springtime, in nesting-time,
Would watch keep; and when
She chanced to look the other way
Would steal up, and then —
Snip from her shining head
Just one hair, or twain,
A gleaming, glistening, shimmering thread,
And fly off again —
A gossamer of glittering gold,
And flit off again.

CRUMBS

You little birds, I bring my crumbs,
For now the cold of winter comes.
The North Wind blows down frozen rain;
The fields are white with snow again;
The worm's in house; the bare-twigged trees
Are thick with frost instead of bees;
From running brooks all noise is gone;
And every pool lies still as stone.

THE ROBIN

As little Bess was walking home
She saw a robin on a stone.
He looked at her with bead-bright eye —
These two alone there, no one by.
She gave him bread-crumbs dipped in milk,
She stroked his feathers soft as silk.
Then leaning sidelong her fair head,
'Sing sweet! I'm listening,' she said.
And he, the dainty imp, he skips,
And pecks a crumb between her lips
And then, to his own wild being gone,
Left empty the round pebble-stone.

THE FEATHER

A feather, a feather! — I wonder whether Of Wren? Or Sparrow? Or poor Cock Robin, Shot with an arrow?

A learned man
Would tell me whether
This airy scrap
Of down — this feather,
Was of Wren, or Sparrow —
From thorn or willow,
Ivy or gorse,
Or grey-leafed sallow —
Or poor Cock Robin's,
Shot with an arrow.

The beak nibs in,
A wind-puff blows,
Off and away
The morsel goes,
Tiny, delicate,
Downy, narrow,
Preened and sleek —
The dainty fellow!

So I can't help asking, Wren? Or Sparrow? Or — it would fill My heart with sorrow — Poor Cock Robin's, Slain with an arrow?

JENNY WREN

That farthing bird, J. Wren, The cruel boys pursue; Hunt her with sticks and stones Hedge and green coppice through.

A farthing bird. Amen. Ay, two brown sparrows can For as easy a sum be bought By heedless chaffering man.

Yet not for all earthbound gold, Or argosies under the sea, Can one moment's pity of pitiful child Be marketed for, perdie.

MISSEL THRUSH

When from the brittle ice the fields Begin to spring with green, Then sits the storm-cock tree-top high, And shrills the blasts between.

And when the sun, with thinning ray, Tells winter's drawing nigh, Still, this wild bird, of valiant heart, Shouts wild against the sky.

OVER THE DOWNS

A stick between his knees, sits Pat,
And sugar-loaf in shape's his hat;
But Phil, his friend, has neither,
'Unless to cool his fevered brow,
His hidden hat is off just now,
For warm in sooth's the weather.

Though Denton's seven miles away,
How sweet it is a while to be
At rest in this green solitude
Of peace and mystery! —
So still the very hares creep close,
As if in hope they can
By leaning their lank listening ears
His secrets share with Man.
What lies beyond that broken fence
When on we journey? Well,
The motionless bird upon the post
May know: he does not tell.

THE STORM

First there were two of us, then there were three of us, Then there was one bird more, Four of us — wild white sea-birds, Treading the ocean floor; And the wind rose, and the sea rose, To the angry billows' roar — With one of us — two of us — three of us — four of us Sea-birds on the shore.

Soon there were five of us, soon there were nine of us, And lo! in a trice sixteen!

And the yeasty surf curdled over the sands,

The gaunt grey rocks between;

And the tempest raved, and the lightning's fire

Struck blue on the spindrift hoar —

And on four of us — ay, and on four times four of us

Sea-birds on the shore.

And our sixteen waxed to thirty-two,
And they to past three score —
A wild, white welter of winnowing wings,
And ever more and more;
And the winds lulled, and the sea went down,
And the sun streamed out on high,
Gilding the pools and the spume and the spars
'Neath the vast blue deeps of the sky;

And the isles and the bright green headlands shone, As they'd never shone before, Mountains and valleys of silver cloud, Wherein to swing, sweep, soar — A host of screeching, scolding, scrabbling Sea-birds on the shore — A snowy, silent, sun-washed drift Of sea-birds on the shore.

THE BORDER BIRD

As if a voice had called, I woke, The world in silence lay; The winter sun was not yet up, The moon still in the sky.

A strange sea bird had hither flown, Out of the last of night, While yet the Dog Star in the west Shone palely bright.

His wings came like a hush of wind, His feet were coral red, No mantling swan has softer down, No blackcap blacker head.

He lighted on the frozen snow; Trod here, and there, and then Lifted his gentle neck and gazed Up at my window-pane.

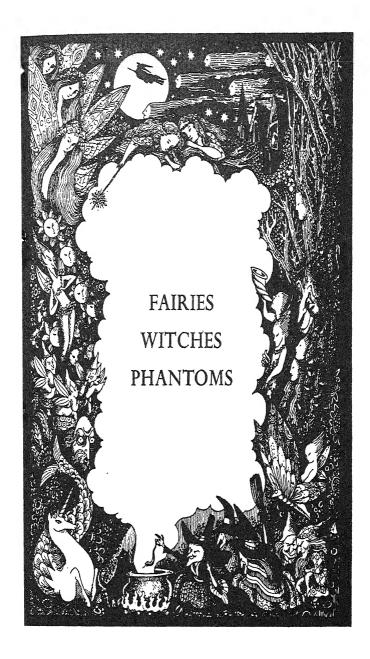

And I, from out of dream, looked down, This lovely thing to see; The world a wilderness of white, Nought living there but he.

Then with a sweet low call, he raised Dark head and pinions wan, Swept up into the gold of day, Was gone.

THE SCRIBE

What lovely things
Thy hand hath made:
The smooth-plumed bird
In its emerald shade,
The seed of the grass,
The speck of stone
Which the wayfaring ant
Stirs — and hastes on!

Though I should sit By some tarn in thy hills, Using its ink As the spirit wills To write of Earth's wonders, Its live, willed things, Flit would the ages On soundless wings Ere unto Z My pen drew nigh; Leviathan told, And the honey-fly: And still would remain My wit to try — My worn reeds broken, The dark tarn dry, All words forgotten -Thou, Lord, and I.

SLEEPYHEAD

As I lay awake in the white moon light, I heard a faint singing in the wood, 'Out of bed, Sleepyhead, Put your white foot now,

Here are we, Neath the tree

Singing round the root now!'

I looked out of window, in the white moon light, The trees were like snow in the wood —

'Come away,
Child, and play
Light with the gnomies;
In a mound,
Green and round,
That's where their home is.
Honey sweet,
Curds to eat,
Cream and fruménty,
Shells and beads,
Poppy seeds,
You shall have plenty.'

But soon as I stooped in the dim moon light
To put on my stocking and my shoe,
The sweet sweet singing died sadly away,
And the light of the morning peeped through:
Then instead of the gnomies there came a red robin
To sing of the buttercups and dew.

A-TISHOO

'Sneeze, Pretty: sneeze, Dainty, Else the Elves will have you sure, Sneeze, Light-of-Seven-Bright-Candles, See they're tippeting at the door; Tiny feet in measure falling, All their little voices calling, Calling, calling, calling, calling — Sneeze, or never come no more!'

'A-tishoo!'

BLUEBELLS

Where the bluebells and the wind are, Fairies in a ring I spied, And I heard a little linnet Singing near beside.

Where the primrose and the dew are, Soon were sped the fairies all: Only now the green turf freshens, And the linnets call.

THE BUCKLE

I had a silver buckle, I sewed it on my shoe, And 'neath a sprig of mistletoe I danced the evening through!

I had a bunch of cowslips, I hid 'em in a grot, In case the elves should come by night And me remember not.

I had a yellow riband, I tied it in my hair, That, walking in the garden, The birds might see it there. I had a secret laughter, I laughed it near the wall: Only the ivy and the wind May tell of it at all.

THE HORN

Hark! is that a horn I hear, In cloudland winding sweet — And bell-like clash of bridle-rein, And silver-shod light feet?

Is it the elfin laughter
Of fairies riding faint and high,
Beneath the branches of the moon,
Straying through the starry sky?

Is it in the globèd dew
Such sweet melodies may fall?
Wood and valley — all are still,
Hushed the shepherd's call.

THE FAIRIES DANCING

I heard along the early hills,
Ere yet the lark was risen up,
Ere yet the dawn with firelight fills
The night-dew of the bramble-cup, —
I heard the fairies in a ring
Sing as they tripped a lilting round
Soft as the moon on wavering wing.
The starlight shook as if with sound,
As if with echoing, and the stars
Pranked their bright eyes with trembling gleams;
While red with war the gusty Mars
Rained upon earth his ruddy beams.
He shone alone, low down the West,
While I, behind a hawthorn-bush,

Watched on the fairies flaxen-tressed
The fires of the morning flush.
Till, as a mist, their beauty died,
Their singing shrill and fainter grew;
And daylight tremulous and wide
Flooded the moorland through and through;
Till Urdon's copper weathercock
Was reared in golden flame afar,
And dim from moonlit dreams awoke
The towers and groves or Arroar.

DOWN-ADOWN-DERRY

Down-adown-derry,
Sweet Annie Maroon,
Gathering daisies
In the meadows of Doone,
Sees a white fairy
Skip buxom and free
Where the waters go brawling
In rills to the sea;
Singing down-adown-derry.

Down-adown-derry,
Sweet Annie Maroon
Through the green grasses
Peeps softly; and soon
Spies under green willows
A fairy whose song
Like the smallest of bubbles
Floats bobbing along;
Singing down-adown-derry.

Down-adown-derry
Her cheeks are like wine,
Her eyes in her wee face
Like water-sparks shine,
Her niminy fingers
Her sleek tresses preen,

The which in the combing She peeps out between;
Singing down-adown-derry.

'Down-adown-derry,'
And shrill was her tune: —
'Come to my water-house,
Annie Maroon,
Come in your dimity,
Ribbon on head,
To wear siller seaweed
And coral instead;
Singing down-adown-derry.'

'Down-adown-derry,
Lean fish of the sea,
Bring lanthorns for feasting
The gay Faërie;
'Tis sand for the dancing,
A music all sweet
In the water-green gloaming
For thistledown feet;
Singing down-adown-derry.'

Down-adown-derry,
Sweet Annie Maroon
Looked large on the fairy
Curled wan as the moon;
And all the grey ripples
To the Mill racing by,
With harps and with timbrels
Did ringing reply;
Singing down-adown-derry.

'Down-adown-derry.'
Sang the Fairy of Doone,
Piercing the heart
Of sweet Annie Maroon;

And lo! when like roses
The clouds of the sun
Faded at dusk, gone
Was Annie Maroon;
Singing down-adown-derry.

Down-adown-derry,
The daisies are few;
Frost twinkles powd'ry
In haunts of the dew;
And only the robin
Perched on a thorn,
Can comfort the heart
Of a father forlorn;
Singing down-adown-derry.

Down-adown-derry
Snow's on the air;
Ice where the lily
Bloomed waxen and fair;
He may call o'er the water,
Cry — cry through the Mill,
But Annie Maroon, alas!
Answer ne'er will;
Singing down-adown-derry.

THE BEES' SONG

Thousandz of thornz there be On the Rozez where gozez The Zebra of Zee: Sleek, striped, and hairy, The steed of the Fairy Princess of Zee.

Heavy with blossomz be The Rozez that growzez In the thickets of Zee. Where grazez the Zebra Marked Abracadeeebra Of the Princess of Zee.

And he nozez the poziez
Of the Rozez that growzez
So luvez'm and free,
With an eye, dark and wary,
In search of a Fairy,
Whose Rozez he knowzez
Were not honeyed for he,
But to breathe a sweet incense
To solace the Princess
Of far-away Zzzee.

THE HONEY ROBBERS

There were two Fairies, Gimmul and Mel, Loved Earth Man's honey passing well;

Oft at the hives of his tame bees

A keening — keening, to and fro; At which those robbers 'neath the trees Would taunt and mock the honey-bees, And through their sticky teeth would buzz

And when this Gimmul and this Mel

Just as an angry hornet does.

They would their sugary thirst appease. When even began to darken to night, They would hie along in the fading light, With elf-locked hair and scarlet lips, And small stone knives to slit the skeps, So softly not a bee inside Should hear the woven straw divide. And then with sly and greedy thumbs Would rifle the sweet honeycombs. And drowsily drone to drone would say, 'A cold, cold wind blows in this way'; And the great Queen would turn her head From face to face, astonished, And, though her maids with comb and brush Would comb and soothe and whisper, 'Hush!' About the hive would shrilly go

Or ever Man's first cock should crow Back to their Faërie Mounds they'd go. Edging across the twilight air, Thieves of a guise remotely fair.

THE THREE BEGGARS

'Twas autumn daybreak gold and wild While past St. Ann's grey tower they shuffled Three beggars spied a fairy-child In crimson mantle muffled.

The daybreak lighted up her face
All pink, and sharp, and emerald-eyed;
She looked on them a little space,
And shrill as hautboy cried:—

'O three tall footsore men in rags Which walking this gold morn I see, What will ye give me from your bags For fairy kisses three?'

The first, that was a reddish man, Out of his bundle takes a crust: 'La, by the tombstones of St. Ann There's fee, if fee ye must!'

The second, that was a chestnut man, Out of his bundle draws a bone: 'La, by the belfry of St. Ann, And all my breakfast gone!'

The third, that was a yellow man, Out of his bundle picks a groat, 'La, by the Angel of St. Ann, And I must go without.'

That changeling, lean and icy-lipped,
Touched crust, and bone, and groat, and lo!
Beneath her finger taper-tipped
The magic all ran through.

Instead of crust a peacock pie,
Instead of bone sweet venison,
Instead of groat a white lily
With seven blooms thereon.

And each fair cup was deep with wine:
Such was the changeling's charity
The sweet feast was enough for nine,
But not too much for three.

O toothsome meat in jelly froze!
O tender haunch of elfin stag!
Oh, rich the odour that arose!
Oh, plump with scraps each bag!

There, in the daybreak gold and wild, Each merry-hearted beggar man Drank deep unto the fairy child, And blessed the good St. Ann.

BERRIES

There was an old woman Went blackberry picking Along the hedges From Weep to Wicking. Half a pottle — No more she had got, When out steps a Fairy From her green grot; And says, 'Well, Jill, Would 'ee pick 'ee mo?' And Jill, she curtseys, And looks just so. 'Be off,' says the Fairy, 'As quick as you can, Over the meadows To the little green lane, That dips to the hayfields Of Farmer Grimes:

I've berried those hedges
A score of times;
Bushel on bushel
I'll promise 'ee, Jill,
This side of supper
If 'ee pick with a will.'
She glints very bright,
And speaks her fair;
Then lo, and behold!
She had faded in air.

Be sure Old Goodie She trots betimes Over the meadows To Farmer Grimes. And never was queen With jewellery rich As those same hedges From twig to ditch; Like Dutchmen's coffers, Fruit, thorn, and flower -They shone like William And Mary's bower. And be sure Old Goodie Went back to Weep So tired with her basket She scarce could creep.

When she comes in the dusk
To her cottage door,
There's Towser wagging
As never before,
To see his Missus
So glad to be
Come from her fruit-picking
Back to he.
As soon as next morning
Dawn was grey,
The pot on the hob
Was simmering away;

And all in a stew
And a hugger-mugger
Towser and Jill
A-boiling of sugar,
And the dark clear fruit
That from Faërie came,
For syrup and jelly
And blackberry jam.

Twelve jolly gallipots
Jill put by;
And one little teeny one,
One inch high;
And that she's hidden
A good thumb deep,
Half way over
From Wicking to Weep.

THE DWARF

'Now, Jinnie, my dear, to the dwarf be off,
That lives in Barberry Wood,
And fetch me some honey, but be sure you don't laugh, —
He hates little girls that are rude, are rude,
He hates little girls that are rude.'

Jane tapped at the door of the house in the wood,
And the dwarf looked over the wall,
He eyed her so queer, 'twas as much as she could
To keep from laughing at all, at all,
To keep from laughing at all.

His shoes down the passage came clod, clod, clod, And when he opened the door,
He croaked so harsh, 'twas as much as she could
To keep from laughing the more, the more,
To keep from laughing the more.

As there, with his bushy red beard, he stood
Pricked out to double its size,
He squinted so cross, 'twas as much as she could
To keep the tears out of her eyes, her eyes,
To keep the tears out of her eyes.

He slammed the door, and went clod, clod, clod, But while in the porch she bides,
He squealed so fierce, 'twas as much as she could
To keep from cracking her sides, her sides,
To keep from cracking her sides.

He threw a pumpkin over the wall,
And melons and apples beside,
So thick in the air that to see 'em all fall,
She laughed, and laughed, till she cried, cried,
Jane laughed and laughed till she cried.

Down fell her teardrops a pit-apat-pat,
And red as a rose she grew; —

'Kah! kah!' said the dwarf, 'is it crying you're at?
It's the very worst thing you could do, do, do,
It's the very worst thing you could do.'

He slipped like a monkey up into a tree,
He shook her down cherries like rain;
'See now,' says he, cheeping, 'a blackbird I be,
Laugh, laugh, little Jinnie, again-gain,
Laugh, laugh, little Jinnie, again!'

Ah me! what a strange, what a gladsome duet
From a house in the deeps of a wood!
Such shrill and such harsh voices never met yet
A-laughing as loud as they could, could,
A-laughing as loud as they could.

Come Jinnie, come dwarf, cocksparrow, and bee, There's a ring gaudy-green in the dell, Sing, sing, ye sweet cherubs, that flit in the tree; La! who can draw tears from a well, well, well, Who ever drew tears from a well!

HAPLESS

Hapless, hapless, I must be All the hours of life I see, Since my foolish nurse did once Bed me on her leggen bones; Since my mother did not weel To snip my nails with blades of steel. Had they laid me on a pillow In a cot of water willow, Had they bitten finger and thumb, Not to such ill hap I had come.

PEAK AND PUKE

From his cradle in the glamourie They have stolen my wee brother, Housed a changeling in his swaddlings For to fret my own poor mother. Pules it in the candle light Wi' a cheek so lean and white, Chinkling up its eyne so wee Wailing shrill at her an' me. It we'll neither rock nor tend Till the Silent Silent send. Lapping in their waesome arms Him they stole with spells and charms, Till they take this changeling creature Back to its own fairy nature -Cry! Cry! as long as may be, Ye shall ne'er be woman's baby!

THE FAIRY-PEDLAR'S SONG

[From Crossings]

Of your 'nevolent nature Spare a crust for a creature. A drink and a dole, For a ho-omeless soul.

Of slumber but tossings —
White the rime in bare Crossings;
Cold is shed, barn and byre, leddy,
A coal from your fire, leddy!

And Oh, sleepy odours,
The bosom to lull;
When the swart raven yells,
And the taper burns dull!

SOLITUDE

'Wish! and it's thine!' the changeling piped, Shrill from her thorn. And I with dew-soaked shoes could only

High up above me sang the lark,
Beneath me lay the sea,
Gorse, bramble, rock and whinchat were
My only company.

Her tiny voice fell faint, and lo,
Where she had been
Leaned but a few-days-budded rose
Out of the green.

Stare in return.

THE RUIN

When the last colours of the day Have from their burning ebbed away, About that ruin, cold and lone, The cricket shrills from stone to stone; And scattering o'er its darkened green, Bands of the fairies may be seen, Chattering like grasshoppers, their feet Dancing a thistledown dance round it: While the great gold of the mild moon Tinges their tiny acorn shoon.

NEVER

'Take me, or leave me — I'm not thine,' The fairy mocked on the sands of Lyne —

Frail as Phosphor over the sea: 'Seven long years shalt thou toil for me.'

Full seven I laboured, teen and tine:
But — 'Take me, or leave me, I'm not thine!'

THE BIRD

As poor old Biddie
Sat by the hearth,
Chilled to the bone
By the cold in the earth,
Under the eaves —
Biddie nodding and napping —
Came a beak at the casement,
Tap — tapping — and tapping:
Dark creeping in,
The fields all thick
With hoar-frost — still tapping
That restless beak.

But Biddie, as deaf As a post, drowsed on; And at last in the starlight The tapping was gone. Three mortal days Lagged wintrily through, But at midnight on Thursday Gone was old Biddie too.

DAME HICKORY

'Dame Hickory, Dame Hickory, Here's sticks for your fire, Furze-twigs, and oak-twigs, And beech-twigs, and briar!' But when old Dame Hickory came for to see, She found 'twas the voice of the False Faërie.

'Dame Hickory, Dame Hickory, Here's meat for your broth, Goose-flesh, and hare's flesh, And pig's trotters both!' But when old Dame Hickory came for to see, She found 'twas the voice of the False Faërie.

'Dame Hickory, Dame Hickory, Here's a wolf at your door, His teeth grinning white, And his tongue wagging sore!' 'Nay!' said Dame Hickory, 'ye False Faërie!' But a wolf 'twas indeed, and famished was he.

'Dame Hickory, Dame Hickory, Here's buds for your tomb, Bramble, and lavender, And rosemary bloom!' 'Whsst!' sighs Dame Hickory, 'you False Faërie, You cry like a wolf, you do, and trouble poor me.'

THE MOCKING FAIRY

'Won't you look out of your window, Mrs. Gill?'
Quoth the Fairy, nidding, nodding in the garden;
'Can't you look out of your window, Mrs. Gill?'
Quoth the Fairy, laughing softly in the garden;
But the air was still, the cherry boughs were still,
And the ivy-tod neath the empty sill,
And never from her window looked out Mrs. Gill
On the Fairy shrilly mocking in the garden.

'What have they done with you, you poor Mrs. Gill?'
Quoth the Fairy brightly glancing in the garden;
'Where have they hidden you, you poor old Mrs. Gill?'
Quoth the Fairy dancing lightly in the garden;
But night's faint veil now wrapped the hill,
Stark 'neath the stars stood the dead-still Mill,
And out of her cold cottage never answered Mrs. Gill
The Fairy mimbling, mambling in the garden.

THE PEDLAR

There came a Pedlar to an evening house;
Sweet Lettice, from her lattice looking down,
Wondered what man he was, so curious
His black hair dangled on his tattered gown:
Then lifts he up his face, with glittering eyes, —
'What will you buy, sweetheart? — Here's honeycomb,
And mottled pippins, and sweet mulberry pies,
Comfits and peaches, snowy cherry bloom,
To keep in water for to make night sweet:
All that you want, sweetheart, — come, taste and eat!'

Ev'n with his sugared words, returned to her The clear remembrance of a gentle voice:—
'And Oh, my child, should ever a flatterer Tap with his wares, and promise of all joys And vain sweet pleasures that on earth may be; Seal up your ears, sing some old happy song, Confuse his magic who is all mockery:

His sweets are death.' Yet, still, how she doth long But just to taste, then shut the lattice tight, And hide her eyes from the delicious sight!

'What must I pay?' she whispered. 'Pay!' says he, 'Pedlar I am who through this wood do roam, One lock of hair is gold enough for me, For apple, peach, comfits, or honeycomb!' But from her bough a drowsy squirrel cried, 'Trust him not, Lettice, trust, oh trust him not!' And many another woodland tongue beside Rose softly in the silence — 'Trust him not!' Then cried the Pedlar in a bitter voice, 'What, in the thicket, is this idle noise?'

A late, harsh blackbird smote him with her wings, As through the glade, dark in the dim, she flew; Yet still the Pedlar his old burden sings, — 'What, pretty sweetheart, shall I show to you? Here's orange ribands, here's a string of pearls, Here's silk of buttercup and pansy glove, A pin of tortoiseshell for windy curls, A box of silver, scented sweet with clove: Come now,' he says, with dim and lifted face, 'I pass not often such a lonely place.'

'Pluck not a hair!' a hidden rabbit cried,
'With but one hair he'll steal thy heart away,
Then only sorrow shall your lattice hide:
Go in! all honest pedlars come by day.'
There was dead silence in the drowsy wood;
'Here's syrup for to lull sweet maids to sleep;
And bells for dreams, and fairy wine and food
All day your heart in happiness to keep';
And now she takes the scissors on her thumb,
'O, then, no more unto my lattice come!'

Oh, sad the sound of weeping in the wood! Now only night is where the Pedlar was; And bleak as frost upon a quickling bud His magic steals in darkness, O alas! Why all the summer doth sweet Lettice pine? And, ere the wheat is ripe, why lies her gold Hid 'neath fresh new-pluckt sprigs of eglantine? Why all the morning hath the cuckoo tolled, Sad to and fro in green and secret ways, With solemn bells the burden of her days?

And, in the market-place, what man is this Who wears a loop of gold upon his breast, Stuck heartwise; and whose glassy flatteries Take all the townsfolk ere they go to rest Who come to buy and gossip? Doth his eye Remember a face lovely in a wood? O people! hasten, hasten, do not buy His woeful wares; the bird of grief doth brood There where his heart should be; and far away Dew lies on grave-flowers this selfsame day.

THE OLD HOUSE

A very, very old house I know —
And ever so many people go,
Past the small lodge, forlorn and still,
Under the heavy branches, till
Comes the blank wall, and there's the door.
Go in they do; come out no more.
No voice says aught; no spark of light
Across that threshold cheers the sight;
Only the evening star on high
Less lonely makes a lonely sky,
As, one by one, the people go
Into that very old house I know.

HERE TO-DAY

[From Crossings]

Here to-day and gone to-morrow; Nowt to buy with, nowt to borrow; Come the nightshine, packs down all; Ring poor Robin's funeral.

LONE

Shrill rang the squeak in the empty house Of the sharp-nosed mouse, the hungry mouse.

'Sing, sing: here none doth dwell!'
Dripped the water in the well.

A robin on the shepherd's grave Whistled a solitary stave.

And, 'Lone-lone!' the curlew cried, Scolding the sheep-strewn mountain's side.

AS I WENT TO THE WELL-HEAD

As I went to the well-head I heard a bird sing:
'Lie yonder, lie yonder The Islands of Ling.

'Leagues o'er the water Their shores are away, In a darkness of stars, And a foaming of spray.'

ALULVAN

The sun is clear of bird and cloud,
The grass shines windless, grey, and still,
In dusky ruin the owl dreams on,
The cuckoo echoes on the hill;
Yet soft along Alulvan's walks
The ghost at noonday stalks.

His eyes in shadow of his hat
Stare on the ruins of his house;
His cloak, up-fastened with a brooch,
Of faded velvet, grey as mouse,
Brushes the roses as he goes:
Yet wavers not one rose.

The wild birds in a cloud fly up
From their sweet feeding in the fruit;
The droning of the bees and flies
Rises gradual as a lute;
Is it for fear the birds are flown,
And shrills the insect-drone?

Thick is the ivy o'er Alulvan,
And crisp with summer-heat its turf;
Far, far across its empty pastures
Alulvan's sands are white with surf:
And he himself is grey as the sea,
Watching beneath an elder-tree.

All night the fretful, shrill Banshee
Lurks in the chambers' dark festoons,
Calling for ever, o'er garden and river,
Through magpie changing of the moons:
'Alulvan, O, alas! Alulvan,
The doom of lone Alulvan!'

THE LITTLE GREEN ORCHARD

Some one is always sitting there,

In the little green orchard;
Even when the sun is high,
In noon's unclouded sky,
And faintly droning goes
The bee from rose to rose,
Some one in shadow is sitting there,
In the little green orchard.

Yes, and when twilight's falling softly
On the little green orchard;
When the grey dew distils
And every flower-cup fills;
When the last blackbird says,
'What — what!' and goes her way — ssh!
I have heard voices calling softly
In the little green orchard.

Not that I am afraid of being there,
In the little green orchard;
Why, when the moon's been bright,
Shedding her lonesome light,
And moths like ghosties come,
And the horned snail leaves home:
I've sat there, whispering and listening there,
In the little green orchard;

Only it's strange to be feeling there,

In the little green orchard;

Whether you paint or draw,

Dig, hammer, chop, or saw;

When you are most alone,

All but the silence gone...

Some one is waiting and watching there,

In the little green orchard.

THE VOICE

As I sat in the gloaming I heard a voice say, Weep no more, sigh no more; Come, come away!

It was dusk at the window; From down in the street No rumble of carts came, No passing of feet.

I sat very still, Too frightened to play; And again the voice called me, Little boy, come away! Dark, darker it grew; Stars came out, and the moon Shone clear through the glass The carpet upon.

I listened and listened; But no more would it say — The voice that had called me, Come, come away!

THE STRANGER

In the nook of a wood where a pool freshed with dew Glassed, daybreak till evening, blue sky glimpsing through, Then a star; or a slip of May-moon silver-white Thridding softly aloof the quiet of night,

Was a thicket of flowers.

Willow-herb, mint, pale speedwell and rattle,
Water hemlock and sundew — to the wind's tittle-tattle
They nodded, dreamed, swayed in jocund delight,
In beauty and sweetness arrayed, still and bright.
By turn scampered rabbit; trotted fox; bee and bird
Paused droning, sang shrill, and the fair water stirred.
Plashed green frog, or some brisk little flickering fish —
Gudgeon, stickleback, minnow — set the ripples a-swish.

A lone pool, a pool grass-fringed, crystal-clear:
Deep, placid, and cool in the sweet of the year;
Edge-parched when the sun to the Dog Days drew near;
And with winter's bleak rime hard as glass, robed in snow,
The whole wild-wood sleeping, and nothing a-blow
But the wind from the North — bringing snow.

That is all. Save that one long, sweet, June night-tide straying, The harsh hemlock's pale umbelliferous bloom
Tenting nook, dense with fragrance and secret with gloom, In a beaming of moon-coloured light faintly raying,
On buds orbed with dew phospherescently playing,
Came a Stranger — still-footed, feat-fingered, clear face,
Unhumanly lovely . . . and supped in that place.

THE PHANTOM

Wilt thou never come again,
Beauteous one?
Yet the woods are green and dim,
Yet the birds' deluding cry
Echoes in the hollow sky,
Yet the falling waters brim
The clear pool which thou wast fain
To paint thy lovely cheek upon,
Beauteous one!

I may see the thorny rose
Stir and wake
The dark dewdrop on her gold;
But thy secret will she keep
Half divulged — yet all untold,
Since a child's heart woke from sleep.
The faltering sunbeam fades and goes;
The night-bird whistles in the brake;

The willows quake; Utter quiet falls; the wind Sighs no more.

Yet it seems the silence yearns
But to catch thy fleeting foot;
Yet the wandering glow-worm burns
Lest her lamp should light thee not —
Thee whom I shall never find;
Though thy shadow lean before,
Thou thyself return'st no more
Never more.

All the world's woods, tree o'er tree,
Come to nought.
Birds, flowers, beasts, how transient they,
Angels of a flying day.
Love is quenched; dreams drown in sleep;
Ruin nods along the deep:
Only thou immortally
Hauntest on

This poor earth in Time's flux caught; Hauntest on, pursued, unwon, Phantom child of memory, Beauteous one!

THE STRANGER

A little after twilight,
When the Bear was high in heaven,
And Venus in her beauty
Stood shining in the even;
Still and hushed was the dell
And she came like a flame —
A Stranger, clad in cramoisy,
And danced in the same.

Dew wells not more quietly,
More softly doth shine,
She danced till her cheek
Was red as red wine,
Light like a little taper
Burned small in her eye;
Like snow, like waterdrops, her feet
Twirled softly by.

Not a sound. Not a bird
Stirred a soft folded wing,
While deep in the woodland
She only did sing
Who hath night for her arbour,
For playmate the moon,
And a brook for babbling music there,
Murmuring alone.

Hours scattered their dust, Night wanned and drew on A veil of pale silver, And lo, it was dawn! Green, green glowed the dell, And the leaves over, green: But where was She in cramoisy Who'd danced in the same?

HAUNTED

From out of the wood I watched them shine, —
The windows of the haunted house,
Now ruddy as enchanted wine,
Now dark as flittermouse.

There went a thin voice piping airs
Along the grey and crooked walks, —
A garden of thistledown and tares,
Bright leaves, and giant stalks.

The twilight rain shone at its gates,
Where long-leaved grass in shadow grew;
And back in silence to her mates
A voiceless raven flew.

Lichen and moss the lone stones greened, Green paths led lightly to its door, Keen from her lair the spider leaned, And dusk to darkness wore.

Amidst the sedge a whisper ran, The West shut down a heavy eye, And like last tapers, few and wan, The watch-stars kindled in the sky.

THE LISTENERS

'Is there anybody there?' said the Traveller,
Knocking on the moonlit door;
And his horse in the silence champed the grasses
Of the forest's ferny floor:
And a bird flew up out of the turret,
Above the Traveller's head:
And he smote upon the door again a second time;
'Is there anybody there?' he said.
But no one descended to the Traveller;
No head from the leaf-fringed sill
Leaned over and looked into his grey eyes,
Where he stood perplexed and still.

But only a host of phantom listeners That dwelt in the lone house then Stood listening in the quiet of the moonlight To that voice from the world of men: Stood thronging the faint moonbeams on the dark stair, That goes down to the empty hall, Hearkening in an air stirred and shaken By the lonely Traveller's call. And he felt in his heart their strangeness, Their stillness answering his cry, While his horse moved, cropping the dark turf, 'Neath the starred and leafy sky; For he suddenly smote on the door, even Louder, and lifted his head: -'Tell them I came, and no one answered, That I kept my word,' he said. Never the least stir made the listeners, Though every word he spake Fell echoing through the shadowiness of the still house From the one man left awake: Ay, they heard his foot upon the stirrup, And the sound of iron on stone, And how the silence surged softly backward, When the plunging hoofs were gone.

THE ENCHANTED HILL

From height of noon, remote and still, The sun shines on the empty hill.

No mist, no wind, above, below;

No living thing strays to and fro.

No bird replies to bird on high,

Cleaving the skies with echoing cry.

Like dreaming water, green and wan,

Glassing the snow of mantling swan,

Like a clear jewel encharactered

With secret symbol of line and word,

Asheen, unruffled, slumbrous, still,

The sunlight streams on the empty hill.

But soon as Night's dark shadows ride Across its shrouded Eastern side, When at her kindling, clear and full, Star beyond star stands visible; Then course pale phantoms, fleet-foot deer Lap of its waters icy-clear. Mounts the large moon, and pours her beams On bright-fish-flashing, singing streams. Voices re-echo. Coursing by, Horsemen, like clouds, wheel silently. Glide then from out their pitch-black lair Beneath the dark's ensilvered arch, Witches becowled into the air: And iron pine and emerald larch, Tents of delight for ravished bird, Are by loud music thrilled and stirred. Winging the light, with silver feet, Beneath their bowers of fragrance met, In dells of rose and meadowsweet, In mazy dance the fairies flit; While drives his share the Ploughman high Athwart the daisy-powdered sky: Till far away, in thickening dew, Piercing the Eastern shadows through, Rilling in crystal clear and still, Light 'gins to tremble on the hill. And like a mist on faint winds borne, Silent, forlorn, wells up the morn. Then the broad sun with burning beams Steeps slope and peak and gilded streams. Then no foot stirs; the brake shakes not; Soundless and wet in its green grot As if asleep, the leaf hangs limp; The white dews drip untrembling down, From bough to bough, orblike, unblown; And in strange quiet, shimmering and still, Morning enshrines the empty hill.

WILL-O'-THE-WISP

'Will-o'-the-Wisp, Come out of the fen, And vex no more Benighted men!' Pale, blue, Wavering, wan, 'Will-o'-the-Wisp, Begone, begone!'

But the trees weep,
The mist-drops hang,
Light dwindles
The bents among.
Oh, and he hovers,
Oh, and he flies,
Will-o'-the-Wisp,
With the baleful eyes.

SOME ONE

Some one came knocking At my wee, small door; Some one came knocking, I'm sure — sure — sure; I listened, I opened, I looked to left and right, But nought there was a-stirring In the still dark night: Only the busy beetle Tap-tapping in the wall, Only from the forest The screech-owl's call, Only the cricket whistling While the dewdrops fall, So I know not who came knocking, At all, at all, at all.

AT THE KEYHOLE

'Grill me some bones,' said the Cobbler,
 'Some bones, my pretty Sue;
I'm tired of my lonesome with heels and soles,
Springsides and uppers too;
A mouse in the wainscot is nibbling;
A wind in the keyhole drones;
And a sheet webbed over my candle, Susie,
Grill me some bones!'

'Grill me some bones,' said the Cobbler,
'I sat at my tic-tac-to;
And a footstep came to my door and stopped,
And a hand groped to and fro;
And I peered up over my boot and last;
And my feet went cold as stones:

I saw an eye at the keyhole, Susie!

Grill me some bones!'

THE OLD TAILOR

There was once an old Tailor of Hickery Mo, Too tired at evening to sew, to sew; He put by his needle, he snapped his thread, And, cross-legged, sang to his fiddle instead. His candle bobbed at each note that came And spat out a spark from the midst of its flame; His catgut strings they yelped and yawled, The wilder their scrapings the louder he bawled; The grease trickled over at every beat, Welled down to the stick in a winding-sheet — Till up sprang Puss from the fire, with a WOW! 'A fine kakkamangul you're making now!'

NOTHING

Whsst, and away, and over the green,
Scampered a shape that never was seen.
It ran without sound, it ran without shadow,
Never a grass-blade in unmown meadow
Stooped at the thistledown fall of its foot.
I watched it vanish, yet saw it not —
A moment past, it had gazed at me;
Now nought but myself and the spindle tree.
A nothing! — Of air? Of earth? Of sun? —
From emptiness come, into vacancy gone! . . .
Whsst, and away, and over the green,
Scampered a shape that never was seen.

THE PHANTOM

'Upstairs in the large closet, child, This side the blue-room door, Is an old Bible, bound in leather, Standing upon the floor.

'Go with this taper, bring it me; Carry it on your arm; It is the book on many a sea Hath stilled the waves' alarm!'

Late the hour; dark the night; The house is solitary; Feeble is a taper's light To light poor Ann to see.

Her eyes are yet with visions bright Of sylph and river, flower and fay, Now through a narrow corridor She goes her lonely way.

Vast shadows on the heedless walls Gigantic loom, stoop low: Each little hasty footfall calls Hollowly to and fro. Now in the dark clear glass there moves A taper, mocking hers, —

A phantom face of light blue eyes, Reflecting phantom fears.

Around her loom the vacant rooms, Wind the upward stairs, She climbs on into a loneliness Only her taper shares.

Out in the dark a cold wind stirs, At every window sighs; A waning moon peers small and chill From out the cloudy skies,

Casting faint tracery on the walls; So stony still the house From cellar to attic rings the shrill Squeak of the hungry mouse.

Ann scarce can hear or breathe, so fast Her pent-up heart doth beat, When, faint along the corridor, She hears the fall of feet:—

Sounds lighter than silk slippers make Upon a ballroom floor, when sweet Violin and 'cello wake Music for twirling feet.

O! in an old unfriendly house, What shapes may not conceal Their faces in the open day, At night abroad to steal!

Even her taper seems with fear To languish small and blue; Far in the woods the winter wind Runs whistling through.

A dreadful cold plucks at each hair, Her mouth is stretched to cry, But sudden, with a gush of joy, It narrows to a sigh. 'Tis but a phantom child which comes Soft through the corridor, Singing an old forgotten song, This ancient burden bore:—

'Thorn, thorn, I wis,
And roses twain,
A red rose and a white;
Stoop in the blossom, bee, and kiss
A lonely child good-night.

'Swim fish, sing bird,
And sigh again,
I that am lost am lone,
Bee in the blossom never stirred
Locks hid beneath a stone!'—

Here eyes were of the azure fire
That hovers in wintry flame;
Her raiment wild and yellow as furze
That spouteth out the same;

And in her hand she bore no flower, But on her head a wreath Of faded flowers that did yet Smell sweetly after death. . . .

Gloomy with night the listening walls Are now that she is gone, Albeit this solitary child No longer seems alone.

Fast though her taper dwindles down, Though black the shadows come, A beauty beyond fear to dim Haunts now her alien home.

Ghosts in the world, malignant, grim,
Vex many a wood and glen,
And house and pool, — the unquiet ghosts
Of dead and restless men.

But in her grannie's house this spirit —
A child as lone as she —
Pining for love not found on earth,
Ann dreams again to see.

Seated upon her tapestry-stool, Her fairy-book laid by, She gazes into the fire, knowing She hath sweet company.

IN THE DYING OF DAYLIGHT

In the dying of the daylight — With my book, and alone — Of a sudden my heart Paused, still as a stone.

I watched, I listened; There was nothing to hear; Yet I knew, in the silence, Some living thing near.

I crept to the staircase, And stayed — there to see A child at the window Who not yet had seen me.

She had stooped her small head, In the darkening air, Low over the flowers In a bowl that was there,

Her chin on their petals; Her clear, sidelong eyes Gazing out of the glass At the light in the skies.

She was not of this earth — Lost, solitary, In the stealth of the house She was sharing with me:

Yet never have I, Awake, or at night, Seen in any strange face So intense a delight;

So hungry a gaze, Fixed, enraptured and still, On the green of the grass, And the light on the hill;

As if parched up with thirst For the loved that no more To a heart, lost to earth, Earth could ever restore.

And yet — when I turned, But scarcely had stirred, At a sound, like the note Of a late evening bird, Then looked back — she was gone; As if she, too, had heard.

THE HOUSE

A lane at the end of Old Pilgrim Street Leads on to a sheep-track over the moor, Till you come at length to where two streams meet, The brook called Liss, and the shallow Stour.

Their waters mingle and sing all day — Rushes and kingcups, rock and stone; And aloof in the valley, forlorn and gray, Is a house whence even the birds have flown.

Its ramshackle gate swings crazily; but No sickle covets its seeding grass; There's a cobbled path to a door close-shut; But no face shows at the window-glass.

No smoke wreathes up in the empty air From the chimney over its weed-green thatch; Briar and bryony ramble there; And no thumb tirls at the broken latch. Even the warbling water seems
To make lone music for none to hear;
Else is a quiet found only in dreams,
And in dreams this foreboding, though not of fear.

Yes, often at dusk-fall when nearing home — The hour of the crescent and evening star — Again to the bridge and the streams I come, Where the sedge and the rushes and kingcups are:

And I stand, and listen, and sigh — in vain; Since only of Fancy's the face I see; Yet its eyes in the twilight on mine remain, And it seems to be craving for company.

THE OLD STONE HOUSE

Nothing on the grey roof, nothing on the brown,
Only a little greening where the rain drips down;
Nobody at the window, nobody at the door,
Only a little hollow which a foot once wore;
But still I tread on tiptoe, still tiptoe on I go,
Past nettles, porch, and weedy well, for oh, I know
A friendless face is peering, and a clear still eye
Peeps closely through the casement as my step goes by.

MISERICORDIA!

Misericordia! Weep with me. Waneth the dusk light; Strange the tree; In regions barbarous Lost are we.

I, Glycera, And Silas here, Who hath hid in sleep His eyes from fear; Wan-wide are mine With a tear. Misericordia!
Was I born
Only to pluck
Disaster's thorn?
Only to stray
Forlorn?

BITTER WATERS

In a dense wood, a drear wood, Dark water is flowing; Deep, deep, beyond sounding, A flood ever flowing.

There harbours no wild bird, No wanderer stays there; Wreathed in mist, sheds pale Ishtar Her sorrowful rays there.

Take thy net; cast thy line; Manna sweet be thy baiting; Time's desolate ages Shall still find thee waiting

For quick fish to rise there, Or butterfly wooing, Or flower's honeyed beauty, Or wood-pigeon cooing.

Inland wellsprings are sweet;
But to lips, parched and dry,
Salt, salt is the savour
Of these; faint their sigh.

Bitter Babylon's waters.

Zion, distant and fair.

We hanged up our harps
On the trees that are there.

THE TRUANTS

Ere my heart beats too coldly and faintly
To remember sad things, yet be gay,
I would sing a brief song of the world's little children
Magic hath stolen away.

The primroses scattered by April,
The stars of the wide Milky Way,
Cannot outnumber the hosts of the children
Magic hath stolen away.

The buttercup green of the meadows,
The snow of the blossoming may,
Lovelier are not than the legions of children
Magic hath stolen away.

The waves tossing surf in the moonbeam,
The Albatross lone on the spray,
Alone know the tears wept in vain for the children
Magic hath stolen away.

In vain: for at hush of the evening,
When the stars twinkle into the grey,
Seems to echo the far-away calling of children
Magic hath stolen away.

LONGLEGS

Longlegs — he yelled 'Coo-ee!'
And all across the combe
Shrill and shrill it rang — rang through
The clear green gloom.
Fairies there were a-spinning,
And a white tree-maid
Lifted her eyes, and listened
In her rain-sweet glade.
Bunnie to bunnie stamped; old Wat
Chin-deep in bracken sate;
A throstle piped, 'I'm by, I'm by!'
Clear to his-timid mate.

And there was Longlegs straddling, And hearkening was he, To distant Echo thrilling back A thin 'Coo-ee!'

THE OGRE

'Tis moonlight on Trebarwith Sands, And moonlight on their seas, Lone in a cove a cottage stands Enclustered in with trees.

Snuffing its thin faint smoke afar An Ogre prowls, and he Smells supper; for where humans are, Rich dainties too may be.

Sweet as a larder to a mouse, So to him staring down, Seemed the small-windowed moonlit house, With jasmine overgrown.

He snorted, as the billows snort In darkness of the night, Betwixt his lean locks tawny-swart, He glowered on the sight.

Into the garden sweet with peas
He put his wooden shoe,
And bending back the apple trees
Crept covetously through;

Then, stooping, with an impious eye Stared through the lattice small, And spied two children which did lie Asleep, against the wall.

Into their dreams no shadow fell Of his disastrous thumb Groping discreet, and gradual, Across the quiet room. But scarce his nail had scraped the cot Wherein these children lay, As if his malice were forgot, It suddenly did stay.

For faintly in the ingle-nook
He heard a cradle-song,
That rose into his thoughts and woke Terror them among.

For she who in the kitchen sat
Darning by the fire,
Guileless of what he would be at,
Sang sweet as wind or wire: —

'Lullay, thou little tiny child, By-by, lullay, lullie; Jesu in glory, meek and mild, This night remember thee!

'Fiend, witch, and goblin, foul and wild, He deems them smoke to be; Lullay, thou little tiny child, By-by, lullay, lullie!'

The Ogre lifted up his eyes
Into the moon's pale ray,
And gazed upon her leopard-wise,
Cruel and clear as day;

He snarled in gluttony and fear — The wind blows dismally — 'Jesu in storm my lambs be near, By-by, lullay, lullie!'

And like a ravenous beast which sees The hunter's icy eye, So did this wretch in wrath confess Sweet Jesu's mastery.

With gaunt locks dangling, crouched he, then Drew backward from his prey,
Through tangled apple-boughs again
He wrenched and rent his way.

Out on Trebarwith Sands he broke, The waves yelled back his cry, Gannet and cormorant echo woke As he went striding by.

JOHN MOULDY

I spied John Mouldy in his cellar, Deep down twenty steps of stone; In the dusk he sat a-smiling, Smiling there alone.

He read no book, he snuffed no candle; The rats ran in, the rats ran out; And far and near, the drip of water Went whisp'ring about.

The dusk was still, with dew a-falling, I saw the Dog-star bleak and grim, I saw a slim brown rat of Norway Creep over him.

I spied John Mouldy in his cellar, Deep down twenty steps of stone; In the dusk he sat a-smiling, Smiling there alone.

CRAZED

I know a pool where nightshade preens Her poisonous fruitage in the moon; Where the frail aspen her shadow leans In midnight cold a-swoon.

I know a meadow flat with gold — A million million burning flowers In moon-sun's thirst their buds unfold Beneath his blazing showers. I saw a crazèd face, did I, Stare from the lattice of a mill, While the lank sails clacked idly by High on the windy hill.

THE PILGRIM

'Shall we help you with your bundle,
You old grey man?
Over hill and dell and meadow
Lighter than an owlet's shadow
We will waft it through the air,
Through blue regions shrill and bare
So you may in comfort fare —
Shall we help you with your bundle,
You old grey man?'

The Pilgrim lifted up his eyes
And saw three Fiends in the skies,
Stooping o'er that lonely place
Evil in form and face.

'Nay', he answered, 'tempt me not, O three wild Fiends! Long the journey I am wending, Yet the longest hath an ending; I must bear my bundle alone Till the day be done.'

The Fiends stared down with leaden eye, Fanning the chill air duskily, 'Twixt their hoods they stoop and cry: —

'Shall we smooth the path before you, Weary old man?
Sprinkle it green with gilded showers, Strew it o'er with painted flowers.
Lure bright birds to sing and flit In the honeyed airs of it?
Shall we smooth the path before you, Sad old man?'

'O, 'tis better silence,
Ye three wild Fiends!
Footsore am I, faint and weary,
Dark the way, forlorn and dreary,
Even so, at peace I be,
Nor want for ghostly company:
O, 'tis better silence,
Ye three wild Fiends!'

It seemed a cloud obscured the air, Lightning quivered in the gloom, And a faint voice of thunder spake Far in the high hill-hollows — 'Come!' Then, half in fury, half in dread, The Fiends drew closer down, and said:

'Nay, thou foolish fond old man, Hearken awhile! Frozen, scorched, with ice and heat, Tarry now, sit down and eat: Juice of purple grape shall be Joy and solace unto thee.

'Music of tambour, wire and wind,
Ease shall bring to heart and mind;
Wonderful sweet mouths shall sigh
Languishing and lullaby;
Turn then! Curse the dream that lures thee;
Turn thee, ere too late it be,
Lest thy three true Friends grow weary
Of comforting thee!'

The Pilgrim crouches terrified At stooping hood, and glassy face, Gloating, evil, side by side, Terror and hate brood o'er the place; He flings his withered hands on high With a bitter, breaking cry:—

'Pity have, and leave me, leave me, Ye three wild Fiends! If I lay me down in slumber Dark with death that sleep shall be; All your fruits are fruits of evil — Wrath and hate and treachery.
On mine eyes the darkness thickens, Blind, in dread, I stumble on, Cheat me not with false beguiling — Beseech ye, begone!'

And even as he spake, on high Arrows of sunlight pierced the sky Bright streamed the rain. O'er burning snow From hill to hill a wondrous Bow Of colour and fire trembled in air, Painting its heavenly beauty there.

Wild flung each Fiend a batlike hood Against that flaming light, and stood Beating the windless rain and then Rose heavy and slow with cowering head, Circled in company again, And into darkness fled.

Marvellous sweet it was to hear The waters gushing loud and clear; Marvellous happy it was to be Alone, and yet not solitary; Oh, out of terror and dark to come In sight of home!

I SAW THREE WITCHES

I saw three witches
That bowed down like barley,
And took to their brooms 'neath a louring sky,
And, mounting a storm-cloud,
Aloft on its margin,
Stood black in the silver as up they did fly.

I saw three witches
That mocked the poor sparrows
They carried in cages of wicker along,
Till a hawk from his eyrie
Swooped down like an arrow,
And smote on the cages, and ended their song.

I saw three witches
That sailed in a shallop
All turning their heads with a truculent smile
Till a bank of green osiers
Concealed their grim faces,
Though I heard them lamenting for many a mile.

I saw three witches
Asleep in a valley,
Their heads in a row, like stones in a flood,
Till the moon, creeping upward,
Looked white through the valley,
And turned them to bushes in bright scarlet bud.

THE WITCH

Weary went the old Witch, Weary of her pack, She sat her down by the churchyard wall, And jerked it off her back.

The cord brake, yes, the cord brake, Just where the dead did lie, And Charms and Spells and Sorceries Spilled out beneath the sky.

Weary was the old Witch; She rested her old eyes From the lantern-fruited yew trees, And the scarlet of the skies;

And out the dead came stumbling, From every rift and crack, Silent as moss, and plundered The gaping pack.

They wish them, three times over, Away they skip full soon: Bat and Mole and Leveret, Under the rising moon; Owl and Newt and Nightjar: They take their shapes and creep Silent as churchyard lichen, While she squats asleep.

All of these dead were stirring: Each unto each did call, 'A Witch, a Witch is sleeping Under the churchyard wall;

'A Witch, a Witch is sleeping . . .'
The shrillness ebbed away;
And up the way-worn moon clomb bright,
Hard on the track of day.

She shone, high, wan, and silvery; Day's colours paled and died: And, save the mute and creeping worm, Nought else was there beside.

Names may be writ; and mounds rise; Purporting, Here be bones: But empty is that churchyard Of all save stones.

Owl and Newt and Nightjar, Leveret, Bat, and Mole Haunt and call in the twilight Where she slept, poor soul.

THE RIDE-BY-NIGHTS

Up on their brooms the Witches stream, Crooked and black in the crescent's gleam; One foot high, and one foot low, Bearded, cloaked, and cowled, they go. 'Neath Charlie's Wain they twitter and tweet, And away they swarm 'neath the Dragon' feet, With a whoop and a flutter they swing and sway, And surge pell-mell down the Milky Way. Between the legs of the glittering Chair They hover and squeak in the empty air. Then round they swoop past the glimmering Lion To where Sirius barks behind huge Orion; Up, then, and over to wheel amain Under the silver, and home again.

AS LUCY WENT A-WALKING

As Lucy went a-walking one morning cold and fine,
There sate three crows upon a bough, and three times three are

Then 'O!' said Lucy, in the snow, 'it's very plain to see A witch has been a-walking in the fields in front of me.'

Then stept she light and heedfully across the frozen snow, And plucked a bunch of elder-twigs that near a pool did grow: And, by and by, she comes to seven shadows in one place Stretched black by seven poplar-trees against the sun's bright face.

She looks to left, she looks to right, and in the midst she sees A little pool of water clear and frozen 'neath the trees; Then down beside its margent in the crusted snow she kneels, And hears a magic belfry, ringing with sweet bells.

Clear rang the faint far merry peal, then silence on the air, And icy-still the frozen pool and poplars standing there: Then, soft, as Lucy turned her head and looked along the snow She sees a witch — a witch she sees, come frisking to and fro.

Her scarlet, buckled shoes they clicked, her heels a-twinkling high;

With mistletoe her steeple-hat bobbed as she capered by;
But never a dint, or mark, or print, in the whiteness there to see,
Though danced she light, though danced she fast, though danced
she lissomely.

It seemed 'twas diamonds in the air, or tiny flakes of frost; It seemed 'twas golden smoke around, or sunbeams lightly tossed; It seemed an elfin music like to reeds' and warblers' rose: 'Nay!' Lucy said, 'it is the wind that through the branches flows.'

And as she peeps, and as she peeps, 'tis no more one, but three, And eye of bat, and downy wing of owl within the tree, And the bells of that sweet belfry a-pealing as before, And now it is not three she sees, and now it is not four. 'O! who are ye,' sweet Lucy cries, 'that in a dreadful ring, All muffled up in brindled shawls, do caper, frisk, and spring?' 'A witch and witches, one and nine,' they straight to her reply, And look upon her narrowly, with green and needle eye.

Then Lucy sees in clouds of gold sweet cherry trees upgrow, And bushes of red roses that bloomed above the snow; She smells all faint the almond-boughs blowing so wild and fair, And doves with milky eyes ascend fluttering in the air.

Clear flowers she sees, like tulip buds, go floating by like birds, With wavering tips that warbled sweetly strange enchanted words;

And as with ropes of amethyst the twigs with lamps were hung, And clusters of green emeralds like fruit upon them clung.

'O witches nine, ye dreadful nine, O witches three times three! Whence come these wondrous things that I this Christmas morning see?'

But straight, as in a clap, when she of 'Christmas' says the word, Here is the snow, and there the sun, but never bloom nor bird;

Nor warbling flame, nor gloaming-rope of amethyst there shows, Nor bunches of green emeralds, nor belfry, well, and rose, Nor cloud of gold, nor cherry-tree, nor witch in brindled shawl, But like a dream which vanishes, so vanished were they all.

When Lucy sees, and only sees three crows upon a bough, And earthly twigs, and bushes hidden white in driven snow, Then 'O!' said Lucy, 'three times three are nine — I plainly see Some witch has been a-walking in the fields in front of me.'

THE LITTLE CREATURE

Twinkum, twankum, twirlum and twitch — My great grandam — She was a Witch; Mouse in wainscot, Saint in niche — My great grandam — She was a Witch; Deadly nightshade flowers in a ditch — My great grandam — She was a Witch;

Long though the shroud, it grows stitch by stitch — My great grandam — She was a Witch; Wean your weakling before you breech — My great grandam — She was a Witch; The fattest pig's but a double flitch — My great grandam — She was a Witch; Nightjars rattle, owls scritch — My great grandam — She was a Witch.

Pretty and small,
A mere nothing at all,
Pinned up sharp in the ghost of a shawl,
She'd straddle her down to the kirkyard wall,
And mutter and whisper and call,
And call....

Red blood out and black blood in, My Nannie says I'm a child of sin. How did I choose me my witchcraft kin? Know I as soon as dark's dreams begin Snared is my heart in a nightmare's gin; Never from terror I out may win; So dawn and dusk I pine, peak, thin, Scarcely knowing t'other from which — My great grandam — She was a Witch.

BEWITCHED

I have heard a lady this night, Lissome and jimp and slim, Calling me — calling me over the heather, 'Neath the beech boughs dusk and dim.

I have followed a lady this night, Followed her far and lone, Fox and adder and weasel know The ways that we have gone. I sit at my supper 'mid honest faces, And crumble my crust and say Nought in the long-drawn drawl of the voices Talking the hours away.

I'll go to my chamber under the gable, And the moon will lift her light In at my lattice from over the moorland Hollow and still and bright.

And I know she will shine on a lady of witchcraft, Gladness and grief to see, Who has taken my heart with her nimble fingers, Calls in my dreams to me;

Who has led me a dance by dell and dingle
My human soul to win,
Made me a changeling to my own, own mother,
A stranger to my kin.

THE CHANGELING

'Ahoy, and ahoy!'
'Twixt mocking and merry —
'Ahoy and ahoy, there,
Young man of the ferry!'

She stood on the steps
In the watery gloom —
That Changeling — 'Ahoy, there!'
She called him to come.
He came on the green wave,
He came on the grey,
Where stooped that sweet lady
That still summer's day.
He fell in a dream
Of her beautiful face,
As she sat on the thwart
And smiled in her place.
No echo his oar woke,
Float silent did they,

Past low-grazing cattle In the sweet of the hay. And still in a dream At her beauty sat he, Drifting stern foremost Down — down to the sea. Come you, then: call, When the twilight apace Brings shadow to brood On the loveliest face; You shall hear o'er the water Ring faint in the grey -'Ahoy, and ahoy, there!' And tremble away; 'Ahoy, and ahoy! . . . And tremble away.

THE COQUETTE

Yearn thou may'st: Thou shalt not see My wasting love For thee.

Lean thy tresses; Fair that fruit; Slim as warbling bird's Thy throat.

Peep thou then:
Doubt not some swain
Will of thy still decoy
Be fain.

But I? In sooth — Nay, gaze thy fill! Scorn thee I must, And will.

A SONG OF ENCHANTMENT

A Song of Enchantment I sang me there, In a green — green wood, by waters fair, Just as the words came up to me I sang it under the wild wood tree.

Widdershins turned I, singing it low, Watching the wild birds come and go; No cloud in the deep dark blue to be seen Under the thick-thatched branches green.

Twilight came; silence came; The planet of evening's silver flame; By darkening paths I wandered through Thickets trembling with drops of dew.

But the music is lost and the words are gone Of the song I sang as I sat alone, Ages and ages have fallen on me — On the wood and the pool and the elder tree.

NOW SILENT FALLS

[From Crossings]

Now silent falls the clacking mill; Sweet — sweeter smells the briar; The dew wells big on bud and twig; The glow-worm's wrapt in fire. Then sing, lully, lullay, with me, And softly, lill-lall-lo, love, 'Tis high time, and wild time, And no time, no, love!

The Western sky has vailed her rose; The night-wind to the willow Sigheth, 'Now lovely, lean thy head, Thy tresses be my pillow!'

Then sing, lully, lullay, with me, And softly, lill-lall-lo, love, 'Tis high time, and wild time, And no time, no, love!

Cries in the brake, bells in the sea: The moon o'er moor and mountain Cruddles her light from height to height, Bedazzles pool and fountain.

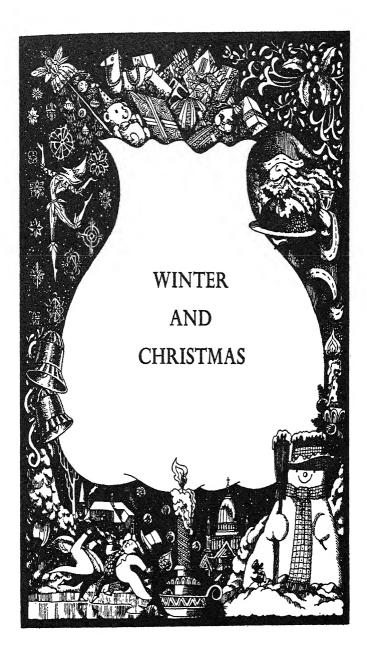

Leap, fox; hoot, owl; wail, warbler sweet: 'Tis midnight now's a-brewing; The fairy mob is all abroad, And witches at their wooing...

Then sing, lully, lullay, with me, And softly, lill-lall-lo, love, 'Tis high time, and wild time, And no time, no, love.

MELMILLO

Three and thirty birds there stood
In an elder in a wood;
Called Melmillo — flew off three,
Leaving thirty in the tree;
Called Melmillo — nine now gone,
And the boughs held twenty-one;
Called Melmillo — and eighteen
Left but three to nod and preen;
Called Melmillo — three — two — one
Now of birds were feathers none.

Then stole slim Melmillo in
To that wood all dusk and green,
And with lean long palms outspread
Softly a strange dance did tread;
Not a note of music she
Had for echoing company;
All the birds were flown to rest
In the hollow of her breast;
In the wood — thorn, elder, willow —
Danced alone — lone danced Melmillo.

WHITE

Once was a Miller, and he would say, 'I go as white as lambs in May! I go as white as rose on bush! White as the white convolvulus!'

He snapped his fingers, began to sing:—
'White, by my beard, is everything!
Meal, and chalk, and frost, and hail;
Clouds and surf and ships in sail.

'There's nowt on earth that brighter shines Than daisies, pinks and columbines; But what of ME when full moon doth show And mill and meadows are deep in snow!'

SNOW

No breath of wind,
No gleam of sun —
Still the white snow
Whirls softly down —
Twig and bough
And blade and thorn
All in an icy
Quiet, forlorn.
Whispering, rustling,
Through the air,
On sill and stone,
Roof — everywhere,

It heaps its powdery
Crystal flakes,
Of every tree
A mountain makes;
Till pale and faint
At shut of day,
Stoops from the West
One wintry ray.
And, feathered in fire,
Where ghosts the moon,
A robin shrills
His lonely tune.

THE SNOW-MAN

What shape is this in cowl of snow?
Stiff broom and icy hat?
A saffron moon, half-hidden, stares —
But what is she staring at?

The knocker dangles on the door,
But stark as tree and post
He blankly eyes the bright green paint,
Is silent as a ghost.

But wait till belfry midnight strike,
And up to the stars is tossed
Shrill cockcrow! — then, he'll gadding go —
And, at his heels, Jack Frost:

Broom over shoulder, away he'll go, Finger-tips tingling, nose aglow, Dancing and yodelling through the snow, And, at his heels, Jack Frost!

THE FIRE

Loud roared the flames On Bonner's heath, But all was crudded Snow beneath, Save where in shadow, Clip — clop — clupp, He stumbled down Who had stolen up.

LOGS

This tree, by April wreathed in flowers,
That sheened with leaves the summer hours,
In dappling shine and shade,
Now all that then was lovely lacks,
Is vanquished by the saw and axe,
And into firewood made.

How happy and gentle a daybreak song
Whispered its solemn boughs among,
At sigh of morning stirred;
It braved the dangerous lightning; rose
In splendour, crowned with winter's snows;
And sheltered every bird
That perched with slender claw and wing
To preen, to rest, to roost, to sing,
Unseen — but not unheard.

But came the Woodman with his axe
Into the sun-sweet glade;
And what was once all beauty and grace
Is into firewood made.

CAW

Ho, ho, ho, ho! Now old Winter's winds do blow! Driving down his flocks of snow. All the fields where daisies were He has frozen bleak and bare: Every bush and hedge he decks With a myriad shining flakes. Waiting for the sun to rise, They stand up like hills of ice; Glisten, gleam, and flame and burn Every dazzling hue in turn. Now the farmer's boy he goes, Scarlet ears, and redder nose, Whistling as he shuffles by -A sea of white, a cloudless sky. Now the hare peeps out to see What strange wonder this can be; And the solemn-headed rook, Perched above his hooded oak, Hoarsely caws, and shakes the snow From his sooty wing; and 'Caw!' Cries again: 'What have we here, Neighbours dear! The Magician, in one night, Has changed a world that's green to white!'

THE SCARECROW

All winter through I bow my head
Beneath the driving rain;
The North Wind powders me with snow
And blows me black again;
At midnight in a maze of stars
I flame with glittering rime,
And stand, above the stubble, stiff
As mail at morning-prime.

But when that child, called Spring, and all His host of children, come, Scattering their buds and dew upon These acres of my home, Some rapture in my rags awakes; I lift void eyes and scan The skies for crows, those ravening foes, Of my strange master, Man. I watch him striding lank behind His clashing team, and know Soon will the wheat swish body high Where once lay sterile snow; Soon shall I gaze across a sea Of sun-begotten grain, Which my unflinching watch hath sealed For harvest once again.

THE GHOST CHASE

What sight is this?... on dazzling snow, Cold as a shroud beneath the sky, Swoop into view, the valley through, Fox, horsemen, hounds — in soundless cry! Hulla! Hullo! Hulla-hoo!

Reynard himself, muzzle to brush, Is whiter than the crystal track He races over in the hush Of woods that cast no rumour back.

The voiceless hounds are white as he; Huntsman and horse — no scarlet theirs; No fleck, mark, dapple, or spot to see, White as the North — horses and mares.

They move as in a dream — no stir, No hoof-fall, music, tongue or steel — Swift as a noiseless scimitar Cutting the snows the winds congeal. Now they are gone. O dove-white yews!
O sleep-still vale! All silent lies
The calm savanna of the snows,
Beneath the blue of arctic skies!
Hullà! Hullo! Hulla-hoo!

THE HUNTSMEN

Three jolly gentlemen, In coats of red, Rode their horses Up to bed.

Three jolly gentlemen Snored till morn, Their horses champing The golden corn.

Three jolly gentlemen,
At break of day,
Came clitter-clatter down the stairs
And galloped away.

THE SUPPER

A wolf he pricks with eyes of fire
Across the dark, frost-crusted snows,
Seeking his prey,
He pads his way
Where Jane benighted goes,
Where Jane benighted goes.

He curdles the bleak air with ire,
Ruffling his hoary raiment through,
And lo! he sees
Beneath the trees
Where Jane's light footprints go,
Where Jane's light footprints go.

No hound peals thus in wicked joy,
He snaps his muzzle in the snows,
His five-clawed feet
Now scamper fleet
Where Jane's bright lanthorn shows,
Where Jane's bright lanthorn shows.

His hungry face stares out unseen
On hers as pure as wilding rose,
Her amber eyes
In fear's surprise
Watch largely as she goes,
Watch largely as she goes.

Salt wells his hunger in his jaws,
His lust it revels to and fro
Yet small beneath
A soft voice saith,
'Jane shall in safety go
Jane shall in safety go.'

He lurched as if a fiery lash
Had scourged his hide, and through, and through
His furious eyes
O'erscanned the skies,
But nearer dared not go,
But nearer dared not go.

He reared like wild Bucephalus,
His fangs like spears in him uprose,
Ev'n to the town
Jane's flitting gown
He grins on as she goes,
He grins on as she goes.

In fierce lament he howls amain,
He scampers, marvelling in his throes
What brought him there
To sup on air,
While Jane unharmèd goes,
While Jane unharmèd goes.

CAKE AND SACK

Old King Caraway Supped on cake, And a cup of sack His thirst to slake: Bird in arras And hound in hall Watched very softly Or not at all; Fire in the middle. Stone all round Changed not, heeded not, Made no sound : All by himself At the Table High He'd nibble and sip While his dreams slipped by; And when he had finished, He'd nod and say, 'Cake and sack For King Caraway!'

THE FEAST

Crackers, meringues, and pink blomonge —
Eat not for eating's sake!
But where mincepies and turkey went,
A corner keep for cake.
See, dear Mamma's best silver too —
And all for Christmas' sake!

While we sit snug within; without,
The frost bites bitter sharp.
Bleak is the tune cold Winter sings,
As shrilly rings his harp.
And dawn will whiten on a waste
Of wintry hills, and woods at rest,
Where stript of fruit are rose and thorn,
And famished birds flit mute, forlorn.

No, not a morsel good to taste, Nor drop to drink — unless there come Some friendly human, with fingers numb, To bring them dainties — such as these: Crusts, hemp-seed, marrow-bones and cheese.

NOW ALL THE ROADS

[From Crossings]

Now all the roads to London Town
Are windy-white with snow;
There's shouting and cursing,
And snortings to and fro;
But when night hangs her hundred lamps,
And the snickering frost-fires creep,
Then still, O; dale and hill, O;
Snow's fall'n deep.
Then still, O; dale and hill, O;
Snow's fall'n deep.

The carter cracks his leathery whip;
The ostler shouts Gee-whoa;
The farm dog grunts and sniffs and snuffs;
Bleat sheep; and cattle blow;
Soon Moll and Nan in dream are laid,
And snoring Dick's asleep;
Then still, O; dale and hill, O;
Snow's fall'n deep.
Then still, O; dale and hill, O;
Snow's fall'n deep.

THE SNOWFLAKE

Before I melt, Come, look at me! This lovely icy filigree! Of a great forest In one night I make a wilderness
Of white:
By skyey cold
Of crystals made,
All softly, on
Your finger laid,
I pause, that you
My beauty see:
Breathe, and I vanish
Instantly.

WINTER

Green Mistletoe!
Oh, I remember now
A dell of snow,
Frost on the bough;
None there but I:
Snow, snow, and a wintry sky.

None there but I, And footprints one by one, Zigzaggedly, Where I had run; Where shrill and powdery A robin sat in the tree.

And he whistled sweet; And I in the crusted snow With snow-clubbed feet Jigged to and fro, Till, from the day, The rose-light ebbed away.

And the robin flew
Into the air, the air,
The white mist through;
And small and rare
The night-frost fell
Into the calm and misty dell.

And the dusk gathered low, And the silver moon and stars On the frozen snow Drew taper bars, Kindled winking fires In the hooded briers.

And the sprawling Bear Growled deep in the sky; And Orion's hair Streamed sparkling by: But the North sighed low: 'Snow, snow, more snow!'

ICE

The North Wind sighed: And in a trice What was water Now is ice.

What sweet rippling Water was Now bewitched is Into glass:

White and brittle Where is seen The prisoned milfoil's Tender green;

Clear and ringing, With sun aglow, Where the boys sliding And skating go.

Now furred's each stick And stalk and blade With crystals out of Dewdrops made. Worms and ants Flies, snails and bees Keep close house-guard, Lest they freeze;

Oh, with how sad And solemn an eye Each fish stares up Into the sky.

In dread lest his Wide watery home At night shall solid Ice become.

NOWEL

Holly dark: pale Mistletoe —
Christmas Eve is come, and lo,
Wild clash the bells across the snow,
Waits in the dark streets carolling go;
'Nowel! Nowel!' they shout — and, oh,
How live out the day!
Each breath I breathe turns to a sigh;
My heart is flown away;
The things I see around me seem
Entranced with light — as in a dream;
The candles dazzle in my eyes,
And every leaping fireflame tries
To sing, what none could say.

SANTA CLAUS

'Hast thou, in Fancy, trodden where lie Leagues of ice beneath the sky? Where bergs, like palaces of light, Emerald, sapphire, crystal white, Glimmer in the polar night? Hast thou heard in dead of dark The mighty Sea-lion's shuddering bark? Seen, shuffling through the crusted snow, The blue-eyed Bears a-hunting go? And in leagues of space o'er-head — Radiant Aurora's glory spread? Hast thou?' 'Why?' 'My child, because There dwells thy loved Santa Claus '

THE QUARTETTE

Tom sang for joy and Ned sang for joy and old Sam sang for joy; All we four boys piped up loud, just like one boy; And the ladies that sate with the Squire — their cheeks were all wet,

For the noise of the voice of us boys, when we sang our Quartette.

Tom he piped low and Ned he piped low and old Sam he piped low;

Into a sorrowful fall did our music flow;

And the ladies that sate with the Squire vowed they'd never forget,

How the eyes of them cried for delight, when we sang our Quartette.

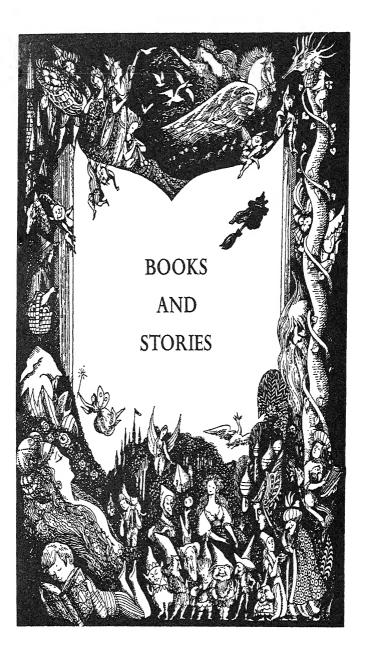

THE SECRET

Open your eyes!... Now, look, and see! Those starry tapers in the tree
Keep a promise 'twixt you and me:
Every toy and trinket there
In our secret has a share:
The Fairy on the topmost spray
Hears every single word I say:
I love — and love you: and I would Give you my life, too, if I could.

MISTLETOE

Sitting under the mistletoe (Pale-green, fairy mistletoe), One last candle burning low, All the sleepy dancers gone, Just one candle burning on, Shadows lurking everywhere: Some one came, and kissed me there.

Tired I was; my head would go Nodding under the mistletoe (Pale-green, fairy mistletoe); No footsteps came, no voice, but only, Just as I sat there, sleep, lonely, Stooped in the still and shadowy air Lips unseen — and kissed me there.

THE PICTURE-BOOK

Dear Reader, prythee, stay, and look At this delightful Picture-Book!
Others like it you'll have seen,
For eye and mind to linger in,
But surely none, for tints and tones,
Lovelier than this — by Harold Jones?
Is there a colour — earth, sky, sea,
Which from his box can missing be?
Even a Rainbow might whisper, Hush!
In envy of his paints and brush.

See with what heedful skill and grace
His patient pencil fills his space;
How stroke by stroke, and stage by stage,
He fits his pattern to the page,
And shows in every hue and line
Not only joy in his design,
But all that he takes such pleasure in.
Even his commonest objects tell
His love for what he sees so well.
And such is the delight he shows —
In stool or table, bird or rose —
That, sharing them, one hardly knows
Which for pleasure gives richer cause —
What he draws, or how he draws.

Things far and near so real are seen You'd think the air flowed in between; Yet touch of finger shows us that The page itself is paper-flat!

Look once: again: and yet again — Some fresh delight will still remain. And though (I should confess betimes), There was no need at all for rhymes, 'Twas yet the more a joy to tell, If only in headlong doggerel, What rich and lively company This Picture-Book has been to me.

THE PANTOMIME

Were those fine horses once white Mice,
Their Coachman an old Rat,
And the coach itself of the shape of a melon,
There'd be good reason that
My pen should now attempt to tell a
Tale entitled 'Cinderella'.

We see, it's true, a gentle face,
As on the haughty henchmen pace;
But nowhere any hint, alas,
Her two small slippers are made of glass.

It may be then the Stage is set
For quite a different Play; that this Vast Castle, with its moated walls,
The wild Aladdin's is—
Which, in the Scene that follows, may
Be magicked off to Africa.
Or Puss in Boots? Or Bluebeard's fell?
Or valiant Mollie Whuppie's? Well,
We guess, but cannot tell.

Or are these pennons, this wild array
To welcome one who rode away,
Pillion upon a dapple-grey,
In the flush of the morning, in month of May?
We ask, but cannot say.

LISTEN!

Quiet your faces; be crossed every thumb; Fix on me deep your eyes; And out of my mind a story shall come, Old, and lovely, and wise.

Old as the pebbles that fringe the cold seas, Lovely as apples in rain; Wise as the King who learned of the bees, Then learned of the emmets again.

Old as the fruits that in mistletoe shine; Lovely as amber, as snow; Wise as the fool who when care made to pine Cried, Hey and fol lol, lilly lo!

Old as the woods rhyming Thomas snuffed sweet, When pillion he rode with the Queen: Lovely as elf-craft; wise as the street Where the roofs of the humble are seen....

Ay, there's a stirring, there's wind in the bough; Hearken, a harp I hear ring: Like a river of water my story shall flow Like linnets of silver sing.

'SUPPOSE'

'Suppose . . . and suppose that a wild little Horse of Magic Came cantering out of the sky, With bridle of silver, and into the saddle I mounted, To fly — and to fly;

'And we stretched up into the air, fleeting on in the sunshine, A speck in the gleam On galloping hoofs, his mane in the wind out-flowing, In a shadowy stream; 'And, oh, when at last the gentle star of evening Came crinkling into the blue,

A magical castle we saw in the air, like a cloud of moonlight, As onward we flew;

'And across the green moat on the drawbridge we foamed and we snorted,

And there was a beautiful Queen

Who smiled at me strangely; and spoke to my wild little Horse, too —

A lovely and beautiful Queen;

'And she cried with delight — and delight — to her delicate maidens,

"Behold my daughter - my dear!"

And they crowned me with flowers, and then to their harps sate playing

Solemn and clear;

'And magical cakes and goblets were spread on the table; And at window the birds came in;

Hopping along with bright eyes, pecking crumbs from the platters,

And sipped of the wine;

'And splashing up — up to the roof tossed fountains of crystal; And Princes in scarlet and green Shot with their bows and arrows, and kneeled with their dishes Of fruits for the Queen;

'And we walked in a magical garden with rivers and bowers, And my bed was of ivory and gold; And the Queen breathed soft in my ear a song of enchantment — And I never grew old . . .

'And I never, never came back to the earth, oh, never and never . . .

How mother would cry and cry!

There'd be snow on the fields then, and all these sweet flowers in the winter would wither, and die . . .

^{&#}x27;Suppose . . . and suppose . . . '

THE MILLER AND HIS SON

A twangling harp for Mary, A silvery flute for John, And now we'll play the livelong day, 'The Miller and his Son.'...

'The Miller went a-walking All in the forest high, He sees three doves a-flitting Against the dark blue sky:

'Says he, "My son, now follow These doves so white and free, That cry above the forest, And surely cry to thee."

""I go, my dearest Father, But Oh! I sadly fear, These doves so white will lead me far, But never bring me near."

'He kisses the Miller, He cries, "Awhoop to ye!" And straightway through the forest Follows the wood-doves three.

'There came a sound of weeping To the Miller in his Mill; Red roses in a thicket Bloomed over near his wheel;

'Three stars shone wild and brightly Above the forest dim: But never his dearest son Returns again to him.

'The cuckoo shall call "Cuckoo!"
In vain along the vale,
The linnet, and the blackbird,
The mournful nightingale;

'The Miller hears and sees not, He's thinking of his son; His toppling wheel is silent; His grinding done.

"O doves so white!" he weepeth,
"O roses on the tree!
O stars that shine so brightly—
You shine in vain for me!"

"'I bade him, 'Follow, follow';
He said, 'O Father dear,
These doves so white will lead me far
But never bring me near!'"'...

A twangling harp for Mary, A silvery flute for John, And now we'll play the livelong day, 'The Miller and his Son.'

THE CHILD IN THE STORY GOES TO BED

I prythee, Nurse, come smooth my hair, And prythee, Nurse, unloose my shoe, And trimly turn my silken sheet Upon my quilt of gentle blue.

My pillow sweet of lavender
Smooth with an amiable hand,
And may the dark pass peacefully by
As in the hour-glass droops the sand.

Prepare my cornered manchet sweet, And in my little crystal cup Pour out the blithe and flowering mead That forthwith I may sup.

Withdraw my curtains from the night, And let the crispèd crescent shine Upon my eyelids while I sleep, And soothe me with her beams benign. Dark looms the forest far-away;
O, listen! through its empty dales
Rings from the solemn echoing boughs
The music of its nightingales.

Now quench my silver lamp, prythee, And bid the harpers harp that tune Fairies that haunt the meadowlands Sing to the stars of June.

And bid them play, though I in dreams
No longer heed their pining strains,
For I would not to silence wake
When slumber o'er my senses wanes.

You Angels bright who me defend, Enshadow me with curved wing, And keep me in the long dark night Till dawn another day shall bring.

THE CHILD IN THE STORY AWAKES

The light of dawn rose on my dreams, And from afar I seemed to hear In sleep the mellow blackbird call Hollow and sweet and clear.

I prythee, Nurse, my casement open, Wildly the garden peals with singing, And hooting through the dewy pines The goblins of the dark are winging.

O listen the droning of the bees, That in the roses take delight! And see a cloud stays in the blue Like an angel still and bright.

The gentle sky is spread like silk,
And, Nurse, the moon doth languish there,
As if it were a perfect jewel
In the morning's soft-spun hair.

The greyness of the distant hills
Is silvered in the lucid East,
See, now the sheeny-plumed cock
Wags haughtily his crest.

'O come you out, O come you out, Lily, and lavender, and lime; The kingcup swings his golden bell, And plumpy cherries drum the time.

'O come you out, O come you out! Roses, and dew, and mignonette, The sun is in the steep blue sky, Sweetly the morning star is set.'

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

The scent of bramble fills the air,
Amid her folded sheets she lies,
The gold of evening in her hair,
The blue of morn shut in her eyes.

How many a changing moon hath lit The unchanging roses of her face! Her mirror ever broods on it In silver stillness of the days.

Oft flits the moth on filmy wings Into his solitary lair; Shrill evensong the cricket sings From some still shadow in her hair.

In heat, in snow, in wind, in flood, She sleeps in lovely loneliness, Half-folded like an April bud On winter-haunted trees.

REVERIE

When slim Sophia mounts her horse And paces down the avenue, It seems an inward melody She paces to.

Each narrow hoof is lifted high
Beneath the dark enclustering pines,
A silver ray within his bit
And bridle shines.

His eye burns deep, his tail is arched, And streams upon the shadowy air, The daylight sleeks his jetty flanks, His mistress' hair.

Her habit flows in darkness down, Upon the stirrup rests her foot, Her brow is lifted, as if earth She heeded not.

'Tis silent in the avenue,
The sombre pines are mute of song,
The blue is dark, there moves no breeze
The boughs among.

When slim Sophia mounts her horse And paces down the avenue, It seems an inward melody She paces to.

KING DAVID

King David was a sorrowful man:
No cause for his sorrow had he:
And he called for the music of a hundred harps,
To solace his melancholy.

They played till they all fell silent:
Played — and play sweet did they;
But the sorrow that haunted the heart of King David
They could not charm away.

He rose; and in his garden
Walked by the moon alone,
A nightingale hidden in a cypress-tree
Jargoned on and on.

King David lifted his sad eyes
Into the dark-boughed tree—
'Tell me, thou little bird that singest,
Who taught my grief to thee?'

But the bird in no wise heeded;
And the king in the cool of the moon
Hearkened to the nightingale's sorrowfulness,
Till all his own was gone.

THEN AS NOW

Then as Now; and Now as Then, Spins on this World of Men. White — Black — Yellow — Red: They wake, work, eat, play, go to bed. Black — Yellow — Red — White: They talk, laugh, weep, dance, morn to night. Yellow — Red — White — Black: Sun shines, moon rides, clouds come back. Red — White — Black — Yellow: Count your hardest, who could tell o' The myriads that have come and gone, Stayed their stay this earth upon, And vanished then, their labour done? Sands of the wilderness, stars in heaven, Solomon could not sum them even: Then as Now; Now as Then Still spins on this World of Men.

THE OLD KING

Woke — the old King of Cumberland:
Yet breathed not nor stirred,
But crouched in the darkness, hearkening after
A voice he had heard.

He leaned upon his foursquare bed, Thumb beneath bristling chin; 'Alas, alas! — the woeful dream — The dream that I was in!'

The old, old King of Cumberland Muttered, "Twas not the sea Gushing upon Schlievlisskin rocks That wakened me.

'Thunder from midmost night it was not, For yonder at those bars Burn fiercely toward the Eastern deeps The summer stars.'

The old, old King of Cumberland Mused yet, 'Rats ever did Ramp, rustle, clink my spurs, and gnaw My coverlid.

'Oft hath a furtive midnight breeze Along this valance skirred; But in this stagnant calm 'twas not The wind I heard.

'Some keener, stranger, quieter, closer Voice it was me woke . . .'

And silence, like a billow, drowned The word he spoke.

Fixed now his stare, for limned in dark, Gazing from cowl-like hood, Stark in the vague, all-listening night, A shadow stood.

Sudden a gigantic hand he thrust Into his bosom cold, Where now no surging restless beat Its long tale told.

Swept on him then, as there he sate, Terror icy chill:

'Twas silence that had him awoke — His heart stood still.

THE CORNER

Good News to tell!
Oh, mark it well!
Old Mister Jones,
Once all but bones —
There never was
A sight forlorner —
At last, at last,
All danger past,
Has been and gone and
Turned the corner;
And every hour
Is growing younger.

A week ago, By Almanac, His long white beard Went jetty black, The red into his cheeks Came back. His teeth were sharp And thirty-two, His faded eyes A bright bird-blue. When two-three days Were scarcely run, He slips from forty To twenty-one; He skips and dances, Heel and toe: He couldn't downwards Quicker grow. All that he'd learned Began to go; His memory melted Just like snow.

At plump four foot
He burst his stitches,
His trousers dwindled
Back to breeches;
The breeches gone,
There came short clothes,
Two dumpling cheeks,
A button nose,
A mop of curls,
Ten crinkled toes.
And now as fast
As he is able
He's nestling down
Into his cradle.

Old Mrs. Jones,
With piping eye,
She rocks, and croons
Him Hushaby.
Last Sunday gone,
He turned the corner,
And still grows
Younger, younger, younger...
Old Mister Jones.

MUST AND MAY

Must and May they were two half-brothers, And Must — a giant was he: And May but a wisp of a flibbetigibbet, A mere minikin manikinee.

They dwelt in a mansion called Oughtoo, yes, Oughtoo, And a drearisome house was she. In an hundred great chambers Must wallowed in comfort, All at his ease to be.

And the hundred and first was a crack of a cupboard, With nought but a hole for the key, Where the glint of a glimmer of a quickle of sunshine Gleamed in about half-past three. And there our May, smiling up at the window —
At the place where the window should be;
As he sang to a harp with a top and a bottom string —
A—B—C—D—E—F— and G.

But if there was one thing Must could not instomach,
'Twas a treble-shrill fiddlededee,
And he vowed a great vow he would learn May his manners,
And he did — as you'll shortly agree.

Down — down — he collumbered; and with ear to the keyhole He crouched upon bended knee;

And he roared with a roar that drowned the sweet harp-strings, He roared like a storm at sea.

And he catched little May by the twist of his breeches
Where the slack is snipped out in a V;
And swallowed him whole; and he scrunched up his harp, too,
He was so an—ga—ree.

Now mutterers say that that Oughtoo is haunted, Exactly at half-past three, By the phantom of poor little May to fey harp-strings Singing A, B, C, D, E. F. G.

TILLIE

Old Tillie Turveycombe
Sat to sew,
Just where a patch of fern did grow;
There, as she yawned,
And yawn wide did she,
Floated some seed
Down her gull-e-t;
And look you once,
And look you twice,
Poor old Tillie
Was gone in a trice.
But oh, when the wind
Do a-moaning come,

'Tis poor old Tillie Sick for home; And oh, when a voice In the mist do sigh, Old Tillie Turveycombe's Floating by.

SAM'S THREE WISHES: OR LIFE'S LITTLE WHIRLIGIG

'I'm thinking and thinking', said old Sam Shore, 'Twere somebody knocking I heard at the door.'

From the clock popped the cuckoo and cuckooed out eight, As there in his chair he wondering sate . . . 'There's no-one I knows on would come so late, A-clicking the latch of an empty house With nobbut inside 'un but me and a mouse. . . . Maybe a-waking in sleep I be, And 'twere out of a dream came that tapping to me.' At length he cautiously rose, and went, And with thumb upon latch awhile listening bent, Then slowly drew open the door. And behold! There stood a Fairy — all green and gold, Mantled up warm against dark and cold, And smiling up into his candle shine, Lips like wax, and cheeks like wine, As saucy and winsome a thing to see As are linden buds on a linden tree.

Stock-still in the doorway stood simple Sam, A-ducking his head, with 'Good-e'en to 'ee, Ma'am.'

Dame Fairy she nods, and cries clear and sweet, 'Tis a very good-e'en, sir, when such folks meet. I know thee, Sam, though thou wist not of me, And I come in late gloaming to speak with thee; Though eyes do dazzle at glint of your rush, All under this pretty green fuchsia bush.' Sam ducked once more, smiling simple and slow. Like the warbling of birds her words did flow, And she laughed, very merry, to see how true Shone the old man's kindness his courtesy through. And she nodded her head, and the stars on high Sparkled down on her smallness from out of the sky.

'A friend is a friend, Sam, and wonderful pleasant,
And I'm come for old sake's sake to bring thee a present.
Three wishes, three wishes are thine, Sam Shore,
Just three wishes — and wish no more.
All for because, ruby-ripe to see,
The pixy-pears burn in yon hawthorn tree,
And the old milch cow, wheresoever she goes,
Never crops over the fairy-knowes.
Ay, Sam, thou art old and thy house is lone,
But there's Potencies round thee, and here is one!'

Poor Sam, he stared: and the stars o'erhead A shimmering light on the elm-tops shed. Like rilling of water her voice rang sweet, And the night-wind sighed at the sound of it. He frowned — glanced back at the empty grate, And shook very slowly his grey old pate: 'Three wishes, my dear! Why, I scarcely knows Which be my crany and which my toes. But I thank 'ee, Ma'am, kindly, and this I'd say, That the night of your passing is Michaelmas Day; And if it were company come on a sudden, 'Why, I'd ax for a fat goose to fry in the oven!'

And lo, and forsooth! as the words he was uttering, A rich puff of air set his candle a-guttering, And there rose in the kitchen a sizzling and sputtering, With a crackling of sparks and of flames a great fluttering, And — of which there could not be two opinions — A smoking-hot savour of sage and onions.

Beam, wall and flagstones the kitchen was lit, Every dark corner and cranny of it, With the blaze from the hearthstone. Copper and brass Winked back the winking of platter and glass.

And a wonderful squeaking of mice went up
At the smell of a Michaelmas supper to sup —
Unctuous odours that wreathed and swirled
Where'er frisked a whisker or mouse-tail twirled,
While out of the chimney up into the night
That ne'er-to-be-snuffed-too-much smoke took flight.

'That's one,' says the Fairy, finger on thumb, 'So now, Mister Sam, there's but two to come!' She leaned her head sidelong; she lifted her chin, With a twinkling of eye from the radiance within. Poor Sam stood stounded: he says, says he, 'I wish my old Mother was back with me, For if there was one thing she couldn't refuse 'Twas a sweet thick slice from the breast of a goose.' But his cheek grew stiff, and his eyes stared bright, For there, on her stick, pushing out of the night, Tap-tapping along, herself and no other, Came who but the shape of his dear old Mother! Straight into the kitchen she hastened and went, Her breath coming quick as if all but spent, 'Why, Sam,' says she, 'the bird be turning, For my nose tells I that the skin's a-burning!' And down at the oven the ghost of her sat, And basted the goose with the boiling fat.

'Oho,' cries the Fairy, sweet and small,
'Another wish gone will leave nothing at all.'
And Sam sighs, 'Bless'ee, Ma'am, keep the other,
There's nowt that I want now I have my Mother.'
But the Fairy laughs softly, and says, says she,
'There's one wish left, Sam, I promised'ee three.
Hasten thy wits, the hour creeps on,
There's calling afield, and I'm soon to be gone.
Soon as haps midnight the cocks will crow,
And me to the gathering and feasting must go.'

Sam gazed at his Mother — withered and wan, The rose in her cheek, her bright hair, gone, And her poor old back bent double with years — And he scarce could speak for the salt, salt tears. 'Well, well,' he says, 'I'm unspeakable glad:
But — it bain't quite the same as when I was a lad.
There's joy and there's joy, Ma'am, but to tell 'ee the truth
There's none can compare with the joy of one's youth.
And if it was possible, how could I choose
But be back in boy's breeches to eat the goose;
And all the old things — and my Mother the most,
To shine again real as my own gatepost.
What wouldn't I give, too, to see again wag
The dumpity tail of my old dog, Shag!
Your kindness, Ma'am: but all wishing was vain
Unless us can both be young again.'

A shrill, faint laughter from nowhere came . . . Empty the dark in the candle-flame . . .

And there stood our Sam, about four foot high, Snub nose, shock hair, and round blue eye. Breeches and braces, and coat of him too, Shirt on his back, and each clodhopping shoe Had shrunk to a nicety — button and hem To fit the small Sammie tucked up into them. There was his Mother, too; smooth, clear cheek, Lips as sooth as blackbird's beak, Pretty arched eyebrows, the daintiest nose — While the smoke of the baking deliciously rose.

'Come, Sammie,' she cries, 'your old Mammikin's joy, Climb up on your stool, supper's ready, my boy. Bring in the candle, and shut out the night; There's goose, baked taties and cabbage to bite. Why, bless the wee lamb, he's all shiver and shake, And you'd think from the look of him scarcely awake! If 'ee glour wi' those eyes, Sam, so dark and round, The elves will away with 'ee, I'll be bound!'

So Sam and his mother by wishes three Were made just as happy as happy can be.
And there — with a bumpity tail to wag —
Sat laughing, with tongue out, their old dog, Shag.
To clatter of platter, bones, giblets, and juice,
Between them they ate up the whole of the goose.

But time is a river for ever in flow, The weeks went by as the weeks must go. Soon fifty-two to a year did grow. The long years passed, one after another, Making older and older our Sam and his Mother: And, alas and alack, with nine of them gone, Poor Shag lay asleep again under a stone. And a sorrowful dread would sometimes creep Into Sam's dreams, as he lay asleep, That his Mother was lost, and away he'd fare, Calling her, calling her, everywhere, In dark, in rain, by roads unknown, Under echoing hills, and alone, alone. What bliss in the morning to wake and see The sun shining green in the linden tree, And out of that dream's dark shadowiness To slip in on his Mother and give her a kiss, Then go whistling off in the dew to hear The thrushes all mocking him, sweet and clear.

Still, moon after moon from heaven above
Shone on Mother and son, and made light of love.
Her roses faded, her pretty brown hair
Had sorrowful grey in it everywhere.
And at last she died, and was laid to rest,
Her tired hands crossed on her shrunken breast.
And Sam, now lonely, lived on and on
Till most of his workaday life seemed gone.

Yet spring came again with its green and blue, And presently summer's wild roses too, Pinks, Sweet William, and sops-in-wine, Blackberry, lavender, eglantine. And when these had blossomed and gone their way, 'Twas apples, and daisies and Michaelmas Day — Yes, spider-webs, dew, and haws in the may, And seraphs singing in Michaelmas Day.

Sam worked all morning and couldn't get rest For a kind of a feeling of grief in his breast. And yet, not grief, but something more Like the thought that what happens has happened before. He fed the chickens, he fed the sow,
On a three-legged stool sate down to the cow,
With a pail 'twixt his legs in the green of the meadow,
Under the elm trees' lengthening shadow;
And woke at last with a smile and a sigh
To find he had milked his poor Jingo dry.

As dusk set in, the birds did seem To be calling and whistling from out of a dream. He chopped up kindling, shut up his shed, In a bucket of well-water soused his head To freshen his eyes up a little and make The drowsy old wits of him wider awake. As neat as a womanless creature is able He swept up his hearthstone, and laid the table. And then o'er his platter and mug, if you please, Sate gloomily gooming at loaf and cheese -Gooming and gooming as if the mere sight Of his victuals could satisfy appetite! And the longer and longer he looked at them, The slimmer slimmed upward his candle flame, Blue in the air. And when squeaked a mouse 'Twas loud as a trump in the hush of the house. Then, sudden, a soft little wind puffed by, 'Twixt the thick-thatched roof and the star-sown sky; And died . . . And then That deep, dead, wonderful silence again.

Then — soft as a rattle counting her seeds
In the midst of a tangle of withered-up weeds —
Came a faint, faint knocking, a rustle like silk,
And a breath at the keyhole as soft as milk —
Still as the flit of a moth. And then . . .
That infinitesimal knocking again.

Sam lifted his chin from his fists. He listened. His wandering eyes in the candle glistened. Then slowly, slowly, rolled round by degrees — And there sat a mouse on the top of his cheese. He stared at this Midget, and it at him, Over the edge of his mug's round rim,

And — as if it were Christian — he says, 'Did 'ee hear A faint little tap-tap-tap-tapping, my dear? You was at supper, and me in a maze, 'Tis dark for a caller in these lone days, There's nowt in the larder. We're both of us old, And all of my loved ones sleep under the mould, And yet — and yet — as I've told 'ee before . . .'

But if Sam's story you'd read to the end,
Turn back to page 1, and press onward, dear friend;
Yes, if you would stave the last note of this song,
Turn back to page primus, and warble along!
For all sober records of life (come to write 'em),
Are bound to continue — well — ad infinitum!

PIGS

A cock it was, in the stable yard,
That reared its crest with shimmering plume,
And crowed till all the fields around
Re-echoed in the gloom.

Up got the landlord, and looked out —
'What ails the bird! So shrill he cries!'
How should he dream this farmyard prince
Was more than earthly wise?

How should he dream that over the bridge That spans the lilies of Ullone The Witch of the Woods now winsome rides Her milk-white ass upon?

And down she comes with nodding flowers
Into the Inn's cool quietness;

'Heh, bring me butter and honeycomb,
And I this house will bless!'

She breaks with finger and with thumb The waxen honeycomb; she quaffs Of the sweet buttermilk; and turns — Turns to the house and laughs: 'Mimsey and mo, I thirsty was!' Then looks she on the garden fruits, Which hung upon the branches green Bowed almost to the roots.

'Prythee,' she says, 'my pigs let come Into your orchard when the moon Eyes with a red and fiery face The harvest of Ullone.'

Says he, 'Small custom comes this way. Can man make cider out of mast! With all my apples fattening pigs, What's left for me at last?

With all my codlins crunched for ham —' His rage broke out, his green eyes shone -'Thou muncher of poor man's honeycomb! Begone, thou Witch, begone!'

He frowned upon her waxen cheek, Her sloe-black eyes, her smooth-drawn hair; And she looked back, the woeful witch, Straddling her saddle there.

She lightly plucked her bridle rein, She wheeled her milk-white ass aside, And, stooping in her laughter, turned: But not one word replied . . .

And soon it was the midnight hour; And large the moon was mounted up Into the night's dark hollow roof, When came her pigs to sup.

They pattered like hailstones over the bridge, And, like the mandrake, squealed: and soon In the deep orchard-grasses lay

No fruit beneath the moon.

Then cried the landlord, peeping out -'Oddslife! and I no payment take!' — And out into the yard he stole, His burning ire to slake.

Sticks — sticks he in his knife, plumb-deep When, suddenly, like a story told,
Age, like a withered mantle, falls,
And all things doth enfold.

He sees his Inn a ruin hoar, Mantled with ivy thick and close, Wherein a host of fearless birds In tumult comes and goes.

He sees his gnarled grey apple trees Bent like old men, and fruitless all; He sees a broken bridge lead down To a wild waterfall.

And on the hand that holds his knife
Age hath turned white the scattered hairs;
And in his ear a wind makes moan
In drear and dreamy airs. . . .

Still stoops that green and mantled Inn; Still o'er the mixen, lank doth range Old Chanticleer with wattles wan, And whoop unearthly strange.

The old fox skulks, more grey than red, Between the lichen-cankered boles; And all about the blackened thatch The starlings make their holes.

And from a window dense in leaves
And smitten with the first moonbeam,
An owl-face peers, whose real is now
The sorcery of a dream.

And still, when autumn spiders spin, And Michael's daisy spreads its mauve, Out from the gloom of dark Ullone Ramp piglings, drove on drove.

Then dwindles one lone ghostly crow; Hesper a silver arrow flings; And faint from out of the far-away, A snow-white blackbird sings.

THE THIEF AT ROBIN'S CASTLE

There came a Thief one night to Robin's Castle, He climbed up into a Tree;

And sitting with his head among the branches, A wondrous Sight did see.

For there was Robin supping at his table, With Candles of pure Wax,

His Dame and his two beauteous little Children, With Velvet on their backs.

Platters for each there were shin-shining, Of Silver many a pound,

And all of beaten Gold, three brimming Goblets, Standing the table round.

The smell that rose up richly from the Baked Meats Came thinning amid the boughs,

And much that greedy Thief who snuffed the night air — His Hunger did arouse.

He watched them eating, drinking, laughing, talking, Busy with finger and spoon,

While three most cunning Fiddlers, clad in crimson, Played them a supper-tune.

And he waited in the tree-top like a Starling, Till the Moon was gotten low;

When all the windows in the walls were darkened, He softly in did go.

There Robin and his Dame in bed were sleeping, And his Children young and fair;

Only Robin's Hounds from their warm kennels Yelped as he climbed the stair.

All, all were sleeping, page and fiddler, Cook, scullion, free from care;

Only Robin's Stallions from their stables Neighed as he climbed the stair.

A wee wan light the Moon did shed him, Hanging above the sea,

And he counted into his bag (of beaten Silver) Platters thirty-three.

Of Spoons three score; of jolly golden Goblets He stowed in four save one,

And six fine three-branched Cupid Candlesticks, Before his work was done.

Nine bulging bags of Money in a cupboard,
Two Snuffers and a Dish

He found, the last all studded with great Garnets And shapen like a Fish.

Then tiptoe up he stole into a Chamber, Where on Tasselled Pillows lay Robin and his Dame in dreaming slumber, Tired with the summer's day.

That Thief he mimbled round him in the gloaming, Their Treasures for to spy,

Combs, Brooches, Chains, and Rings, and Pins and Buckles All higgledy piggle-dy.

A Watch shaped in the shape of a flat Apple In purest Crystal set,

He lifted from the hook where it was ticking And crammed in his Pochette.

He heaped the pretty Baubles on the table, Trinkets, Knick-knackerie,

Pearls, Diamonds, Sapphires, Topazes, and Opals — All in his bag put he.

And there in night's pale Gloom was Robin dreaming He was hunting the mountain Bear,

While his Dame in peaceful slumber in no wise heeded A greedy Thief was there.

And that ravenous Thief he climbed up even higher, Till into a chamber small

He crept where lay poor Robin's beauteous Children, Lovelier in sleep withal.

Oh, fairer was their Hair than Gold of Goblet, 'Yond Silver their Cheeks did shine,

And their little hands that lay upon the linen Made that Thief's hard heart to pine. But though a moment there his hard heart faltered, Eftsoons he took the twain,

Slipped them into his Bag with all his Plunder, And softly stole down again.

Spoon, Platter, Goblet, Ducats, Dishes, Trinkets, And those two Children dear,

A-quaking in the clinking and the clanking, And half bemused with fear,

He carried down the stairs into the Courtyard, But there he made no stay,

He just tied up his Garters, took a deep breath, And ran like the wind away.

Past Forest, River, Mountain, River, Forest — He coursed the whole night through,

Till morning found him come into a Country, Where none his bad face knew.

Past Mountain, River, Forest, River, Mountain — That Thief's lean shanks sped on,

Till Evening found him knocking at a Dark House, His breath now well-nigh gone.

There came a little maid and asked his Business; A Cobbler dwelt within;

And though she much disliked the Bag he carried, She led the Bad Man in.

He bargained with the Cobbler for a lodging And soft laid down his Sack —

In the Dead of Night, with none to spy or listen — From off his weary Back.

And he taught the little Chicks to call him Father, And he sold his stolen Pelf,

And bought a Palace, Horses, Slaves, and Peacocks, To ease his wicked self.

And though the Children never really loved him, He was rich past all belief;

While Robin and his Dame o'er Delf and Pewter Spent all their Days in Grief.

BOOKS

A boy called Jack, as I've been told,
Would sit for hours — good as gold —
Not with a pie, like Master Horner,
And plums, for dainties, in his corner,
But silent in some chosen nook,
And spell-bound — by a story-book!
Whether the dawn brought sun or rain,
Back to its pages he'd hasten again;
He had even wheedled from his friends
A secret hoard of candle-ends,
And — slumber far from his round head —
Would read, till dead of night — in bed!

How often his mother would sigh, and cry—
'Up Jack, and put that trumpery by!
See, Spring is in the sky!
The swallow is here, the thorn's in blow—
Crimson, pink, and driven snow;
Lambs caper in the fields; and there,
Cuckoo flies calling through the air;
Oh, why stay in? Oh, why?'

And Jack would smile . . . No wonder! He In books found marvellous company, Wonder, romance, and mystery. He pined to follow, on and on, Sailors on strange adventure gone; With travellers to rove, and scan Regions untrodden by mortal man. Eyes shining, breathless, cramped, stock-still, Lost in these dreams he'd crouch until The fancied all but seemed the real. Tales old or new he read with zest, But some he loved beyond the rest: —

That other Jack's, whose magic Beans Led skyward to a Giant's demesnes — His Money Bags, Harp — centuries old, The Hen that laid him eggs of gold: And starving Dick's who ran away, But heard Bow Bells up Highgate Way, Entreating him turn back again. The which he did. And not in vain! Since close behind him, sleek and spruce, Came trotting on his faithful Puss. 'Twas she who rid the soot-black Chief Of rats in myriads past belief, Which, when he lay in deep repose, Would nip his fingers, gnaw his toes; And while at meat he sat, in State, Would drag the beef bones off his plate! A mort of money, in coffers fat, This Moor paid down for such a Cat. These shipped, Dick then sailed home at once, With casks cram-full of precious stones: And, having given her all he had brought her, Won for his bride his master's daughter (A lass as sweet as she was fair), And thrice was London's loved Lord Mayor.

Gulliver, too; who, shipwrecked, woke, Arms, legs pegged down by pygmy folk, With needle arrows, bows of gut, Who fifteen hundred horses brought, And dragged him off to Lilliput. When two explored his box of snuff They nearly sneezed their cranies off. Pitching a ladder against his side, They rambled over him, far and wide — As emmets on a pumpkin creep. They fed him fat on tiny sheep; Startled, like birds, at every wink, Poured puncheons down his throat for drink. Church-high he paced along their streets; For handkerchiefs they gave him sheets; And when they went to War, then he Tugged their whole Navy out to sea.

He sailed once more, was wrecked again, And seized by a Brobdingnagian, Huge as an oak, his shoes to match, And hair as thick as farmyard thatch, Teeth like small milestones, eyes beside, Like green glass marbles a cubit wide. These towering bumpkins roared to see A human imp minute as he; Made him a mock, a toy — and worse, Gave him a child to be his Nurse, Fifty feet high. Her plaits of hair Swung like gold hawsers in the air, Her ribbons fluttered wide and far Like pennons on a ship of war. She loved him dearly — gentle soul, Far more than even her favourite doll; And made two boxes for the waif, To carry him and keep him safe. The woes he faced! — the horrid Ape Which dandled him upon its lap, Then snatched him up and scuttled off To sport with him upon a roof Whose rain-pipes when in overflow Poured down five hundred feet below. Perils beset him everywhere; 'Twas death to topple off a chair. In nick of time he pinked a rat Ferocious as a tiger-cat; And, like Duke Clarence, drowned did seem When rescued from a bowl of cream. But courage will on danger thrive; Not only cowards come home alive!

And Sindbad — tranced on Indian deep, When shades of night began to creep — Who took for land a Whale, asleep! And, pushing off in a small boat, To where this Monster lay afloat, With his three shipmates, scrambled up Its steep and slippery side — to sup.

There, having heaped the sun-dried wrack, They lit a bonfire on its back. A whisper through the Creature ran — 'Beware! Arouse thee! Danger! Man!' It stirred; it woke; its drowsy eye Fixed on the flame-flushed company — Turban, sash, and matted hair — Feasting, singing, carousing there. There came a swirl of flukes and fin -And then was nought where Whale had been! Only a watery waste of sea Where a strange Island had seemed to be! And in its moonlight one black head -Sindbad's, aghast with terror and dread, His boon companions — drowned — and dead. Ay, and 'twas Sindbad, too, who found -When on a real isle marooned, A Roc's egg — fifty paces round. Teeth chattering, blanched with fear, he heard The wing-beat of the mother-bird, Like distant thunder on the air; And — darkening day — her shadow there, In heaven. Down she swooped to rest, A riot of splendour, on her nest. Nearer, at length, he dared to draw, And tied his body to her claw, Scaled as with mail, its talons trim, But broader than a weaver's beam. She rose, soared high, and alighted in A valley where a stream had been — A gaunt and haunted wild abyss, Scarped with a dizzying precipice. And Sindbad stood, like one who is stunned, At sight of a huge diamond — Flashing its lightnings through the air. Nay, thousands of blazing gems were there In heaps — like apples in a pie. And lo! aloft, against the sky, Wheeled screaming eagles, starved for meat. And merchants came . . .

But every bit

Of these strange voyages Jack knew All but by heart; and Crusoe's, too. Bandage his eyes, I vow he would Not falter in his Solitude! —
The wreck, the footprint, the stockade, Cave, parrot, cats; the pots he made. 'Neath its great stars at will he'd rove Hill and valley, creek and cove. So close and often the tale he had read He knew the Island as Friday did; As if from home himself he'd run, Worn Crusoe's goatskins, fired his gun.

Our Jack loved all. As dear to him The tales of Andersen and Grimm. He had roamed their pages through and through — The Seven Swans; Rapunzel, too; The Gnome whose secret was his name; Hansel and Gretel, who weeping came To a cottage of cake and sweetmeats made, Which, for a trap, a Witch had laid. And Snow-White, whom the Dwarfs took in To guard her from the wicked Queen. She, envious of her lovely face, Came, painted, to her hiding-place, With poisoned comb, and bodice-lace. 'Taste Sweet!' her wheedling tongue besought, When she the fatal apple brought -Pleasant to eye and sweet to lip. One morsel; and in trance-like sleep -A dreamless slumber, heavy as lead — Poor Snow-White lay like one who is dead. At evening from their copper mine The merry Dwarfs came home to dine. They found their Snow-White cold and still As a wraith of flowers on an April hill. Oh bitter grief! Alas! Alas! They made her a coffin of crystal glass; There to this day aswoon to lie,

Had not a Prince come riding by, Who, marvelling at her loveliness, Stooped low, and waked her — with a kiss. Poetry, too, was Jack's delight; He even rhymed in dreams at night; Roving where every stream and tree The haunt was of divinity; Where lorn Esnalda, lost, astray, In a wide forest, green with May, Was found by an Elfin, and rode away Pillion, upon a dapple-grey. Knee-deep in flowers, sweet and wan, He heard the enticing pipes of Pan; And — where the waves in foam of snow Shine in the gilding after-glow ---Hearkened, afar, that echoing Shrill song the lovely sirens sing, At eve in their rock-bound solitude. Well, well — so Jack would sit and brood. Book-crazed was he, and still read on; His heart was where his eyes were gone. Friends would come knocking might and main, Make faces through the window-pane, Call, whistle, taunt him — all in vain. He hardly heeded what they said, Lowered an inch or two his head. And once more read — and read — and — read. Ev'n finish a tale he would, and then Devour it, every word, again! All which is how, one might suppose, A Jack into a bookworm grows -A wretched thing, of paper made, Timid, half-blind, caged-in, afraid; And quite unable to enjoy

What pleases any other boy.
Never believe it! What Jack read
Refreshed his senses, heart, and head.
Words were to him not merely words—
Their sounds rang sweet as bells, or birds;

Nor could he tell, by any test, Whether he loved — he once confessed — Their music, or their meaning, best. And all they pictured clearer was Than things seen in a looking-glass. Like an old pedlar with his pack, As light as air upon his back — His story finished, through and through, Its scenes still sweet in memory, too, He'd shut his book, a moment sit, Inwardly musing over it, Then stretch his legs, forsake his seat, Blink his bright eyes, glance up and see Perhaps a flower, bird, or bee, Or green leaves dancing in a tree -Would stand an instant, mute and dazed, Then out he'd run, as if half-crazed, Shouting and leaping with delight; Yes, even at the commonest sight — Hedgerow in leaf, or finch on twig, As glad and merry as a grig. He loved to lie, his daydream eye Fixed on a blue, or starry sky, Watching the clouds, or listening To every note a wren can sing, To every caw a rook can caw, Ravished at what he heard and saw -The green of moss, a radiant drop Of water in a bramble-cup. Which pleased him most no tongue could tell — To look or listen, taste or smell!...

This seems to me at least to hint,
That if we give what wits we have
To Books, as Jack himself them gave —
To all we read a willing slave —
The while we dream, delight, and think,
The words a precious meat and drink,
And keep as lively as a spink,
There's not much harm in printer's ink.

THE BOOKWORM

'I'm tired - oh, tired of books,' said Jack, 'I long for meadows green, And woods where shadowy violets Nod their cool leaves between; I long to see the ploughman stride His darkening acres o'er, To hear the hoarse sea-waters drive Their billows 'gainst the shore; I long to watch the sea-mew wheel Back to her rock-perched mate; Or, where the breathing cows are housed. Lean, dreaming, at the gate. Something has gone, and ink and print Will never bring it back; I long for the green fields again, I'm tired of books,' said Jack.

TARTARY

If I were Lord of Tartary,
Myself, and me alone,
My bed should be of ivory,
Of beaten gold my throne;
And in my court should peacocks flaunt,
And in my forests tigers haunt,
And in my pools great fishes slant
Their fins athwart the sun.

If I were Lord of Tartary,
Trumpeters every day
To all my meals should summon me,
And in my courtyards bray;
And in the evening lamps should shine,
Yellow as honey, red as wine,
While harp, and flute, and mandoline
Made music sweet and gay.

If I were Lord of Tartary,
I'd wear a robe of beads,
White, and gold, and green they'd be —
And small and thick as seeds;
And ere should wane the morning star,
I'd don my robe and scimitar,
And zebras seven should draw my car
Through Tartary's dark glades.

Lord of the fruits of Tartary,
Her rivers silver-pale!
Lord of the hills of Tartary,
Glen, thicket, wood, and dale!
Her flashing stars, her scented breeze,
Her trembling lakes, like foamless seas,
Her bird-delighting citron-trees,
In every purple vale!

NOON

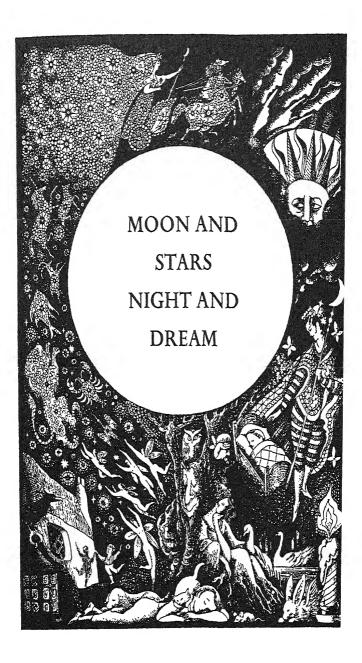

Few and faint a bird's small notes
Stirred on the air and died away
Among the wind-enticing leaves;
And everywhere the crimson may
Lapped in the sun-sweet silence bloomed;
And, lost in lovely reverie,
A mirrored swan upon a pool
Floated beneath a willow tree.

THE SONG OF FINIS

At the edge of All the Ages
A Knight sate on his steed,
His armour red and thin with rust,
His soul from sorrow freed;
And he lifted up his visor
From a face of skin and bone,
And his horse turned head and whinnied
As the twain stood there alone.

No Bird above that steep of time Sang of a livelong quest; No wind breathed, Rest:

'Lone for an end!' cried Knight to steed, Loosed an eager rein— Charged with his challenge into Space: And quiet did quiet remain.

SUMMER EVENING

The sandy cat by the Farmer's chair Mews at his knee for dainty fare; Old Rover in his moss-greened house Mumbles a bone, and barks at a mouse. In the dewy fields the cattle lie Chewing the cud 'neath a fading sky; Dobbin at manger pulls his hay: Gone is another summer's day.

NOD

Softly along the road of evening,
In a twilight dim with rose,
Wrinkled with age, and drenched with dew,
Old Nod, the shepherd, goes.

His drowsy flock streams on before him, Their fleeces charged with gold, To where the sun's last beam leans low On Nod the shepherd's fold.

The hedge is quick and green with brier, From their sand the conies creep; And all the birds that fly in heaven Flock singing home to sleep.

His lambs outnumber a noon's roses, Yet, when night's shadows fall, His blind old sheep-dog, Slumber-soon, Misses not one of all. His are the quiet steeps of dreamland, The waters of no-more-pain, His ram's bell rings 'neath an arch of stars, 'Rest, rest and rest again.'

SUPPER

I supped where bloomed the red red rose, And a bird in the tree Looked on my sweet white bread and whistled Tunes to me.

And a wasp prowled in the evening light, My honey all about; And the martin to her sun-baked nest Swept in and out.

I sat so still in the garden
That wasp and leaf and bird
Seemed as I dreamed the only things
That had ever stirred.

MRS. MACQUEEN

With glass like a bull's-eye, And shutters of green, Down on the cobbles Lives Mrs. MacQueen.

At six she rises;
At nine you see
Her candle shine out
In the linden tree;

And at half-past nine
Not a sound is nigh,
But the bright moon's creeping
Across the sky;

Or a far dog baying;
Or a twittering bird
In its drowsy nest,
In the darkness stirred:

Or like the roar Of a distant sea, A long-drawn S-s-sh! In the linden tree.

NIGHTFALL

The last light fails — that shallow pool of day!
The coursers of the dark stamp down to drink,
Arch their wild necks, lift their wild heads and neigh;
Their drivers, gathering at the water-brink,
With eyes ashine from out their clustering hair,
Utter their hollow speech, or gaze afar,
Rapt in irradiant reverie, to where
Languishes, lost in light, the evening star.
Come the wood-nymphs to dance within the glooms,
Calling these charioteers with timbrels' din;
Ashen with twilight the dark forest looms
O'er the nocturnal beasts that prowl within.
'O glory of beauty which the world makes fair!'
Pant they their serenading on the air.

Sound the loud hooves, and all abroad the sky
The lusty charioteers their stations take;
Planet to planet do the sweet Loves fly,
And in the zenith silver music wake.
Cities of men, in blindness hidden low,
Fume their faint flames to that arched firmament,
But all the dwellers in the lonely know
The unearthly are abroad, and weary and spent,
With rush extinguished, to their dreaming go.
And world and night and star-enclustered space
The glory of beauty are in one enravished face.

THE RAVEN'S TOMB

'Build me my tomb,' the Raven said, 'Within the dark yew-tree, So in the Autumn yewberries, Sad lamps, may burn for me. Summon the haunted beetle, From twilight bud and bloom, To drone a gloomy dirge for me At dusk above my tomb. Beseech ye too the glowworm To rear her cloudy flame, Where the small, flickering bats resort, Whistling in tears my name. Let the round dew a whisper make, Welling on twig and thorn; And only the grey cock at night Call through his silver horn. And you, dear sisters, don your black For ever and a day, To show how true a raven In his tomb is laid away.'

THE NIGHT-SWANS

'Tis silence on the enchanted lake, And silence in the air serene, Save for the beating of her heart, The lovely-eyed Evangeline.

She sings across the waters clear And dark with trees and stars between, The notes her fairy godmother Taught her, the child Evangeline.

As might the unrippled pool reply, Faltering an answer far and sweet, Three swans as white as mountain snow Swim mantling to her feet. And still upon the lake they stay, Their eyes black stars in all their snow, And softly, in the glassy pool, Their feet beat darkly to and fro.

She rides upon her little boat, Her swans swim through the starry sheen, Rowing her into Fairyland — The lovely-eyed Evangeline.

'Tis silence on the enchanted lake, And silence in the air serene; Voices shall call in vain again On earth the child Evangeline.

'Evangeline! Evangeline!'
Upstairs, downstairs, all in vain.
Her room is dim; her flowers faded;
She answers not again.

EEKA, NEEKA

Eeka, Neeka, Leeka, Lee—
Here's lock without a key;
Bring a lantern, bring a candle,
Here's a door without a handle;
Shine, shine, you old thief Moon,
Here's a door without a room;
Not a whisper, moth or mouse,
Key—lock—door—room: where's the house?

Say nothing, creep away, And live to knock another day!

THE HORSEMAN

I heard a horseman
Ride over the hill;
The moon shone clear,
The night was still;
His helm was silver,
And pale was he;
And the horse he rode
Was of ivory.

THE LITTLE SALAMANDER

To Margot

When I go free,
I think 'twill be
A night of stars and snow,
And the wild fires of frost shall light
My footsteps as I go;
Nobody — nobody will be there
With groping touch, or sight,
To see me in my bush of hair
Dance burning through the night.

OLD SHELLOVER

'Come!' said Old Shellover.
'What?' says Creep.
'The horny old Gardener's fast asleep;
The fat cock Thrush
To his nest has gone;
And the dew shines bright
In the rising Moon;
Old Sallie Worm from her hole doth peep:
Come!' said Old Shellover.
'Ay!' said Creep.

LATE

Three small men in a small house,
And none to hear them say,
'One for his nob,' and 'One for his noddle,'
And 'One for his dumb dog Stray!'
'Clubs are trumps — and he's dealt and bluffed':
'And Jack of diamonds led':
'And perhaps the cullie has dropped a shoe;
He tarries so late,' they said.

Three small men in a small house,
And one small empty chair,
One with his moleskin over his brows,
One with his crany bare,
And one with a dismal cast in his eye,
Rocking a heavy head . . .
'And perhaps the cullie's at The Wide World's End;
He tarries so late,' they said.

Three small men in a small house,
And a candle guttering low,
One with his cheek on the ace of spades,
And two on the boards below.
And a window black 'gainst a waste of stars,
And a moon five dark nights dead . . .
'Who's that a-knocking and a-knocking and a-knocking?'
One stirred in his sleep and said.

THE MAGNIFYING GLASS

With this round glass I can make Magic talk — A myriad shells show In a scrap of chalk;

Of but an inch of moss A forest — flowers and trees; A drop of water Like a hive of bees. I lie in wait and watch How the deft spider jets The woven web-silk From his spinnerets;

The tigerish claws he has! And oh! the silly flies That stumble into his net — With all those eyes!

Not even the tiniest thing But this my glass Will make more marvellous, And itself surpass.

Yes, and with lenses like it, Eyeing the moon, 'Twould seem you'd walk there In an afternoon!

THE SHADOW

When the last of gloaming's gone,
When the world is drowned in Night,
Then swims up the great round Moon,
Washing with her borrowed light
Twig, stone, grass-blade — pin-point bright —
Every tiniest thing in sight.

Then, on tiptoe, Off go I To a white-washed Wall near by, Where, for secret Company, My small shadow Waits for me.

Still and stark, Or stirring — so, All I'm doing He'll do too. Quieter than A cat he mocks My walk, my gestures, Clothes and looks.

I twist and turn, I creep, I prowl, Likewise does he, The crafty soul, The Moon for lamp, And for music, owl.

'Sst!' I whisper,
'Shadow, come!'
No answer:
He is blind and dumb —
Blind and dumb.
And when I go,
The wall will stand empty,
White as snow.

THE HARE

In the black furrow of a field I saw an old witch-hare this night; And she cocked a lissome ear, And she eyed the moon so bright, And she nibbled of the green; And I whispered 'Whsst! witch-hare,' Away like a ghostie o'er the field She fled, and left the moonlight there.

TIRED TIM

Poor tired Tim! It's sad for him.
He lags the long bright morning through,
Ever so tired of nothing to do;
He moons and mopes the livelong day,
Nothing to think about, nothing to say;
Up to bed with his candle to creep,
Too tired to yawn, too tired to sleep:
Poor tired Tim! It's sad for him.

TO BED

Candle lank and lean and pale Light me to bed, Rearing aloft thy flaming hair Above thy head.

Red is the tip of thy long nose; As if from weeping Tears that shall in the night congeal When I am sleeping.

Up, up the peevish stair we go; Silent as death Thy smoke trails back along the air Like frosty breath.

Circling around thy tapering head Pale colours bloom, While shadows watch thee from their lair Of ghostly gloom.

At every wink they crouch and spring — I conjure thee Droop not a languid eyelid till In bed I be.

And while the mice making romping stir, I do entreat
Twine not thy spectral body with
A winding sheet.

But steadfast as a sentinel, Vigilant, stark, Guard thou the battlements of light Against the dark!

A LANTERN

A lantern lighted me to bed Because I had no candle; Across the frozen fields it shone And danced upon the Wandle.

Cock robin in the icy hedge,
Nor blackbird, bill in feather,
Nor snail tucked snug in close-shut house
Will ever now know whether

A lantern lighted me to bed, Because I had no candle, And from my frozen window-pane Beamed clean across the Wandle.

GROAT NOR TESTER

No groat for a supper, No tester for a bed: Ay, some poor men for taper have The light stars shed; And some poor men for pillow have A mossy wayside stone, Beneath a bough where sits and sings The night-bird lone; And some poor men for coverlid Lie 'neath the mists of night -Heavy the dew upon their breasts At pierce of morning light; And some poor men for valance have Bracken whose spicy smell Haunts the thick stillness of the dark And brings sweet dreams as well; And some poor men for bellman have The farm cocks grey and red -Who paid no groat for supper Nor had tester for a bed.

HIDE AND SEEK

Hide and seek, says the Wind,
In the shade of the woods;
Hide and seek, says the Moon,
To the hazel buds;
Hide and seek, says the Cloud,
Star on to star;
Hide and seek, says the Wave
At the harbour bar;
Hide and seek, say I,
To myself, and step
Out of the dream of Wake
Into the dream of Sleep.

HARK!

My little Charles is afraid of the dark; Stares at the window, stiff and stark, Sits up in bed, with tousled head, White as chalk, scarce able to talk. . . . 'Listen!' he whispers; 'Hark!'. . . .

'My dear, my dear, my dear!
See, you are safe; just us.
It's only the wind at the keyhole,
It's only a nibbling mouse;
Only the creak of an empty stair;
And the moon looking into the house;
It's only a moth on the ceiling;
Or a little screech owl in the wood.
There's nothing behind the door ajar.
Stop breathing as long as you could,
You still wouldn't hear what you think you hear;
There's nothing to fear in what you fear —
Lying alone in the dark.'

Poor little Charles, he weeps at me; Begs and prays he may sleep with me; Tear-dabbled cheeks, wild eyes I see; And a silence falls in the vacancy. . . .

'Listen! . . .' he whispers. 'Hark! . . .

MANY A MICKLE

A little sound —
Only a little, a little —
The breath in a reed,
A trembling fiddle;
A trumpet's ring,
The shuddering drum;
So all the glory, bravery, hush
Of music come.

A little sound —
Only a stir and a sigh
Of each green leaf
Its fluttering neighbour by;
Oak on to oak,
The wide dark forest through —
So o'er the watery wheeling world
The night winds go.

A little sound,
Only a little, a little —
The thin high drone
Of the simmering kettle,
The gathering frost,
The click of needle and thread;
Mother, the fading wall, the dream,
The drowsy bed.

SONG

O for a moon to light me home!
O for a lanthorn green!
For those sweet stars the Pleiades,
That glitter in the twilight trees;
O for a lovelorn taper! O
For a lanthorn green!

O for a frock of tartan!
O for clear, wild, grey eyes!
For fingers light as violets,
'Neath branches that the blackbird frets;
O for a thistly meadow! O
For clear, wild, grey eyes!

O for a heart like almond boughs!
O for sweet thoughts like rain!
O for first-love like fields of grey,
Shut April-buds at break of day!
O for a sleep like music!
Dreams still as rain!

LULLY

Nay, ninny, shut those sleepy eyes, The robin from his spray Long since to his cold winter roost Has flown away.

Hush, now, and fold those gentle hands;
Across the fields the snow
Has hidden the bleating sheep from sight,
And heaped the hedges through.

Wail not so shrill, thou tiny voice;
These shadows mean no harm;
'Tis but the flames this wintry night
To keep thee safe and warm;
Lully, and rest then, pretty soul,
Safe on thy mother's arm.

LULLABY

Sleep, sleep, thou lovely one!
The little mouse cheeps plaintively,
The nightingale in the chestnut-tree —
They sing together, bird and mouse,
In starlight, in darkness, lonely, sweet,
The wild notes and the faint notes meet —
Sleep, sleep, thou lovely one!

Sleep, sleep, thou lovely one!
Amid the lilies floats the moth,
The mole along his galleries goeth
In the dark earth; the summer moon
Looks like a shepherd through the pane
Seeking his feeble lamb again —
Sleep, sleep, thou lovely one!

Sleep, sleep, thou lovely one!
Time comes to keep night-watch with thee,
Nodding with roses; and the sea
Saith 'Peace! Peace!' amid his foam.
'O be still!'
The wind cries up the whispering hill —
Sleep, sleep, thou lovely one!

SHE IN THY DREAMS WATCH OVER THEE!

She in thy dreams watch over thee! Who in the dark and cold Keeps all her buds of earth fast-sealed, Her meek sheep safe in fold; Who comes with dew and goes with dew; And lulls the winds to rest; And hushes the weary birds of eve To silence on her breast.

She of the ages of the night, The childhood of the morn, Solace the sadness of thy thoughts Long waking made forlorn; Stoop with the stillness of her smile, The safety of her hand, Charm with the clear call of her voice, Thee, in the shadowy land!

The daisy will unfold in light
The fairness of her face,
The lark from his green furrow course
Back to his sun-wild place;
Then she, whose drowsy cheek by thine
Lonely all night hath lain,
Will toss her dark locks from thy sweet eyes,
Loose thee to earth again!

I MET AT EVE

I met at eve the Prince of Sleep, His was a still and lovely face, He wandered through a valley steep, Lovely in a lonely place.

His garb was grey of lavender, About his brows a poppy-wreath Burned like dim coals, and everywhere The air was sweeter for his breath.

His twilight feet no sandals wore, His eyes shone faint in their own flame, Fair moths that gloomed his steps before Seemed letters of his lovely name.

His house is in the mountain ways,
A phantom house of misty walls,
Whose golden flocks at evening graze,
And 'witch the moon with muffled calls.

Upwelling from his shadowy springs Sweet waters shake a trembling sound, There flit the hoot-owl's silent wings, There hath his web the silkworm wound. Dark in his pools clear visions lurk, And rosy, as with morning buds, Along his dales of broom and birk Dreams haunt his solitary woods.

I met at eve the Prince of Sleep, His was a still and lovely face, He wandered through a valley steep, Lovely in a lonely place.

THE UNIVERSE

I heard a little child beneath the stars

Talk as he ran along

To some sweet riddle in his mind that seemed

A-tiptoe into song.

In his dark eyes lay a wild universe, —
Wild forests, peaks, and crests;
Angels and fairies, giants, wolves and he
Were that world's only guests.

Elsewhere was home and mother, his warm bed: —
Now, only God alone
Could, armed with all His power and wisdom, make
Earths richer than his own.

O Man! — thy dreams, thy passions, hopes, desires! — He in his pity keep A homely bed where love may lull a child's Fond Universe asleep!

ECHO

Seven sweet notes
In the moonlight pale
Warbled a leaf-hidden
Nightingale:
And Echo in hiding
By an old green wall
Under the willows
Sighed back them all.

ASLEEP

Sister with sister, dark and fair, Slumber on one pillow there; Tranced in dream their phantoms rove — But none knows what they are dreaming of. Lost to the room they love, they lie Their hearts their only lullaby. Whither that cloud in heaven is bound Can neither tell. No scent, no sound Reaches them now. Without avail Warbles the sweet-tongued nightingale. Oh, how round, how white a moon Streams into this silent room! Clothes and curtains gleam so gay It might be day. But see, beyond that door ajar, Night's shadows are; And not a mouse is stirring where Descends an empty stair.

SILVER

Slowly, silently, now the moon
Walks the night in her silver shoon;
This way, and that, she peers, and sees
Silver fruit upon silver trees;
One by one the casements catch
Her beams beneath the silvery thatch;
Couched in his kennel, like a log,
With paws of silver sleeps the dog;
From their shadowy cote the white breasts peep
Of doves in a silver-feathered sleep;
A harvest mouse goes scampering by,
With silver claws, and silver eye;
And moveless fish in the water gleam,
By silver reeds in a silver stream.

DREAM-SONG

Sunlight, moonlight,
Twilight, starlight —
Gloaming at the close of day,
And an owl calling,
Cool dews falling
In a wood of oak and may.

Lantern-light, taper-light, Torchlight, no-light: Darkness at the shut of day, And lions roaring, Their wrath pouring In wild waste places far away.

Elf-light, bat-light,
Touchwood-light and toad-light,
And the sea a shimmering gloom of grey,
And a small face smiling
In a dream's beguiling
In a world of wonders far away.

RAIN

I woke in the swimming dark
And heard, now sweet, now shrill,
The voice of the rain-water,
Cold and still,

Endlessly sing; now faint, In the distance borne away; Now in the air float near, But nowhere stay;

Singing I know not what, Echoing on and on; Following me in sleep, Till night was gone.

THE HOUSE OF DREAM

Candle, candle, burning clear,
Now the House of Dream draws near;
See what shadowy flowers move
The solitary porch above;
Hark, how still it is within,
Though so many guests go in.

No faint voice will answer make While thy tapering flame's awake. Candle, candle, burning low, It is time for me to go. Music, faint and distant, wells From those far-off dales and dells.

Now in shoes of silence I Stand by the walls of witchery; Out then, earthly flame, for see, Sleep's unlatched her door to me.

FULL MOON

One night as Dick lay fast asleep,
Into his drowsy eyes
A great still light began to creep
From out the silent skies.
It was the lovely moon's, for when
He raised his dreamy head,
Her surge of silver filled the pane
And streamed across his bed.
So, for awhile, each gazed at each—
Dick and the solemn moon—
Till, climbing slowly on her way,
She vanished, and was gone.

THE FLEETING

The late wind failed; high on the hill The pine's resounding boughs were still: Those wondrous airs that space had lent To wail earth's night-long banishment From heat and light and song of day In a last sighing died away.

Alone in the muteness, lost and small, I watched from far-off Leo fall An ebbing trail of silvery dust, And fade to naught; while, near and far, Glittered in quiet star to star; And dreamed, in midnight's dim immense, Heaven's universal innocence.

O transient heart that yet can raise To the unseen its pang of praise, And from the founts in play above Be freshed with that sweet love!

WANDERERS

Wide are the meadows of night,
And daisies are shining there,
Tossing their lovely dews,
Lustrous and fair;
And through these sweet fields go,
Wand'rers' mid the stars—
Venus, Mercury, Uranus, Neptune,
Saturn, Jupiter, Mars.

'Tired in their silver, they move, And circling, whisper and say, Fair are the blossoming meads of delight Through which we stray.

STARS

If to the heavens you lift your eyes
When Winter reigns o'er our Northern skies,
And snow-cloud none the zenith mars,
At Yule-tide midnight these your stars:
Low in the South see bleak-blazing Sirius;
Above him hang Betelgeuse, Procyon wan;
Wild-eyed to West of him, Rigel and Bellatrix,
And rudd-red Aldebaran journeying on.
High in night's roof-tree beams twinkling Capella;
Vega and Deneb prowl low in the North;
Far to the East roves the Lion-heart, Regulus;

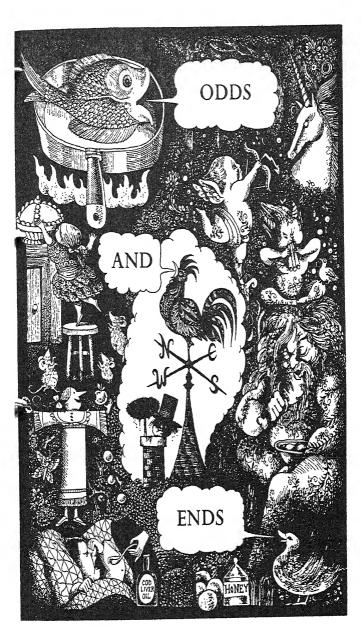

But when Midsummer Eve in man's sleep-drowsed hours Refreshes for daybreak its dew-bright flowers,
Though three of these Night Lights aloft remain,
For nine, if you gaze, you will gaze in vain.
Yet comfort find, for, far-shining there,
See golden Arcturus and cold Altaïr;
Crystalline Spica, and, strange to scan,
Blood-red Antares, foe to Man.

While the twin sons of Zeus to'rd the zenith gleam forth.

WILL EVER?

Will he ever be weary of wandering,
The flaming sun?
Ever weary of waning in lovelight,
The white still moon?
Will ever a shepherd come
With a crook of simple gold,
And lead all the little stars
Like lambs to the fold?

Will ever the Wanderer sail
From over the sea,
Up the river of water,
To the stones to me?
Will he take us all into his ship,
Dreaming, and waft us far,
To where in the clouds of the West
The Islands are?

MIMA

Jemima is my name,
But oh, I have another;
My father always calls me Meg,
And so do Bob and mother;
Only my sister, jealous of
The strands of my bright hair,
'Jemima — Mima — Mima!'
Calls, mocking, up the stair.

ALAS, ALACK!

Ann, Ann!
Come! quick as you can!
There's a fish that talks
In the frying-pan.
Out of the fat,
As clear as glass,
He put up his mouth
And moaned 'Alas!'
Oh, most mournful,
'Alas, alack!'
Then turned to his sizzling,
And sank him back.

BLINDMAN'S IN

'Applecumjockaby, blindfold eye! How many rooks come sailing by, Caw — caw, in the deep blue sky?'

'Applecumjockaby, you tell me! I can listen though I can't see; Twenty soot-black rooks there be.'

'Applecumjockaby, I say, No! Who can tell what he don't know? Blindman's in, and round we go.'

BUCK BUCK

Bucca, bucca, quot sunt hic? —
Ten fat candles but no wick,
Thumb, and Toucher, Longman, Lechman, Little Man — or Little Dick.

Nine, eight, six, five, three — guess quick!
Or here I stay and here I stick,
Bucca, bucca, quot sunt hic? —
Tommy Tomkins, Billy Wilkins, Slim Long Larum,
Betsy Bedlam, Tippety-Town-End — Little Dick.

SINGING AND DANCING

That Day, that Day, that Gentle Day We fairing went to Rumblelow; We sang, sang we Broom, Broom on Hill, And Trolly lolly leman, dow.

We danced The Bace of Voragon,
The Vod and the Val, The Bee, Leaves Green,
The Long Flat Foot of Garioch,
We danced The Loch of Slene.

¹ This is how the Roman boys, two thousand and more years ago, began the game of Buck Buck, which is still played in England in the same fashion. Toucher, Longman, etc. are old names for the five fingers.

That Day, that Day, that Gentle Day Was music wild at Rumblelow; O Mine Heart, hey, this is my song, Trolly lolly leman, dow.

BLACKBIRDS

In April, when these orchards blow,
The boughs are white as driven snow.
Dark-leafed in May, like beads are seen
Hard little berries of a bright clear green.
A rosy flush steals through the skin,
While the small almond kernel swells within.
The Sun pours down his golden rain;
And soon comes honeyed June again:
Listen! — the Wood-boy's drowsy flute! —
Or is it some wild blackbird in the ripe
red fruit?

HAYMAKING

Bill's on the hay-wain
Sam's below,
And Simon's up on the stack;
Jeremy Joe
Is behind — and so
He must be at the back!
Tiny Tim,
By the horse (that's him),
Gives him a wisp to munch;
But Little Boy Blue
We can't see you —
Snuggled asleep, maybe, under a wall,
Cows and sheep far out of call,
Or eyeing what's there, for lunch.

QUACK!

The duck is whiter than whey is, His tail tips up over his back, The eye in his head is as round as a button, And he says, Quack! Quack!

He swims on his bright blue mill-pond, By the willow tree under the shack, Then stands on his head to see down to the bottom, And says, Quack! Quack!

When Mollie steps out of the kitchen, For apron — pinned round with a sack; He squints at her round face, her dish, and what's in it, And says, Quack! Quack!

He preens the pure snow of his feathers In the sun by the wheat-straw stack; At dusk waddles home with his brothers and sisters, And says, Quack! Quack!

THE TENT

How cool a tent!
How leafy a shade!
And, near at hand, a heap of sticks.
The kettle waits,
The cloth is laid —
With fruit and bread and Banbury cakes.
Cows rove the meadows; in woods afar
Steals out a listening fox:
I wonder where the campers are,
And what is in that box.

JIM JAY

Do diddle di do, Poor Jim Jay Got stuck fast In Yesterday. Squinting he was, On cross-legs bent, Never heeding The wind was spent. Round veered the weathercock, The sun drew in -And stuck was Jim Like a rusty pin. . . . We pulled and we pulled From seven till twelve, Jim, too frightened To help himself. But all in vain. The clock struck one, And there was Jim A little bit gone. At half-past five You scarce could see A glimpse of his flapping Handkerchee. And when came noon, And we climbed sky-high, Jim was a speck Slip — slipping by. Come to-morrow, The neighbours say, He'll be past crying for: Poor Jim Jay.

'SOOEEP!'

Black as a chimney is his face, And ivory white his teeth, And in his brass-bound cart he rides, The chestnut blooms beneath.

'Sooeep, Sooeep!' he cries, and brightly peers This way and that, to see With his two light-blue shining eyes What custom there may be.

And once inside the house, he'll squat, And drive his rods on high, Till twirls his sudden sooty brush Against the morning sky.

Then, 'mid his bulging bags of soot, With half the world asleep, His small cart wheels him off again, Still hoarsely bawling, 'Sooeep!'

THE FACES

The Sweep has such a sooty face For six days of the week His children, when they speak at all, To all but a stranger speak.

But what a froth of suds he makes In secret, Saturnight, So that on Sunday all may view Their father with delight.

THERE WAS AN OLD WOMAN OF BUMBLE BHOSEY

There was an old Woman of Bumble Bhosey —
Children she had forty;
Half of them sang hymns all night;
Half of them were naughty;

Twenty went to Botany Bay;
Ten of them on crutches,
And the last of them nimmed the clouts that lay
A-bleaching on the bushes!

A-APPLE PIE

Little Pollie Pillikins
Peeped into the kitchen,
'H'm,' says she, 'Ho,' says she,
'Nobody there!'
Only little meeny mice,
Miniken and miching
On the big broad flagstones, empty and bare.

Greedy Pollie Pillikins
Crept into the pantry,
There stood an Apple Pasty,
Sugar white as snow.
Off the shelf she toppled it,
Quick and quiet and canty,
And the meeny mice they watched her
On her tip-tap-toe.

'Thief, Pollie Pillikins!'
Crouching in the shadows there,
Flickering in the candle-shining,
Fee, fo, fum!
Munching up the pastry,
Crunching up the apples,
'Thief!' squeaked the smallest mouse,
'Pollie, spare a crumb!'

LOB-LIE-BY-THE-FIRE

Keep me a crust Or starve I must; Hoard me a bone Or I am gone; A handful of coals Leave red for me; Or the smouldering log Of a wild-wood tree: Even a kettle To sing on the hob Will comfort the heart Of poor old Lob: Then with his hairy Hands he'll bless Prosperous master, And kind mistress.

POOR HENRY

Thick in its glass
The physic stands,
Poor Henry lifts
Distracted hands;
His round cheek wans
In the candlelight,
To smell that smell!
To see that sight!

Finger and thumb
Clinch his small nose,
A gurgle, a gasp,
And down it goes;
Scowls Henry now;
But mark that cheek,
Sleek with the bloom
Of health next week!

THE GLUTTON

Pray, pity the poor glutton! — Who yawns the hours away From breakfast-time to dinner-time, From dinner-time to tea!

Oh, pity the poor glutton, Whose appetite is such That he can never, never, never Eat too much!

Oh, pity the poor glutton
Whose troubles all begin
In struggling on and on to turn
What's out into what's in.

GRIM

Beside the blaze, as of forty fires,
Giant Grim doth sit,
Roasting a thick-woolled mountain sheep
Upon an iron spit.
Above him wheels the winter sky,
Beneath him, fathoms deep,
Lies hidden in the valley mists
A village fast asleep —
Save for one restive hungry dog
That, snuffing towards the height,
Smells Grim's broiled supper-meat, and spies
His watch-fire twinkling bright.

MISS CHERRY

Once — once I loved: And Miss Cherry was she Who took my heart captive, And set my heart free. I'd sing, and I'd sing What no words ever meant, And never felt lonely Wherever I went.

No bird in the air, No fish in the sea, No skylark in heaven Could happier be.

Never hungry or tired, From breakfast to bed; I just nibbled, and thought Of Miss Cherry instead.

All night I would sleep Like a top, until day With a shower of sunbeams Washed slumber away.

And it seemed that the World Was a Wonder to see, Since I loved Miss Cherry, And Miss Cherry loved me.

MISS T.

It's a very odd thing -As odd as can be — That whatever Miss T. eats Turns into Miss T.; Porridge and apples, Mince, muffins and mutton, Jam, junket, jumbles — Not a rap, not a button It matters; the moment They're out of her plate, Though shared by Miss Butcher And sour Mr. Bate; Tiny and cheerful, And neat as can be, Whatever Miss T. eats Turns into Miss T.

THE LITTLE OLD CUPID

'Twas a very small garden; The paths were of stone, Scattered with leaves, With moss overgrown; And a little Old Cupid Stood under a tree, With a small broken bow He stood aiming at me.

The dog-rose in briars Hung over the weeds, The air was aflock With the floating of seeds; And a little old Cupid Stood under a tree, With a small broken bow He stood aiming at me.

The dovecote was tumbling,
The fountain dry,
A wind in the orchard
Went whispering by;
And a little old Cupid
Stood under a tree,
With a small broken bow
He stood aiming at me.

FOR MOPSA

Ah, would I were a Pastrycook! My Mopsa then I'd make A Sallie Lunn, a Crumpet, and a Cake.

Ah, would I were a Grocer! How happy she should be With Jars of Honey, Raisins, Currants, Tea.

Ah, would I were an Oilman!
She should never, never mope
For Clothes Pegs, Candles, Soda, or for Soap.

Ah, would I were a Pothecary!
For Possets she'd not pine,
Or Pills, or Ipecacuanha
Wine.

Or, just suppose, a Fishmonger! The pains I would be at To pick her out a Whitebait, or a Sprat!

Or a green-baize-aproned Fruiterer — The punnets that should come Of Cherries, Apples, Peach, and Pear, and Plum!

There's a small dark shop I know of too, In another place, called, Sleep; And there's nothing sold in Dreams it doesn't Keep.

But as it's only rhymes I make, I can but dower my Dove With scribbles, and with kisses, and with Love.

MR. ALACADACCA

Mr. Alacadacca's Long strange name Always filled his heart With shame. 'I'd much — much — rather Be called,' said he, 'Plain "Mr. A," Or even "Old B": What can Alacadacca Mean to me!' Nobody answered; Nobody said Plain 'Mr. A'; 'Old B,' instead. They merely smiled At his dismay ---A-L-A-C-A-D-A-C-C-A.

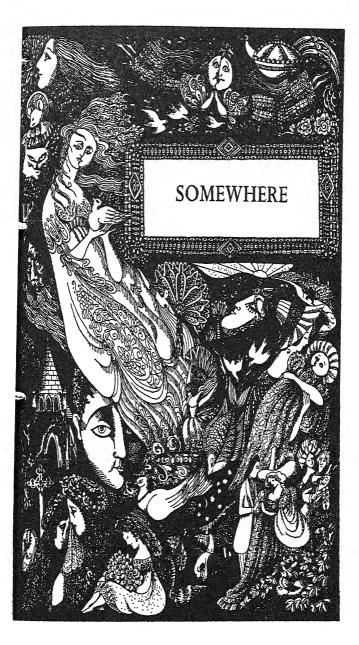

KIPH

My Uncle Ben, who's been
To Bisk, Bhir, Biak —
Been, and come back:
To Tab, Tau, Tze, and Tomsk,
And home, by Teneriffe:
Who, brown as desert sand,
Gaunt, staring, slow and stiff,
Has chased the Unicorn
And Hippogriff,
Gave me a smooth, small, shining stone,
Called Kiph.

'Look'ee, now, Nevvy mine,'
He told me — 'If
You'd wish a wish,
Just rub this smooth, small, shining stone,
Called Kiph.'

Hide it did I, In a safe, secret spot; Slept, and the place In dreams forgot.

One wish alone Now's mine: Oh, if I could but find again That stone called Kiph!

THE LITTLE BIRD

My dear Daddie bought a mansion
For to bring my Mammie to,
In a hat with a long feather,
And a trailing gown of blue;
And a company of fiddlers
And a rout of maids and men
Danced the clock round to the morning,
In a gay house-warming then.
And when all the guests were gone — and
All was still as still can be,
In from the dark ivy hopped a
Wee small bird. And that was Me.

POOR BIRD!

Poor bird! —
No hands, no fingers thine;
Two angel-coloured wings instead:
But where are mine?

Cold voiceless fish! —
No hands, no spindly legs, no toes;
But fins and a tail,
And a mouth for nose.

Wild weed! —
Not even an eye with which to see!
Or ear, or tongue,
For sigh or song;
Or heart to beat,
Or mind to long.

And yet — ah, would that I, In sun and shade, like thee, Might no less gentle, sweet, And lovely be!

ME

As long as I live I shall always be My Self — and no other, Just me.

Like a tree — Willow, elder, Aspen, thorn, Or cypress forlorn.

Like a flower,
For its hour —
Primrose, or pink,
Or a violet —
Sunned by the sun,
And with dewdrops wet.

Always just me.
Till the day come on
When I leave this body,
It's all then done,
And the spirit within it
Is gone.

THE CHRISTENING

The bells chime clear, Soon will the sun behind the hills sink down; Come, little Ann, your baby brother dear Lies in his christening-gown. His godparents

Are all across the fields stepped on before, And wait beneath the crumbling monuments, This side the old church door,

Your mammie dear

Leans frail and lovely on your daddie's arm; Watching her chick, 'twixt happiness and fear, Lest he should come to harm.

All to be blest

Full soon in the clear heavenly water, he Sleeps on unwitting of't, his little breast Heaving so tenderly.

I carried you,

My little Ann, long since on this same quest, And from the painted windows a pale hue Lit golden on your breast;

And then you woke, Chill as the holy water trickled down, And, weeping, cast the window a strange look, Half smile, half infant frown.

I scarce could hear

The skylarks singing in the green meadows, 'Twas summertide, and, budding far and near, The hedges thick with rose.

And now you're grown A little girl; and this same helpless mite Is come like such another bud half-blown, Out of the wintry night.

Time flies, time flies! And yet, bless me! 'tis little changed am I; May Jesu keep from tears those infant eyes, Be love their lullaby!

TWO DEEP CLEAR EYES

Two deep clear eyes,
Two ears, a mouth, a nose,
Ten supple fingers,
And ten nimble toes,
Two hands, two feet, two arms, two legs,
And a heart through which love's blessing flows.

Eyes bid ears
Hark:
Ears bid eyes
Mark:
Mouth bids nose
Smell:
Nose says to mouth,
I will:
Heart bids mind
Wonder:
Mind bids heart
Ponder.

Arms, hands, feet, legs, Work, play, stand, walk; And a jimp little tongue in a honey-sweet mouth, With rows of teeth due North and South, Does nothing but talk, talk, talk.

DREAMLAND

Annie has run to the mill dam, Annie is down by the weir; Who was it calling her name, then? Nobody else to hear? Cold the water, calm and deep, Honey-sweet goldilocks half-asleep, Where the green-grey willows weep, Annie is down by the weir.

THE DOUBLE

I curtseyed to the dovecote.
I curtseyed to the well.
I twirled me round and round about,
The morning scents to smell.
When out I came from spinning so,
Lo, betwixt green and blue
Was the ghost of me — a fairy child —
A-dancing — dancing, too.

Nought was of her wearing
That is the earth's array.
Her thistledown feet beat airy fleet,
Yet set no blade astray.
The gossamer shining dews of June
Showed grey against the green;
Yet never so much as a bird-claw print
Of footfall to be seen.

Fading in the mounting sun,
That image soon did pine.
Fainter than moonlight thinned the locks
That shone as clear as mine.
Vanished! Vanished! O, sad it is
To spin and spin — in vain;
And never to see the ghost of me
A-dancing there again.

ALL THE WAY

All the way from Adam
You came, my dear, to me;
The wind upon your cheek
Wafted Noah on the sea,
The daisy in your hand —
Silver petals, stud of gold, —
Just such another starred the grass,
In Eden, of old.

It's a long, long way to Abel,
And a path of thorns to Cain,
And men less wise than Solomon
Must tread them both again;
But those fountains still are spouting,
And the Serpent twines the bough,
And lovely Eve is sleeping
In our orchard, now.

ALL THAT'S PAST

Very old are the woods;
And the buds that break
Out of the brier's boughs,
When March winds wake,
So old with their beauty are —
Oh, no man knows
Through what wild centuries
Roves back the rose.

Very old are the brooks;
And the rills that rise
Where snow sleeps cold beneath
The azure skies
Sing such a history
Of come and gone,
Their every drop is as wise
As Solomon.

Very old are we men;
Our dreams are tales
Told in dim Eden
By Eve's nightingales;
We wake and whisper awhile,
But, the day gone by,
Silence and sleep like fields
Of amaranth lie.

FULL CIRCLE

When thou art as little as I am, Mother, And I as old as thou, I'll feed thee on wild-bee honeycomb, And milk from my cow.
I'll make thee a swan's-down bed, Mother; Watch over thee then will I.
And if in a far-away dream you start I'll sing thee lullaby.
It's many — Oh, ages and ages, Mother, We've shared, we two. Soon, now: Thou shalt be happy, grown again young, And I as old as thou.

THE BEAD MAT

We had climbed the last steep flight of stairs; Alone were she and I: 'It's something I wanted to give to you,' She whispered, with a sigh.

There, in her own small room she stood — Where the last beam of sun Burned in the glass — and showed me what For me she had done: —

An oblong shining mat of beads, Yellow and white and green, And where the dark-blue middle was A gold between.

I heard no far-off voice, no sound:
Only her clear grey eyes
Drank in the thoughts that in my face
Passed shadow-wise.

She clasped her hands, and turned her And in the watchful glass She saw how many things had seen All that had passed. She snatched her gift away; her cheek With scarlet was aslame; 'It isn't anything,' she said, If we're the same!'

Her eyes were like a stormy sea, Forlorn, and vast, and grey; Wherein a little beaten ship Flew through the spray.

THE PLAYMATE

Weep no more, nor grieve, nor sigh; Wet and cold with tears is yet The saddened lustre of thine eye; Tears, dear, do darken it.

Weep no more, thy grief hath made Too wild an autumn for so small And meek a mouth, and tears have laid Shadow where they fall.

Weep no more; how dark a face In thy hair! Oh, I shall see How many years, this silent place Where I was cruel to thee!

STRANGERS

The sad bells sound;
Night hastens on apace;
Oh, leave me not to languish
In this place!

I stand, I know,
Beside you, weeping not,
Pressing my childish Why?
My stubborn What?

I would forgive
If only a dream you are,
If only a little I'm to stay,
And wake afar.

Cold is this church, Cold the high arches, cold With dazzling light, and Oh, How old! how old!

Under the hollow roof
The strangers' voices come —
'The night is dark, and I
Am far from home.'

ECHO

'Who called?' I said, and the words Through the whispering glades, Hither, thither, baffled the birds— 'Who called? Who called?'

The leafy boughs on high Hissed in the sun; The dark air carried my cry Faintingly on:

Eyes in the green, in the shade, In the motionless brake, Voices that said what I said, For mockery's sake:

'Who cares?' I bawled through my tears; The wind fell low: In the silence, 'Who cares?' Wailed to and fro.

WHY

'Why do you weep, Mother? Why do you weep? The evening light has ceased to shine,
 The wind has fallen asleep;
Try as I may, the dreams will come,
 Yet still awake you keep;
Why do you weep, Mother? Why do you weep?
'Why do you sigh, Mother? Why do you sigh?
The world is silent; it is night;
 The stars are in the sky;
No knock would come as late as this,
 No footsteps go by;
I want us now to be alone,
 Just you and I.
Why do you sigh, Mother? Why do you sigh?'

'WILLIE!'

Willie, Willie! I call and cry, But Echo only Makes reply. Willie, Willie! The birds are still. The sweet sun shines On the empty hill; The brake stirs not, The flowers seem Half-folded in An emptier dream. Morning to dusk I call in vain; Comes but my own voice Back again.

NOBODY KNOWS

Often I've heard the Wind sigh
By the ivied orchard wall,
Over the leaves in the dark night,
Breathe a sighing call,
And faint away in the silence,
While I, in my bed,
Wondered, 'twixt dreaming and waking,
What it said.

Nobody knows what the Wind is,
Under the height of the sky,
Where the hosts of the stars keep far away house
And its wave sweeps by —
Just a great wave of the air,
Tossing the leaves in its sea,
And foaming under the eaves of the roof
That covers me.

And so we live under deep water,
All of us, beasts and men,
And our bodies are buried down under the sand,
When we go again;
And leave, like the fishes, our shells,
And float on the Wind and away,
To where, o'er the marvellous tides of the air,
Burns day.

AT LAST

A mound in a corner,
A sprinkle of snow
To tell how in summer
The daisies will blow;
And a thorn, a bare thorn
Whereto he may flit —
That lone bird, the redbreast,
To whistle on it;

No warmth but the sun's
Brief wintry red ray,
Ere the dark with all heaven
Wheels cold above day.
I shall stay fast asleep —
This poor dust that I am,
In the plentiful earth,
Naked, just as I came;
With all my strange dreams,
Passions, sorrow, delight,
Like the seed of the wild flowers,
Hid deep out of sight;
Like the song of the bird
In the silence of night.

EVER

Ever, ever
Stir and shiver
The reeds and rushes
By the river:
Ever, ever,
As if in dream,
The lone moon's silver
Sleeks the stream.
What old sorrow,
What lost love,
Moon, reeds, rushes,
Dream you of?

THE SLEEPER

As Ann came in one summer's day, She felt that she must creep, So silent was the clear cool house, It seemed a house of sleep. And sure, when she pushed open the door, Rapt in the stillness there, Her mother sat, with stooping head, Asleep upon a chair; Fast — fast asleep; her two hands laid Loose-folded on her knee, So that her small unconscious face Looked half unreal to be: So calmly lit with sleep's pale light Each feature was; so fair Her forehead — every trouble was Smoothed out beneath her hair. But though her mind in dream now moved, Still seemed her gaze to rest -From out beneath her fast-sealed lids, Above her moving breast — On Ann; as quite, quite still she stood; Yet slumber lay so deep Even her hands upon her lap Seemed saturate with sleep. And as Ann peeped, a cloudlike dread Stole over her, and then, On stealthy, mouselike feet she trod, And tiptoed out again.

THE FUNERAL

They dressed us up in black, Susan and Tom and me; And, walking through the fields All beautiful to see, With branches high in the air And daisy and buttercup, We heard the lark in the clouds, — In black dressed up.

They took us to the graves, Susan and Tom and me, Where the long grasses grow And the funeral tree: We stood and watched; and the wind Came softly out of the sky And blew in Susan's hair, As I stood close by.

Back through the fields we came, Tom and Susan and me, And we sat in the nursery together, And had our tea. And, looking out of the window, I heard the thrushes sing; But Tom fell asleep in his chair. He was so tired, poor thing.

TOM'S ANGEL

No one was in the fields But me and Polly Flint, When, like a giant across the grass, The flaming angel went.

It was budding time in May, And green as green could be, And all in his height he went along Past Polly Flint and me.

We'd been playing in the woods, And Polly up, and ran, And hid her face, and said, 'Tom! Tom! The Man! The Man!'

And I up-turned; and there, Like flames across the sky, With wings all bristling, came The Angel striding by.

And a chaffinch overhead Kept whistling in the tree While the Angel, blue as fire, came on Past Polly Flint and me. And I saw his hair, and all The ruffling of his hem, As over the clovers his bare feet Trod without stirring them.

Polly — she cried; and, oh! We ran, until the lane Turned by the miller's roaring wheel, And we were safe again.

AS I DID ROVE

As I did rove in blinded night, Raying the sward, in slender ring, A cirque I saw whose crystal light Tranced my despair with glittering.

Slender its gold; in hues of dream Its jewels burned, smiting my eyes Like wings that flit about the stream That waters Paradise.

Sorrow broke in my heart to see A thing so lovely; and I heard Cry from its dark security A 'wildered bird.

THE PATH

Is it an abbey that I see
Hard-by that tapering poplar-tree,
Whereat that path hath end?
'Tis wondrous still
That empty hill,
Yet calls me, friend.

Smooth is the turf, serene the sky,
The timeworn, crumbling roof awry;
Within that turret slim
Hangs there a bell
Whose faint notes knell?
Do colours dim

Burn in that angled window there, Grass-green, and crimson, azure rare? Would, from that narrow door, One, looking in, See, gemlike, shine On walls and floor

Candles whose aureole flames must seem — So still they burn — to burn in dream? And do they cry, and say, 'See, stranger; come! Here is thy home; No longer stray!'

THE MULLA-MULGARS' JOURNEY SONG

[From The Three Royal Monkeys]

That one
Alone
Who's dared, and gone
To seek the Magic Wonderstone,
No fear,
Or care,
Or black despair,
Shall heed until his journey's done.

Who knows
Where blows
The Mulgars' rose,
In valleys 'neath unmelting snows —
All secrets
He
Shall pierce and see,
And walk unharmed where'er he goes.

DEAR DELIGHT

Youngling fair, and dear delight, 'Tis Love hath thee in keeping; Green are the hills in morning light, A long adieu to weeping!

The elfin-folk sing shrill a-ring; Children a-field are straying; Dance, too, thou tiny, lovely thing, For all the world's a-maying.

Droop will the shadows of the night; Quiet be thy sleeping. Thou youngling fair, and dear delight, 'Tis Love hath thee in keeping.

GAZE, NOW

Gaze, now, thy fill, beguiling face, Life which all light and hue bestows Stealeth at last from youth its grace, From cheek its firstling rose.

Dark are those tresses; grave that brow; Drink, happy mouth, from Wisdom's well; Bid the strange world to sigh thee now All beauty hath to tell.

ALAS

One moment take thy rest.
Out of mere nought in space
Beauty moved human breast
To tell in this far face
A dream in noonday seen,
Never to fade or pass;
A breath-time's mute delight:
A joy in flight:
The aught desire doth mean,
Sighing, Alas!

INNOCENCY

[For a picture]

In this grave picture mortal Man may see
That all his knowledge ends in mystery.
From mother's womb he breaks. With tortured sighs
Her racked heart sweetens at his angry cries.
Teaching his feet to walk, his tongue to express
His infant love, she pours her tenderness.
Her milk and honey he doth taste and sip;
Sleeps with her kiss of kindness on his lip.
But with the vigour mastering time doth yield
He exults in freedom; ventures him afield;
Down to the sea goes, and in ship sets sail,
Crazed with the raving of love's nightingale,

And trumps of war, and danger's luring horn, And dark's faint summons into dreams forlorn. Pride in earth's vanquished secrets fills his breast; Yet still he pines for foregone peace and rest, And prays in untold sorrow at last to win To a long-lost Paradise an entering-in. O yearning eyes that through earth's ages scan The 'glorious misery' 'tis to be a man; Secure in quiet arms that Saviour be, Whose name is Innocency.

DIVINE DELIGHT

Dark, dark this mind, if ever in vain it rove
The face of man in search of hope and love;
Or, turning inward from earth's sun and moon,
Spin in cold solitude thought's mazed cocoon.
Fresh hang Time's branches. Hollow in space out-cry
The grave-toned trumpets of Eternity.
'World of divine delight', heart whispereth,
Though all its all lie but 'twixt birth and death.

ENVOY

Child, do you love the flower Shining with colour and dew Lighting its transient hour? So I love you.

The lambs in the mead are at play, 'Neath a hurdle the shepherd's asleep, From height to height of the day
The sunbeams sweep.

Evening will come. And alone The dreamer the dark will beguile; All the world will be gone For a dream's brief while.

Then I shall be old; and away: And you, with sad joy in your eyes, Will brood over children at play With as loveful surmise.

THE SONG OF THE SECRET

Where is beauty?
Gone, gone:
The cold winds have taken it
With their faint moan;
The white stars have shaken it,
Trembling down,
Into the pathless deeps of the sea:
Gone, gone
Is beauty from me.

The clear naked flower
Is faded and dead;
The green-leafed willow,
Drooping her head,
Whispers low to the shade
Of her boughs in the stream,
Sighing a beauty
Secret as dream.

UNDER THE ROSE

The Song of the Wanderer

Nobody, nobody told me
What nobody, nobody knows:
But now I know where the Rainbow ends,
I know where there grows
A Tree that's called the Tree of Life,
I know where there flows
The River of All-Forgottenness,
And where the Lotus blows,
And I — I've trodden the forest, where
In flames of gold and rose,
To burn, and then arise again,
The Phoenix goes.

Nobody, nobody told me
What nobody, nobody knows:
Hide thy face in a veil of light,
Put on thy silver shoes,
Thou art the Stranger I know best,
Thou art the sweet heart, who Came from the Land between Wake and Dream,
Cold with the morning dew.

THE SONG OF SEVEN

Far away, and long ago —
May sweet Memory be forgiven!
Came a Wizard in the evening,
And he sang the Song of Seven.
Yes, he plucked his jangling harp-strings
With fingers smooth and even;
And his eyes beneath his dangling hair
Were still as is the sea;
But the Song of Seven has never yet,
One note, come back to me.

The Song of One I know, A rose its thorns between;

The Song of Two I learned Where only the birds have been;

The Song of Three I heard When March was fleet with hares;

The Song of Four was the wind's — the wind's, Where wheat grew thick with tares;

The Song of Five, ah me! Lovely the midmost one;

The Song of Six, died out Before the dream was done. . . .

One — two — three — four — five, six — And all the grace notes given:
But widdershins, and witchery-sweet,
Where is the Song of Seven?

SOMEWHERE

Would you tell me the way to Somewhere?
Somewhere, Somewhere,
I have heard of a place called Somewhere —
But know not where it can be.

It makes no difference, Whether or not I go in dreams Or trudge on foot:

Could you tell me the way to Somewhere, The Somewhere meant for me?

There's a little old house in Somewhere — Somewhere, Somewhere,

A queer little house, with a Cat and a Mouse — Just room enough for three.

> A kitchen, a larder, A bin for bread, A string of candles, Or stars instead, A table, a chair, And a four-post bed —

There's room for us all in Somewhere,

For the Cat and the Mouse and Me.

Puss is called Skimme in Somewhere, In Somewhere, Somewhere; Miaou, miaou, in Somewhere,

S—K—I—M—M—E.

Miss Mouse is scarcely
One inch tall,
So she never needed
A name at all;
And though you call,
And call, and call,
There squeaks no answer,
Great or small —

Though her tail is a sight times longer
Than this is likely to be: —
FOR

I want to be off to Somewhere, To far, lone, lovely Somewhere, No matter where Somewhere be.

It makes no difference Whether or not I flit in sleep Or trudge on foot, Or this time to-morrow How far I've got, Summer or Winter, Cold, or hot, Where, or When, Or Why, or What —

Please, tell me the way to Somewhere — Somewhere, Somewhere;

Somewhere, Somewhere, Somewhere—
The Somewhere meant for me!

WHERE

Houses! houses! — Oh, I know Where the clovers are in blow; Where the bee for nectar goes From the clovers to the rose; Where the rose that was a bud Stands wide open in the wood; Where the wood is thick with trees Tossed to sunshine in the breeze; Where the breezes whisper, 'Come! Listen, far one, here is home.'

I DREAM OF A PLACE

I dream of a place where I long to live always: Green hills, shallow sand dunes, and nearing the sea;

The house is of stone; there are twelve lattice windows, And a door, with a keyhole — though lost is the key.

Thick-thatched is the roof; it has low, white-washed chimneys, Where doves preen their wings, and coo, Please, love; love me!

There martins are flitting; the sun shines; the moon shines; Drifts of bright flowers are adrone with the bee;

And a wonderful music of bird-song at daybreak Wells up from the bosom of every tree.

A brook of clear water encircles the garden, With kingcups, and cress, and the white fleur de lys—

Moorhens and dabchicks; the wild duck at evening Wing away to the sun, in the shape of a V;

And the night shows the stars, shining in at the windows, Brings nearer the far-away sigh of the sea.

Oh, the quiet, the green of the grass, the grey willows, The light, and the shine, and the air sweet and free! —

That dream of a place where I long to live always: Low hills, shallow sand dunes — at peace there to be!

KNOWN OF OLD

'I dream, and I dream....'

'Speak! what do you dream?'

'That I see Phantoms walking,
Translucent as flame,
In a place, known of old,
Though now lost is its name —
A place of a peace
So profound that I seem
As serenely at rest
As a leaf on a stream. —
I dream, and I dream. . . .

'Yet no strangers are these Who in ecstasy stray Where the moon high in heaven, Shines open as day. Their robes are of light, And each calm solemn face, In the crystalline night, Of grief shows no trace, But shines with the joy Of an infinite grace. So, with gladness I weep, As in rapture and silence, Aloof, and yet near me, They move in my sleep; And their voices repeat Words ancient and sweet — A rune once I knew, But, alas, now forget, A rune known of old Which, alas, I forget. — I dream, and I dream . . .

'And that is my dream.'

ARABIA

Far are the shades of Arabia,
Where the Princes ride at noon,
'Mid the verdurous vales and thickets,
Under the ghost of the moon;
And so dark is that vaulted purple
Flowers in the forest rise
And toss into blossom 'gainst the phantom stars
Pale in the noonday skies.

Sweet is the music of Arabia
In my heart, when out of dreams
I still in the thin clear mirk of dawn
Descry her gliding streams;
Hear her strange lutes on the green banks
Ring loud with the grief and delight
Of the dim-silked, dark-haired Musicians
In the brooding silence of night.

They haunt me — her lutes and her forests;
No beauty on earth I see
But shadowed with that dream recalls
Her loveliness to me:
Still eyes look coldly upon me,
Cold voices whisper and say —
'He is crazed with the spell of far Arabia,
They have stolen his wits away.'

GONE

Where's the Queen of Sheba? Where King Solomon? Gone with Blue Boy who looks after the sheep, Gone and gone and gone.

Lovely is the sunshine; Lovely is the wheat; Lovely the wind from out of the clouds Having its way with it.

Rise up, Old Green-Stalks! Delve deep, Old Corn! But where's the Queen of Sheba? Where King Solomon?

THE SONG OF SHADOWS

Sweep thy faint strings, Musician,
With thy long lean hand;
Downward the starry tapers burn,
Sinks soft the waning sand;
The old hound whimpers couched in sleep,
The embers smoulder low;
Across the walls the shadows
Come, and go.

Sweep softly thy strings, Musician,
The minutes mount to hours;
Frost on the windless casement weaves
A labyrinth of flowers;
Ghosts linger in the darkening air,
Hearken at the open door;
Music hath called them, dreaming,
Home once more.

THE SONG OF THE MAD PRINCE

Who said, 'Peacock Pie'?
The old King to the sparrow:
Who said, 'Crops are ripe'?
Rust to the harrow:
Who said, 'Where sleeps she now?
Where rests she now her head,
Bathed in eve's loveliness'?—
That's what I said.
Who said, 'Av. mum's the word':

Who said, 'Ay, mum's the word';
Sexton to willow:
Who said, 'Green dusk for dreams,
Moss for a pillow'?
Who said, 'All Time's delight
Hath she for narrow bed;
Life's troubled bubble broken'?—
That's what I said.

APPENDIX

On Poetry^I

What is poetry? There have been many definitions of it, and all of them from their differing points of view have been in some degree right. But none that I have seen proves to be wholly satisfactory, and even if all the experts were agreed on exactly what poetry is — and they are not — the lover of any particular poem can at most be sure only that there is poetry in that poem for him. He cannot be sure that anyone else will agree with him. Coleridge's definition is perhaps the simplest — 'the best words in the best order.' But I cannot imagine even Shakespeare himself, and even with a copy of 'Full fathom five' or 'When icicles hang by the wall' in his hand, avowing 'These are the best words in the best order'.

Poetry indeed is not only one of the rarest, but also one of the most curious of the things that men make. Age cannot wither it, nor custom stale its infinite variety, and yet it depends for its very life on being remembered; the mock may be taken for the real; and since language changes its meaning, and man's mind what it delights to feed on, as time goes on it may lose, and even gain, in beauty and significance. A good deal, for example, of what was acclaimed as poetry in the eighteenth century is nowadays dismissed as not poetry at all. In certain instances the contrary is true. The authors of 'Fair Daffodils, we weep to see', and of 'Cherry-Ripe', were almost completely forgotten for more than a century. Now, like Andrew Marvell and Richard Lovelace, they seem likely to remain safe in their niches among the English poets until English poets are no more. On the other hand, no poem was ever written, probably, that at the time of writing was not thought to be, or at least intended to be, poetry by the writer of it. And many tens of thousands of bitter disappointments there must have been! A poem, again, read when one is young may seem no poem at all when one is older. Still more often, a poem when one is older may take to itself a life-givingness, a music and a depth of meaning that one never perceived in it at all when one read it as a child. And some poems go on delicately changing all that they share with us whenever they are read over again, just as the flowers in a garden, with their light and shadow, their shapes, and the rain or dew or sunshine on them, change with every hour of a summer day.

¹ Extract from Walter de la Mare's introduction to Poems for Children (1930).

Yet another curious thing about poetry is the question of where it comes from. Not usually, it seems, does it spring up in the mind to-day out of what happened yesterday. The bee flies about among the thorn trees, but the nectar he sips must wait awhile before it becomes honey. It may be impossible for the writer of it to recollect when and where any particular poem was written, or the mood in which it was written. That, at any rate, is my own experience regarding most of the rhymes in this book. For this reason among others, perhaps, it is difficult to alter a piece of verse some years after it was written without making it essentially different from what it was first intended to be.

INDEX OF TITLES

A --- Apple Pie, 269 Accompaniment, The, 113 Alas, 295 Alas, Alack!, 263 All But Blind, 96 'All Hot', 50 All That's Past, 284 All the Fun, 32 All the Way, 283 Alulvan, 148 Andy Battle's and Nod's Song, 69 Andy Battle's Song, 69 Apple Charm, The, 26 Apple-Fall, 90 Arabia, 303 Araby, 74 As I did Rove, 293 As I Went to the Well-head, 148 Asleep, 256 As Lucy Went a-Walking, 175 A-Tishoo, 130 At Last, 289 At the Keyhole, 158 Away Go We, 31

Babel, 78
Bandog, The, 99
Barber's, The, 45
Bead Mat, The, 285
Bees' Song, The, 134
Berries, 137
Bewitched, 177
Bird, The, 143

Bird Set Free, The, 119
Bitter Waters, 165
Blackbirds, 265
Blindman's In, 264
Bluebells, 130
Bonum Omen, 67
Books, 227
Bookworm, The, 234
Border Bird, The, 124
Bread and Cherries, 44
Buck Buck, 264
Buckle, The, 130
Bunches of Grapes, 26

Cake and Sack, 192

Captain Lean, 62
Caw, 188
Changeling, The, 178
Chicken, 116
Child in the Story Awakes, The, 207
Child in the Story Goes to Bed, The, 206
Christening, The, 280
Coals, 45

Comb, The, 52 Come — Gone, 90 Comfort, 101 Coquette, The, 179 Corner, The, 212 Crazed, 169 Crumbs, 120 Cupboard, The, 46

Dame Hickory, 144 Daybreak, 19 Daybreak, 39 Dear Delight, 295 Divine Delight, 296 Done For, 104 Double, The, 283 Down-Adown-Derry, 132 Dreamland, 282 Dream-Song, 257 Ducks, 113
Ducks, 113
Dunce, The, 43 Dwarf, The, 139

Earth Folk, 96
Echo, 255
Echo, 287
Echoes, 66
Eden, 75
Eeka, Neeka, 243
Enchanted Hill, The, 155
Englishman, The, 72
Envoy, 77
Envoy, 297
Esmeralda, 47
Ever, 290

Faces, The, 268 Fairies Dancing, The, 131 Fairy-pedlar's Song, The, 142 Feast, The, 192 Feather, The, 120 Fiddlers, The, 37 Fire, The, 187 Five Eyes, 100 Five of Us, 20 Fleeting, The, 259 Flower, The, 92 Fly, The, 89 Fol Dol Do, 19 For Mopsa, 274 Four Brothers, The, 20 Full Circle, 285 Full Moon, 258

Funeral, The, 291

Gage, The, 105
Garden, The, 21
Gaze, Now, 295
Ghost Chase, The, 189
Glutton, The, 271
Goldfinch, A, 118
Gone, 62
Gone, 304
Grace, 116
Grey Wolf, The, 105
Grim, 271
Groat nor Tester, 249

Hapless, 141 Hare, The, 247 Harebell, The, 91 Hark!, 250 Harvest, 33 Haunted, 154 Haymaking, 265 Here To-day, 147 Hi!, 104 Hide and Seek, 250 High, 30 Holidays, 98 Holly, The, 93 Honey Robbers, The, 135 Horn, The, 131 Horseman, The, 85 Horseman, The, 244 House, The, 163 House of Dream, The, 258 Hunt, The, 22 Huntsmen, The, 190

I Can't Abear, 44
Ice, 195
I Dream of a Place, 301
I Met at Eve, 254
Innocency, 296
In the Dying of Daylight, 162
I Saw Three Witches, 172
Isle of Lone, The, 82

Jenny Wren, 118 Jenny Wren, 122 Jim Jay, 267 John Mouldy, 169

King David, 209 Kings, 79 Kings and Queens, 38 Kiph, 275 Known of Old, 302

Lamplighter, The, 51 Lantern, A, 249 Late, 245 Listen!, 203 Listeners, The, 154 Little Bird, The, 279 Little Creature, The, 176 Little Green Orchard, The, 149 Little Old Cupid, The, 273 Little Salamander, The, 244 Little Shop, The, 47 Lob-Lie-by-the-Fire, 270 Logs, 187 Lone, 148 Longlegs, 166 Lost Shoe, The, 79 Lovelocks, 52 Lullaby, 253 Lully, 252

Magnifying Glass, The, 245
Many a Mickle, 251
March Hares, 109
Mary, 28
Master Rabbit, 103
Me, 280
Melmillo, 181
Mermaids, 63
Miller and his Son, The, 205
Mima, 263
Misericordia!, 164
Miss Cherry, 271
Missel Thrush, 122
Miss T., 272

Mistletoe, 198
Mocking Fairy, The, 145
Mother Bird, The, 117
Mr. Alacadacca, 275
Mr. Punch, 31
Mrs. Earth, 94
Mrs. Macqueen, 240
Mulgar Journey Song, The, 80
Mulgars' Farewell, The, 61
Mulla-Mulgars' Journey Song, The,
294
Must and May, 213

Never, 143
Nicholas Nye, 98
Nicoletta, 27
Nightfall, 241
Night-swans, The, 242
No Bed, 33
Nobody Knows, 289
Nod, 239
No Jewel, 95
Noon, 235
Nothing, 159
NotI!, 43
Now All the Roads, 193
Nowel, 196

Now Silent Falls, 180

O Dear Me!, 92
Off the Ground, 23
Ogre, The, 167
Old House, The, 147
Old King, The, 210
Old Sailor, The, 71
Old Shellover, 244
Old Soldier, The, 59
Old Stone House, The, 164
Old Tailor, The, 158
O.M.O.R.E., The, 67
Orchard, The, 91
Over the Downs, 122

Pantomine, The, 202

Path, The, 293	Sea Boy, The, 66
Peak and Puke, 141	Secret, The, 197
Pedlar, The, 145	Seeds, 89
Penny Owing, The, 43	Sephina, 53
Phantom, The, 152	Shadow, The, 246
Phantom, The, 159	Shadows, 97
Picture, The, 71	She in thy Dreams Watch Over Thee!
Picture-book, The, 201	253
Pigs, 221	She's Me Forgot, 75
Pigs and the Charcoal-Burner, The, 108	Shellfish, The, 65
Pilgrim, The, 170	Shepherd, The, 30
Playmate, The, 286	Ship of Rio, The, 110
'Please to Remember', 50	Silly Sallie, 44
Pooh!, 40	Silver, 256
Pool in the Rock, The, 95	Silver Penny, The, 64
Poor Ben, Old Ben, 70	Singing and Dancing, 264
Poor Bird!, 279	Sleeper, The, 290
Poor Henry, 270	Sleeping Beauty, The, 208
Poor 'Miss 7', 55	Sleepyhead, 129
Portrait of a Warrior, The, 59	Snow, 185
Precious Stones, 95	Snowflake, The, 193
Prince, The, 111	Snow-man, The, 186
Promenade: 1880, The, 41	Solitude, 142
Puss, 101	Some One, 157
1 455, 101	Somewhere, 299
Oweld acc
Quack!, 266	Song of Englantment A 182
Quack-hunting, 115 Quartette, The, 197	Song of Enchantment, A, 180
Quartette, The, 197	Song of Finis, The, 236
Doin ann	Song of Seven, The, 298
Rain, 257	Song of Shadows, The, 304
Rainbow, The, 21	Song of Soldiers, The, 60
Raven's Tomb, The, 242	Song of the Mad Prince, The, 305
Reverie, 209	Song of the Secret, The, 297
Ride-by-Nights, The, 174	'Sooeep!', 268
Robin, The, 120	Stars, 260
Room, The. 46	Storm, The, 123
Ruin, The, 143	Stranger, The, 151
Callia an	Stranger, The, 153
Sallie, 27	Strangers, 286
Sam, 76	Summer Evening, 239
Sam's Three Wishes, 215	Supper, 102
Santa Claus, 196	Supper, 240
Scarecrow, The, 188	Supper, The, 190
Scribe, The, 125	'Suppose', 203

Tartary, 234 Tent, The, 266 Thames, 63 Then, 37 Then as Now, 210 There Sate Good Queen Bess, 38 There Was an Old Woman of Bumble Bhosey, 269 Thief at Robin's Castle, The, 224 Three Beggars, The, 136 Thrush, The, 117 Thunder, 29 Tillie, 214 Tiny Eenanennika, 119 Tired Tim, 247 Tit for Tat, 104 To Bed, 248 Tom's Angel, 292 Tom's Little Dog, 100 Trees, 92 Truants, The, 166 Two Deep Clear Eyes, 282

Under the Rose, 298 Universe, The, 255 Unstooping, 96 Up and Down, 39

Voice, The, 150

Wanderers, 259 Warbler, A, 119 Water Midden's Song, The, 77 Where, 85 Where, 301 Where?, 27 White, 185 Who Really?, 102 Why, 288 Widow's Weeds, A, 90 Wild are the Waves, 65 Will Ever?, 260 'Willie!', 288 Will-o'-the-Wisp, 157 Wind, The, 93 Window, The, 39 Winter, 194 Witch, The, 173 Won't, 42

Words, 29

INDEX OF FIRST LINES

As I was walking, 103
As I went to the well-head, 148

As long as I live, 280

A boy called Jack, as I've been told, A cock it was, in the stable yard, 221 'A fagot, a fagot, go fetch for the fire, son!', 105 A feather, a feather! —, 121 After the dark of night, 19 'Ahoy, and ahoy!', 178 Ah, would I were a pastrycook!, 274 A lane at the end of Old Pilgrim Street, 163 A lantern lighted me to bed, 249 A little after twilight, 153 A little sound —, 251 All but blind, 96 All the way from Adam, 283 All winter through I bow my head, 188 A mound in a corner, 289 Ann, Ann!, 263 Annie has run to the mill dam, 282 A poor old Widow in her weeds, 90 Applecumjockaby, blindfold eye!, 264 A screech across the sands, 31 As Ann came in one summer's day, 290 As I came out of Wiseman's Street, 43 As I did rove in blinded night, 293 As if a voice had called, I woke, 124 As I lay awake in the white moonlight, 129 As I mused by the hearthside, 101 As I sat in the gloaming, 150 As I sat musing by the frozen dyke, 60

As Lucy went a-walking one morning cold and fine, 175 A Song of Enchantment I sang me there, 180 As poor old Biddie, 143 A stick between his knees, sits Pat, 122 As we sailed out of London river, 67 At the edge of All the Ages, 236 A twangling harp for Mary, 205 A very, very old house I know -, 147 A wolf he pricks with eyes of fire, 190 Before I melt, 193 Behind the blinds I sit and watch, 39 Beside the blaze of forty fires, 271 Bill's on the hay-wain, 265 Black as a chimney is his face, 268 Black lacqueys at the wide-flung door, Bright sun, hot sun, oh, to be, 62 Brooding he stands, 49

As little Bess was walking home, 120

Call the cows home!, 29

Bubble, bubble, swim to see, 77

'Build me my tomb', the Raven said,

'Bunches of grapes,' says Timothy, 26

Bucca, bucca, quot sunt hic?, 264

'Candle, candle, burning clear', 258
Candle lank and lean and pale, 248
'Cherries, ripe cherries!', 44
Child, do you love the flower?, 297
Clapping her platter stood plump Bess, 116
'Come!' said Old Shellover, 244
Crackers, meringues, and pink blomonge—, 192

Dainty Miss Apathy, 40
'Dame Hickory, Dame Hickory', 144
Dark-browed Sailor, tell me now, 74
Dark, dark this mind, if ever in vain it rove, 296
Dear Reader, prythee, stay and look, 201
Dobbin's in the stable, pigs are in sty—, 98
Do diddle di do, 267
Down-adown-derry, 132
Down the Hill of Ludgate, 39

Eeka, Neeka, Leeka, Lee —, 243
Eight Henries, One Mary, 38
Ere my heart beats too coldly and faintly, 166
Even earlier yet this listening thrush, 117
Ever, ever, 290

Far are the shades of Arabia, 303
Far away, and long ago —, 298
Far away in Nanga-noon, 61
Few and faint a bird's small notes, 235
First there were two of us, then there were three of us, 123
'Five of us small merry ones', 20
Fly kite!, 30
Fol, dol, do, and a south wind ablowing O, 19
For every sip the Hen says grace, 116
From height of noon, remote and still, 155
From his cradle in the glamourie, 141

From out the wood I watched them shine, 154

Gaze, now, thy fill, beguiling face, 295
Gold locks, and black locks, 45
Gone the snowdrop—comes the crocus, 90
Good News to tell!, 212
Green mistletoe!, 194
'Grill me some bones', said the Cobbler, 158

Hapless, hapless, I must be, 141 Hark! is that a horn I hear?, 131 Has anyhody seen my Mopser?, 99 Hast thou, in fancy, trodden where lie?, 196 Have you been catching of fish, Tom Noddy?, 104 Here am I, 50 Here are crocuses, white, gold, grey!, Here I saw the mist roll inland, 65 Here is a sea-legged sailor, 71 Here's all the fun of the Fair! Come buy!, 32 Here to-day and gone to-morrow, Her pinched grey body, 102 Hide and seek, says the Wind, 250 Hi! handsome hunting man, 104 His brow is seamed with line and scar, 59 Hithery, hethery - I love best, 20 Ho, ho, ho, hol, 188 Holly dark: pale Mistletoe ---, 196 Houses! houses! - Oh, I know, 301 How cool a tent!, 266 How I love the rhymes that I can dance to, sing to ---, 29 How large unto the tiny fly, 89

I can't abear a Butcher, 44

I curtseyed to the dovecote, 283 'I dream, and I dream ...', 302 I dream of a place where I long to live always, 301 If I were Lord of Tartary, 234 If to the heavens you lift your eyes, 160 I had a silver buckle, 130 I have heard a lady this night, 177 I heard a horseman, 244 I heard a little child beneath the stars, I heard along the early hills, 131 I know a little cupboard, 46 I know a pool where nightshade preens, I met a sailor in the woods, 72 I met at eve the Prince of Sleep, 254 'I'm thinking and thinking', said old Sam Shore, 215 'I'm tired — oh, tired of books', said Jack, 234 In a dense wood, a drear wood, 165 In April, when these orchards blow, 265 In drowsy fit, 45 In Hans' old mill his three black cats, In Munza a Mulgar once lived alone, In the black furrow of a field, 247 In the clear summer sunshine, hour by hour, 91 In the dying of the daylight —, 162 In the nook of a wood where a pool freshed with dew, 151 In the sedge a tiny song, 119 In this grave picture mortal Man may see, 296 In this water, clear as air, 95 I plucked an apple, sleek and red, 26 I prythee, Nurse, come smooth my hair, 206 I saw the lovely arch, 21

I saw three witches, 172
Is it an abbey that I see?, 293
'Is there anybody there?' said the Traveller, 154
I spied John Mouldy in his cellar, 169
I supped where bloomed the red, red rose, 240
It's a very odd thing, 272
I watched the Lady Caroline, 52
I woke in the swimming dark, 257
I wonder if from Noah's Ark, 75

Jemima is my name, 263

Keep me a crust, 270 King Canute sat down by the sea, 79 King David was a sorrowful man, 209

Lady Jane, O Lady Jane!, 105
Lapped in the light and heat of noon,
91
Leagues, leagues over, 63
Listen, I who love thee well, 92
Little Pollie Pillikins, 269
Lone and alone she lies, 55
Longlegs — he yelled 'Coo-ee!', 166
Long — long is Time, though books be brief, 77
Loud roared the flames, 187
Low on his fours the Lion, 96

Me who have sailed, 75
Misericordia! Weep with me, 164
Monkeys in a forest, 85
Mr. Alacadacca's, 275
Mrs. Earth makes silver black, 94
Must and May they were two half-brothers, 213
My dear Daddie bought a mansion, 279
My little Charles is afraid of the dark, 250
My mother sate me at her glass, 52

Mary! Mary! Mary!, 28

My Uncle Ben, who's been, 275

Nay, ninny, shut those sleepy eyes, 252
Nine feat fiddlers had good Queen Bess, 37
No bed! no bed! we shouted, 33
Nobody, nobody told me, 298
No breath of wind, 185
No groat for a supper, 249
No jewel from the rock, 95
No marvel, Sweet, you clap your wings, 119

No one was in the fields, 292
Nothing on the grey roof, nothing on the brown, 164

Now all the roads to London Town, 193 'Now, Jinnie, my dear, to the dwarf be off', 139

Now silent falls the clacking mill, 180

Of all the birds that rove and sing, 118
Of all the trees in England, 92
O for a moon to light me home!, 252
Often I've heard the Wind sigh, 289

Often I ve neard the Wind sigh, 289
Of your 'nevolent nature, 142
Oh, my pretty Nicoletta, 27

Old Ben Bailey, 104

Old King Caraway, 192

Old Tillie Turveycombe, 214

Once and there was a young sailor, yeo ho!, 69 Once — once I loved, 271

Once was a Miller, and he would say,

185

One moment take thy rest, 295 One night as Dick lay fast asleep, 258 One, two, three, 31

Open your eyes! . . . Now, look, and see!, 197

Out of the East a hurricane, 62

Peter went—and nobody there—, 66 Plump Mrs. Brown, we may suppose,

Poor bird!-, 279

Poor blind Tam, the beggar man, 43 Poor little Lucy, 79

Poor tired Tim! It's sad for him, 247 Poppy, cornflower, nid-nod wheat,

Pot on the mantel; picture; clock, 46

Pray, pity the poor glutton! —, 271 Puss loves man's winter fire, 101

Quiet your faces; be crossed every thumb, 203

Rosy the blossom that breaks in May, 90
Ruhy amethyst emerald diamond

Ruby, amethyst, emerald, diamond, 95

'Sailorman, I'll give to you', 64
See Master Humphrey, with his mother, 41

See, Master Proud-Face!, 42

See, now, a child must this way come —, 113

Seven sweet notes, 255

'Shall we help you with your bundle?'

She in thy dreams watch over thee!, 253

Shrill rang the squeak in the empty house, 148

Silly Sallie! Silly Sallie!, 44

Sister with sister, dark and fair, 256 Sitting under the mistletoe, 198

Sleep, sleep, thou lovely one!, 253 Slowly, silently, now the moon, 256 'Sneeze, Pretty: sneeze, Dainty,' 130

Softly along the road of evening, 239 Some one came knocking, 157

Some one is always sitting there, 149

Sunlight, moonlight, 257 'Suppose . . . and suppose that a wild little Horse of Magic', 203 Sweep thy faint strings, Musician, 304 Sweet Peridarchus was a Prince, 111 'Take me, or leave me - I'm not thine', 143 Tallyho! Tallyho!, 22 That Day, that Day, that Gentle Day, That farthing bird, J. Wren, 122 That one, 294 That wooden hive between the trees, The bells chime clear, 280 'The best way to go', said my muffledup friend, 109 The cat she walks on padded claws, 96 The curtains of the solemn night, 39 The duck is whiter than whey is, 266 The horse in the field, 97 The last light fails - that shallow pool of day!, 241 The late wind failed, high on the hill, The light of dawn rose on my dreams, The man in the hat (whom you see in the picture), 113 The North Wind sighed, 195 The old Pig said to the little pigs, The sad bells sound, 286 The sandy cat by the Farmer's chair, The scent of bramble fills the air, 208 The sea laments, 66 The sea washes England, 78 The seeds I sowed —, 89 The sturdiest of forest trees, 93 The sun is clear of bird and cloud, 148 The Sweep has such a sooty face, 268 The Whistler on the whistle, 47

The wind - yes, I hear it - goes wandering by, 93 Then as Now; and Now as Then, 210 There came an old sailor, 71 There came an Old Soldier to my door, 59 There came a Pedlar to an evening house, 145 There came a Thief one night to Robin's Castle, 224 There flows a wonderful water, 63 There sate Good Queen Bess, oh, 38 There was a Horseman rode so fast. 85 There was an old woman, 137 There was an old Woman of Bumble Bhosey ---, 269 There was a ship of Rio, 110 There was once an old Tailor of Hickery Mo, 158 There were two Fairies, Gimmel and Mel, 135 They dressed us up in black, 291 Thick in its glass, 270 This feather-soft creature, 118 Thistle and darnel and dock grew there, This tree, by April wreathed in flowers, Thousandz of thornz there be, 134 Three and thirty birds there stood, Three dwarfs there were which lived in an isle, 82 Three jolly Farmers, 23 Three jolly gentlemen, 190 Three small men in a small house, 245 Through the green twilight of a hedge, Tiny Eenanennika, 119 'Tis moonlight on Trebarwith Sands, 167 'Tis silence on the enchanted lake, 242 'Tis years fourscore, 67

CCL. Ph. No. 640.2

Mother, 283

/hen Winter's o'er, the Bear one more, 102

Where is beauty?, 297

'Where, Oh where is Alice Bates?'

Where's the Queen of Sheba?, 304 Where the bluebells and the wind are, 130

'Who called?' I said, and the words,

Who said, 'Peacock Pie?', 305
Whsst, and away, and over the green,

Why does he still keep ticking?, 43
'Why do you weep, Mother? Why do you weep?', 288

Wide are the meadows of night, 25 Wi' decks awas', 70

Wild are the waves when the wind blows, 65

Will he ever be weary of wandering?, 260

Willie, Willie!, 288 Will-o'-the-Wisp, 157

Wilt thou never come again, 152

'Wish! and it's thine!' the changeling piped, 142

With glass like a bull's-eye, 240 With this round glass, 245

Woke — the old King of Cumberland,

'Won't you look out of your window, Mrs. Gill?', 145

Would you tell me the way to Somewhere?, 299

Yearn thou may'st, 179
You little birds, I bring my crumb120
Youngling fair, and dear delight

'Twas autumn daybreak gold and wild, 136 'Twas a very small garden, 273

Twenty, forty, sixty, eighty, 37
Twinkum, twankum, twirlum and twitch —, 176

Two deep clear eyes, 282

AM . A

Up on their brooms the Witches stream, 174 'Upstairs in the large closet, child', 159

Very old are the woods, 284 Voice without a body, 69

Weary went the old Witch, 173
Weep no more, nor grieve, nor sigh,
286

We had climbed the last steep flight of stairs, 285

Were those fine horses once white mice, 202

What lovely things, 125

What shape is this in cowl of snow?, 186

What sight is this? . . . On dazzling snow, 189

When evening's darkening azure, 115 When from the brittle ice the fields, 122

When I go free, 244

When I was out one morning, 30
When Sallie with her pitcher goes

When Sallie with her pitcher goes, 27 When Sam goes back in memory, 76 When slim Sophia mounts her horse,

209

When the last colours of the day, 143 When the last of gloaming's gone, 246

295